The Cohasset Garden Club, member of the Garden Club of America, has observed Arbor Day with the Osgood School for over 20 years. In this time, many trees and shrubs have been planted.

May 26, as has been done for the past several years, more honeysuckle (lonicera heckrotti) were planted to help cover the metal fencing. This is a very pleasant, brief, and happy occasion.

Sarah Pease of the Cohasset Garden Club talked to students about the club's donation of five honeysuckle bushes to the school in honor of Arbor Day.

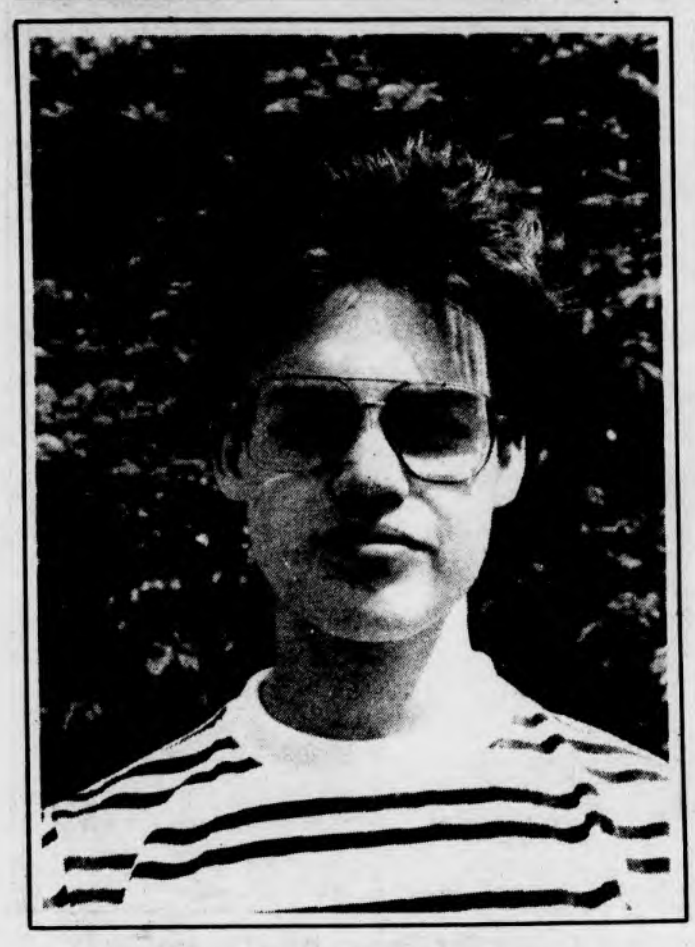
Katie Murphy and Kristin Ellinger boogied the night away during Tuesday night's prom.

Jennifer Martin and Pat Mulligan obviously enjoyed the company at their senior prom.

Amy Sheppard and Jason Cameron had a wild time during Tuesday night's senior class prom.

Some seniors were in a more sophisticated and subdued frame of mind, including (l to r): Sonya Butler, Jon Ace, Shaeed Hall and Tesha Wallace-Hall.



Memories of a night on the town for the Class of '89

The Pembroke Country Club was filled with smiles and good friends as the seniors shared one of their last nights together as the Class of '89.

CHS students of the month for April

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Alexandra Redfield and Jason Hunter were named students of the month for April at Cohasset Junior-Senior High School.

Redfield was nominated by teacher Colleen Lucas.

"Allie has used her senior year as a time of learning and growing (an unusual senior activity!)," said Lucas.

"She has taken up two musical instruments - the French horn and mellophone and performed in several C.H.S. concerts.

"Her art work has been exhibited in several shows, including the Boston Globe Scholastic Art Award Show, the Hingham Art Show and the Patriot Ledger Art Show.

"She has taken an active role in the senior project, enthusiastically assisting in the art and music programs at the two elementary schools."

Lucas added that Redfield holds a part-time job, makes honor roll and exceeds in many activities.

"She is a true individual and it is with pleasure that I nominate her for student of the month for April."

Hunter, a ninth grader, was nominated by teachers Dr. John Packard, Paul Narkiewicz and Carolyn Gray.

Packard cited Hunter's "volunteer efforts as an audio visual aide."

"Despite having no free periods, he finds time to do work on television productions of career speakers and even did a single-handed studio production of an evening public meeting held by the school committee," said Packard.

"Jason's expertise with computers has been helpful in setting up our listing and labeling program for videotapes of instructional materials.

"He is to be congratulated for his efficient and willing contributions, while keeping up a high honors academic program."

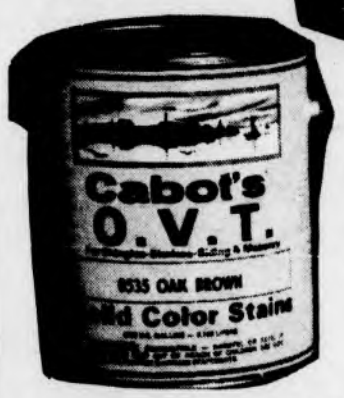
In September, the language laboratory technician from the previous year resigned, according to Narkiewicz and Gray.

"The language department needed a student who would be dependable and conscientious as well as possess the technical know-how to operate the laboratory," they said.

"We chose Jason, who has been our technician for the past nine months.

"He visits each modern language teacher during the homeroom period to take their order and sets the requested tapes on the console.

"These tapes are used by classes going to the lab.



"He is very reliable and keeps all the teachers informed of changes of plans so that the lab can be fully utilized."

Band practice

Monday, June 5, there will be a special rehearsal for all 4th grade band members after school from 2:20 - 3:10 p.m. Music: The Victors March, Frere Jacques.

Reminder — the spring concert is June 8. The concert begins at 7:30 p.m.

Graduation Tea June 4

The Junior class of CHS will sponsor a "Graduation Tea" in honor of the graduating seniors. The tea will be held June 4 at the Music Circus immediately following the graduation.

CHS community forum

The Cohasset Public School's Health Education Department is sponsoring a school and community forum at Cohasset High School Tuesday evening June 6, at 7:30.

The purpose of the forum is: 1) to alert parents to the extent of the drug problem amongst Jr. and Sr. high school students in Cohasset; 2) to review some basic prevention and intervention strategies for parents and the community to consider; 3) to review educational goals and objectives and outline the plans that the Cohasset Schools have for the future; and 4) to give parents an opportunity to voice their concerns and opinions, and to brainstorm about strategies which may assist in securing a safe and healthy summer for the young people of Cohasset.

Health Education Coordinator Michael Gill will facilitate the program. All interested citizens are welcome!

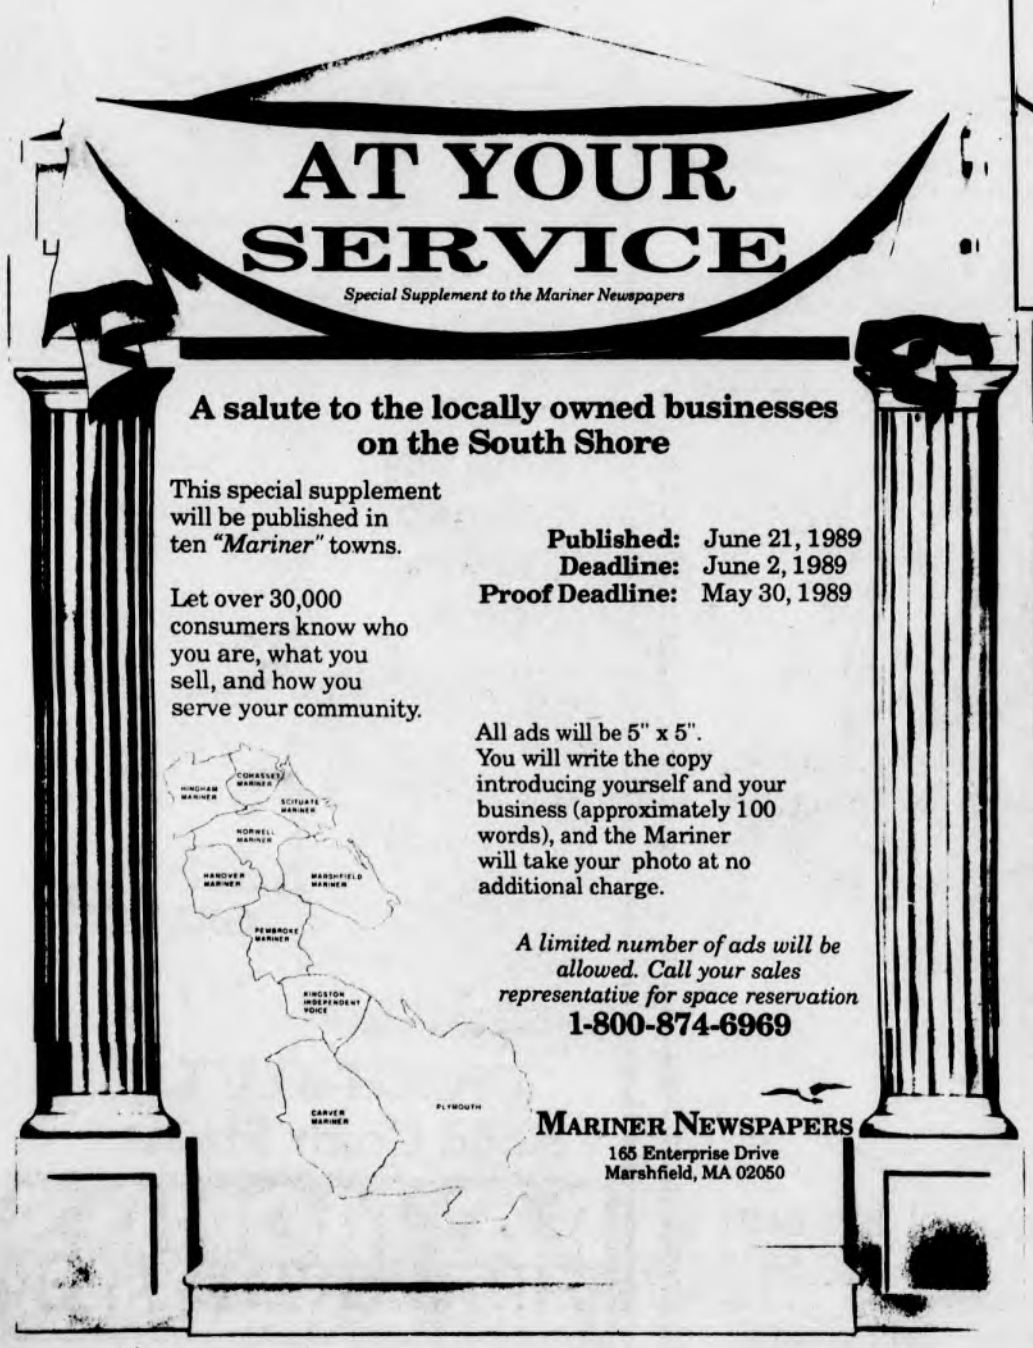
Japanese Homestay Program

Japanese students are returning to Cohasset this summer: July 15 - August 14. Come and join the program! Host a student, find out about Japan first-hand and enjoy the fun of exchange. Students attend classes each day and family members are welcome to join outings and afternoon activities. Sponsorship is through the non-profit educational exchange organization — Cultural Homestay Institute. Host families are eligible for trips to Japan. For information call Margot Cheel (9184) or Patti Durkin (2616).

Junior Olympic Champion

Dawn Meehan, a sixth grade student at the Deer Hill School, is the New England Junior Olympic Champion in both solo & figures event. This will be Dawn's third year as New England's age group champion in synchronized swimming.

Dawn has competed in the National Junior Olympics at Syracuse University. She won two Gold Medals at Darien Conn. Dawn was the special guest performer in the Boston Dolphin Swim Show recently. She has volunteered her time to help inner city girls participate in this olympic sport. In July, she will compete in the Bay State Games.



Creativity workshops

Make this a creative summer for your child. The Children's Summer Creativity Workshops, a special series of art classes has openings for young artists ages 9 to 13.

These workshops will be held on Wednesday evenings from 7 to 9 p.m..

In this program there will be many opportunities to stretch the creative process through the use of varied art experiences. The main emphasis will be on learning how to draw more realistically with special attention to the art of seeing. Each childs own unique creativity will be encouraged. Classes are kept small to provide individual instruction.

To insure placement pre-paid registration is required. For more information call instructor Lynn Rizzotto at 749-2453.

Riley performs personal best at track tourney

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

Cohasset's Nancy Riley threw three feet longer than her personal best on her final attempt in the shot put, winning the event at 112' 1" at the South Shore Principals Class B Girls' Championship Track Meet May 20.

Norwell captured the Class B title by scoring an impressive 132 points. In fact, it was Norwell's eighth straight South Shore Principals crown.

Cohasset finished seventh with 22 points.

The Skippers also received two third-place spots from Allison James (100 meters) and Laura Andrews (two-mile).

Debbie Morris scored the winning run on a wild pitch in the bottom of the sixth inning to give Hanover a 14-13, South Shore League softball victory over Cohasset May 16.

The Indians (5-6) were paced by captain Anne Monti, who went three-for-five with a home run, a triple, five runs batted in and three runs scored.

Winning pitcher Kerri Grant, who pitched four-hit ball from the fourth inning on, had two hits and an RBI.

Hanover scored seven runs in the fourth inning, keyed by RBI singles from Monti, Grant and Jen Lynch.

Cohasset (1-9) tied it, 13-13, on Kristen Ellinger's two-run single in the fifth. Kara Mannion and Barbara Lagrotteria each had a hit and scored three runs. Alison Ludlow singled and scored twice.

Chrissy Smith worked the first three innings for Hanover, allowing five earned runs on three hits. She struck out seven but walked nine.

Reliever-turned starter Bobby Payzant won his first game with a route-going, 11-strikeout performance, leading Carver (4-4 league, 7-8 overall) to a 13-6, South Shore League baseball victory over Cohasset May 18.

Payzant and Scott Holmes each had two hits and a

Two youth soccer teams lead division play

Two Cohasset youth soccer teams continued to lead their divisions through the ninth week of Coastal League play, while the Under 19 Boys, playing without star goalkeeper Joel Reidy, rallied to tie Hanover 3-3.

Girls' Under 12-1 tied Hanover 1-1 for the second time in their otherwise unblemished season, and remain in first place by a point. "We were down 1-0 with a couple of minutes left," reported coach Nino D'Urso, "when Martina Snyder scored on a direct free kick from 10 yards outside the penalty area."

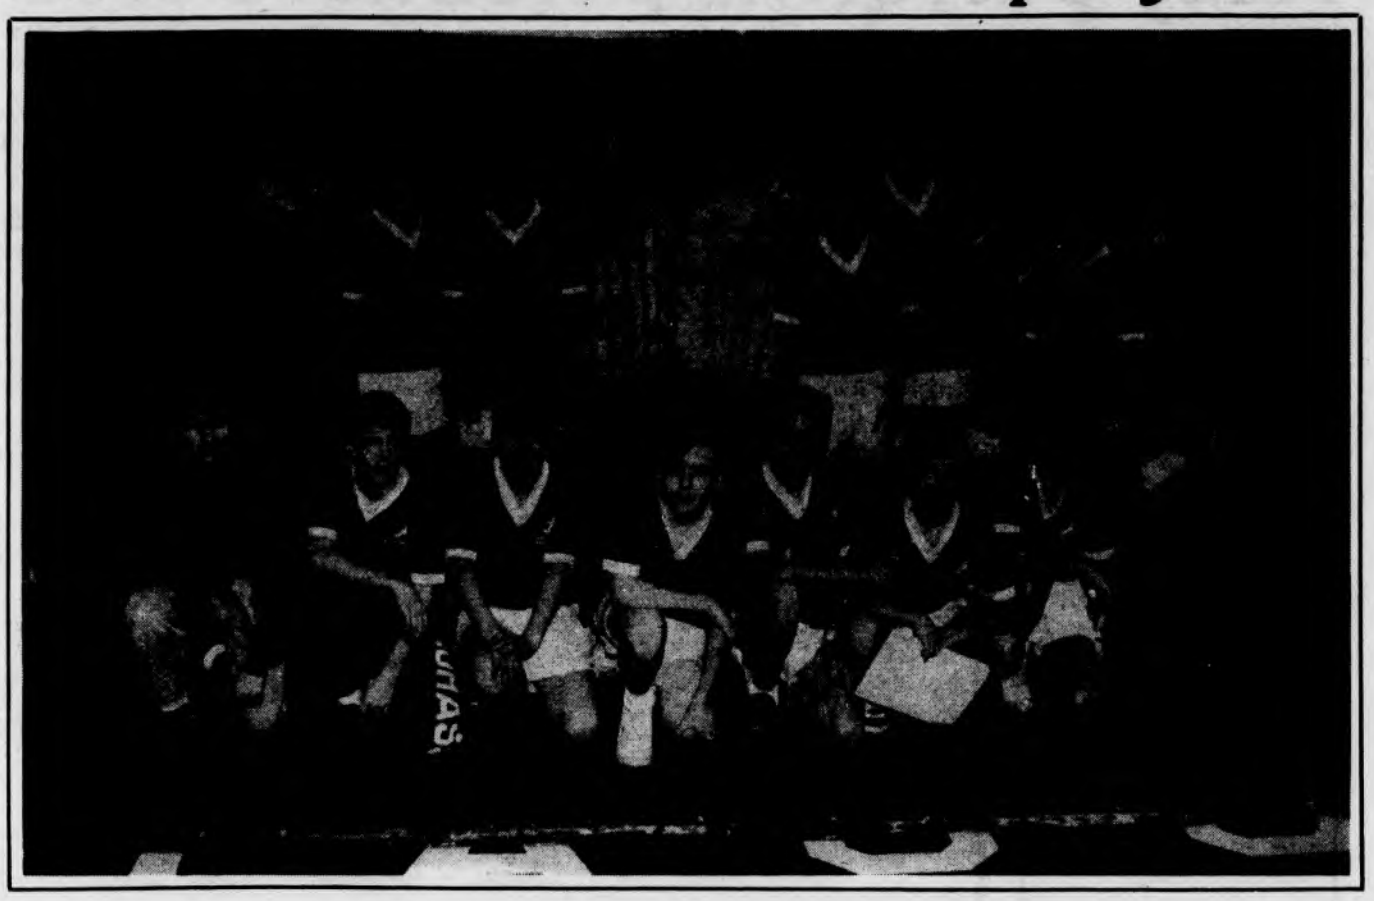
Boys' Under 10-1 was rained out by the monsoonlike squall on Saturday afternoon, and holds first place in their group with a makeup game against Pembroke this weekend. Under 19 boys, behind the goaltending of substitute Brian Shultz, tied Hanover on goals by Jim Reidy, Jay Staunton and Matt Beggan.

In other boys' play:

Under 10-2 beat Kingston 4-0 on two goals by Matt Verrochi, and single goals by John Kasameyer and Ted Goff.

Under 12-1 tied Norwell 2-2 on goals by Ben Manning and Ryan Freeman. Tom Grecco's assists sparked coach Buck Redfield's offense, while Robin Ordelheide and Anthony Wigmore anchored the defense. Under 12-2 won by forfeit over Halifax, and lost to Kingston 6-1, playing with just eight players. Joe Magner scored his third goal of the season, while Jamie Kondrat and Mike Kasameyer led the defense. Under 12-3 fell to Carver 5-2, despite goals by Matt Conley and Matt O'Connor. The previous week 12-3 had notched a 7-0 win over Middleboro, with scores from Matt Belson (two), Matt Rossi, Matt O'Connor, Matt Conley, and Ryan Sawchuk.

Under 14-1 tied powerful Norwell 0-0, with splendid goalkeeping by Chris Goodman. Coach Steve Endris' defense was sparked by Matt Gromada, Marc Mercurio, Max Nivaud and Dan Baird. 14-2, starting its contest against Duxbury with just seven players, battled to a close 3-1 loss. Andrew Pozatek scored, and relieved starting goalkeeper David Nofnagel in the second half. Jeremiah Stevenson was outstanding for the entire contest.



In other girls' play:

Under 10-2 lost to Plymouth 4-0, playing with just eight players. Goalkeeper Alia Afshar was outstanding, stopping a penalty kick, and got good support from Hannah Beggan, Trish Peterson, Courtney Brown, and Alex D'Urso.

Under 12-2 played two different Plymouth squads, losing 4-0 on Saturday, and 4-1 Sunday. "Both teams were great," said coach Sandy Theriault, "and were leading their respective divisions." Goalkeeper Caroline Delima played very well on Saturday, and both Jennifer Ripley and Erin Devine turned in consistent efforts in that game. On Sunday, Delima scored, and Megan McNamara and Chloe Chittick played their best games of the season. The defense was led by Rory Winters and Christine Burns.

Under 12-3 lost to Pembroke 6-2, getting goals from Heather Proctor and Kelley O'Donnell. Halfback Cathy Mattinger and Monique Devoe also played well.

Under 19 won by forfeit over Hingham, while Under 14-1 fell to Pembroke.

Individual performances highlight tourney

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

Despite a cold, windswept rain that made conditions miserable, the Norwell High School girls' track team had an easier time against the inclement weather, blowing past second-place and host Weston, 87-43, to earn their fifth straight Eastern Mass. Class D championship title.

Although Cohasset finished near the bottom of the 25-school, team-total category, the Skippers received fine individual performances from Alyson James, who placed fourth in the 100-yard dash with a time of 12.8 seconds, Laura Andrews, a sixth-place finish in the two-mile (13:22.3) and Nancy Riley sixth in the discus (99'3").

Michelle Murray's four hits and two runs batted in and Chrisanne Hazen's two hits and two RBI, helping visiting Abington power its way to a 19-10, South Shore League victory over Cohasset May 23.

Karen Disharoon tossed a five-hitter and struck out two, earning the victory for Abington.

The Green Wave broke open an 8-7 game with 10 runs in the fifth inning.

Cohasset's Allison Ludlow had a two-run double in the losing effort.

Belmont Hill (37 points) edged Boston College High (48) and Milton Academy (74) to win its fourth straight state sailing championship at M.I.T. May 24.

Cohasset was sixth, Thayer Academy seventh and Hingham tied for eighth in the two-day, 14-school regatta.

Peter Meroth and Ranna Prasad, playing at second and third singles, remained undefeated at 14-0 as Abington (1302) took a South Shore League boys tennis match, 4-1, over Cohasset at home May 23.

SCORING RESULTS

Singles:
1. Pat Milligan (C) defeated Scott Kesner (Abington) 6-2, 6-3.
2. Meroth (A) d. Joel Reidy (C), 6-1, 6-1.
3. Prasad (A) d. Frank Willshire (C), 6-1, 6-2.

Doubles:
1. Peter Watters and Jim Donnelly (A) d. John Brister and Tim Brister (C), 6-4, 6-0.
2. Paul Kopp and Nitkin Sharma (A) d. Pat Serbier and Doug Drysdale (C), 6-1, 6-4.

Track tourney highlights . . .

run batted in for Carver and Chris Vissa collected two hits and three RBI.

Evan Spencer hit a two-run homer for Cohasset (1-11, 0-7 league), while teammate Jim Gallagher went three-for-four.

Ned Chase and Matt Marks each scored three goals and Travis Coley made seven saves in net, leading Cohasset High School boys' lacrosse team to a 8-3 victory over Boston College High May 19.

Jim Reidy and John Smith also scored for the Skippers, who finished their first varsity season (4-3) under head coach Ken Ekberg and assistant Terry Kahn.

Third singles Kathleen Conroy rallied for a three-set victory to boost visiting Cohasset over Hanover, 3-2, in SSL girls' tennis action May 16.

Scoring results

Singles: 1. Michelle Massa (Cohasset) defeated Katie Morris (Hanover), 6-1, 6-0; 2. Stacey Morris (H) d. Nicole Bieryla (C), 6-3, 6-0; 3. Conroy (C) d. Alyssa Ganong (H), 4-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Doubles: 1. Michelle Coughlin and Shannon Mullare (H) d. Ellen Schramm and Sophie Redfield (C), 6-3, 6-4; 2. Rebecca Jordan and Corrine Minnar (C) d. Joan Collins and Marissa Shaw (H), 6-3, 6-1.

Cohasset's Linc Marsac has been named to the Newton Yellow Cab AAU Junion Olympic basketball team. His club will compete in the 16-under national tournament at the University of Kentucky, July 7-15.

Cohasset High coach Arnie Reppucci is the team's head coach. Matt Salerno of Cohasset is one of his assistants.

Obituaries

Lorraine Ordway

A private funeral service was held in Florida for Lorraine (Gonsalves) Ordway, 66, of Lady Lake, Fla, formerly of Cohasset, who died May 20, at the Leesburgh Regional Medical Center.

Mrs. Ordway was a retired private secretary.

Born in Cohasset, she attended Cohasset schools and Pierce Secretarial School, Boston.

She was also a former resident of Somerset.

Mrs. Ordway leaves her husband, Walter Ordway; a son, Wayne Ordway of Lady Lake; a daughter, Irene Le Duc of Ohio; three sisters, Ruth White and Janet Livingston, both of Cohasset; and Carolyn Beagle of Virginia; and two grandsons.

She was the mother of the late Joan Ordway.

Arrangements were made by the Beyers Funeral Home, Leesburgh.

Julia Parker

A graveside service was conducted May 12 in Forsyth City Cemetery, Ga., for Julia (Maynard) Parker, 89, of Cohasset, who died May 9 in South Shore Hospital, Weymouth, after a brief illness.

Mrs. Parker was a teacher in the Asheville, N.C., public schools for 30 years.

Born and raised in Forsyth, Ga., she lived in Asheville for 50 years before she moved to Cohasset 14 years ago.

She was a graduate of the former Bessie Tift College in Forsyth.

Wife of the late architect Charles N. Parker, she is survived by a daughter, Annette Parker Sechen of Cohasset; and three grandchildren, Julia Anne Sechen, George M. Sechen and Mark C. Sechen, all of Cohasset.

Arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home of Norwell and Cohasset.

Anna Werme

A memorial service was held May 13 at Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., for Anna B. (Moberg) Werme, 78, of Cohasset, who died May 10 at South Shore Hospital, South Weymouth, after a long illness.

Burial was private.

Mrs. Werme was a member of Sutton Congregational Church, Sutton.

Born in Worcester, she lived in Sutton before she moved to Cohasset last year.

She was a member of Bancroft Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star.

Wife of the late Alton O. Werme, she leaves a daughter, Alma K. Ekberg of Cohasset; two brothers, Carl Moberg of Worcester and Henry Moberg of New Port Richey, Fla.; and a granddaughter, Karen Ekberg of Watertown.

Arrangements were by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

First Parish will shelter the homeless

The Parish House of First Parish Church is home to a church office, church school and a host of community meetings.

And by the end of the year, it could be a temporary home for a family in crisis as well.

At their annual meeting recently, church members voted to proceed with plans to make alterations to the parish house on N. Main St. for a two-room shelter.

They will also seek a building permit for the housing planned for the second floor of the building.

"It's not as if someone can move in next week," said the Rev. Edward Atkinson, First Parish pastor.

"But we will be preparing the space to provide housing for a family in crisis," he said.

"The second floor is quiet and private, and it should work out nicely."

The program will be undertaken in cooperation with the Homeshare Organization in Hingham.

About $7,000, already allocated at the church's annual meeting, will be needed to set up a kitchenette, redo the existing lavatory and add a shower, he said.

"We hope it will be a very nice little place for someone.

"We want to have something that is comfortable and clean and with everything working well."

At least one local tradesman has volunteered to help with the alterations, according to Rev. Atkinson.

He stressed that the shelter will not be an apartment, and rent will not be charged.

"People will be staying there as our guests," he said.

"We are not going into the landlord business.

"We are providing a shelter for people in crisis."

Guests may stay for up to three months, he said.

Rev. Atkinson said he talked with Homeshare director Dorothy Newell about the program.

"She thought we might have the opportunity to create a living space up stairs," he said.

"There is not a whole lot that we need to do."

Newell said she was very pleased with plans for the temporary shelter.

"It's super, really wonderful," she said.

According to Newell, such cities and towns as Lawsuit against town is dismissed

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

A $2.5 million lawsuit against the sewer commission, its secretary, and the town has been thrown out of court.

Former sewer plant superintendent Manuel Salvador filed a lawsuit against the sewer commission and secretary Patricia Walsh in April, 1988, alleging he was wrongfully terminated from his employment the previous year. He named the officials serving on the commission at that time, Charles DeSantis, Ted Guild, and Raimond Vanderweil, individually within the lawsuit, along with their secretary.

Salvador was superintendent of the treatment plant for 16 years until he was suspended by the commission in January, 1987. The commission later voted to terminate the position and hired a private consulting firm, York Water Consultants, to manage the plant.

In a decision handed down this week by Norfolk

Judge insists town issue permit for 3A plaza

A superior court judge has ordered the town to issue a building permit for phase two of Cohasset Plaza.

Judge Roger J. Donahue clarified an order he made to the planning board March 24, in which he advised the town to issue a building permit for the Rte. 3A plaza.

In his June 2 decision, handed down one day after a hearing in Norfolk County Superior Court, Judge Donahue ordered the building inspector to immediately issue a permit to developer Donald Staszko.

The planning board was scheduled to discuss the matter at its meeting Wednesday, June 7. Developer Staszko expected by Thursday morning a building permit would be waiting for him at town hall. Construction of the 10-to-12-store Cohasset Plaza is expected to begin immediately, he noted.

In an order issued March 24, Judge Donahue said the plaza site plan, presented in August, 1988, appears to conform to the zoning bylaw of the town. He remanded the plan back to the town for final approval. However, the planning board had not taken that action.

Staszko and his attorney, Charles Humphreys, brought the case back to court for a final hearing. The following day Judge Donahue issued his decision in favor of the plaintiff.

The planning board originally voted on the site plan in August, 1988. The decision ended in a 2-2 tie, which constituted no action, according to Staszko's attorney. Since the legal time limitation had expired, Humphreys argued that the case should be approved. In turn, the planning board

Ballot may have 6 override votes

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Voters could find six override questions on the June 28 ballot, including two for general operating expenses and one for the expansion and renovation of Milliken/Lillard Field.

The other questions would involve a new cemetery for Cohasset, defibrillator for the town-run ambulance, and a three-year police contract.

Selectmen are scheduled to meet to decide which articles from town meeting will appear on the ballot and in what form.

"My feeling is that everything that was appropriated at town meeting will appear on the ballot," said Jane Goedecke, advisory committee chairman.

"The only exception might be the defibrillator since it is such a small amount ($7,500)," said Goedecke.

If it did appear on the ballot, it would be a capital outlay exclusion item, she said, and would be a one-time expense in 1990.

A defibrillator is a life-saving piece of equipment which is used to shock the heart into a regular pattern.

One of the general operating budget questions would be for $303,825 which was overwhelmingly supported at the May 31 session of town meeting.

The advisory committee had recommended a $203,000 override to partially fund town budgets.

But that figure was amended by the school committee which added another $100,000.

A second general operating budget question, suggested by selectman Martha Gjesteby, could be for the advisory committee's recommendation of $203,000.

Another override question would be to underwrite funding of $64,348.66 for a three-year police contract.

Debt exclusion questions could include $280,000

Cohasset's week

Planning board office hours

The Planning board office will be open Monday to Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., beginning June 5, according to a memo to all departments.

'Incensed' at override vote

Estelle White of Forest Ave. has written to selectman chairman Burt Pratt that she is "incensed" about the town meeting vote requiring an override of Proposition 2 1/2.

"I naturally assumed that the ballot box settled the issue for good, and that our town officials would abide by that decision," said White.

"That is as it should be.

"Let the various departments live within a budget as we taxpayers do in our own lives and let them accept the fact that we do not want to override 2 1/2 and respect our wishes.

"The homeowners have to be protected and some other ways have to be found to pay for town government other than property taxes," said White.

"The vote is always the fairest way to decide issues, not groups or individuals who have agendas of their own.

"We have voted - let them accept it!"

'Thanks' for the help

The chief operator of the Cohasset Waste Water Treatment Plant has thanked the Cohasset Water and Highway Departments for their help in repairing a broken water main under the driving leading to the plant at 43 Elm St. last month.

"The main is especially vital for the plant operation," said Laurence E. McInnis, chief operator, in May 31 letters.

"Water department employee Mark Kelly not only operated the back hoe, but also hand shoveled and helped by operating the water valves," said McInnis.

"Your employee Richard "Chip" Muncey also hand shoveled and operated the valves.

"The water department has also shown great cooperation with the sewer department in lending tools such as unusually large wrenches we have occasionally needed," he said.

McInnis also thanked highway department superintendent Harold Litchfield for his "cooperation and helpfulness."

"I would also like to thank your employee, Carl Sestito, who not only operated the back end loader, but did a lot of hand shoveling to assist us.

"The highway department has also shown great cooperation with the sewer department in clearing the driveway in snowstorms, so that we can access the plant and obtain deliveries of chlorine and other supplies."

Flats, waters are closed

The waters and flats of Cohasset are among the areas which have been closed to the harvest of surf clams, carnivorous snails and all mussel species.

Also affected are the waters and flats of Hull, Scituate, Marshfield, Duxbury, Kingston and Plymouth from Point Allerton in Hull to Manomet Point in Plymouth, except for the Duxbury-Kingston-Plymouth Harbor.

The Division of Marine Fisheries recently notified towns that surf clams, (also known as sea clams), carnivorous snails and all mussel species from a specified area are contaminated by Protogonyaulax tamerenses.

"The division is of the opinion that these shellfish are dangerous to the public health," said Philip Coates, director.

Coates said that shellfish permits are restricted, and the areas closed, until examination shows that the shellfish are safe for human consumption.

No weekend hours

Highway surveyor Harold Litchfield has written to selectmen that the men in his department will not be able to work any week-end hours at the landfill/transfer station.

In a budget-cutting move, the board of health has proposed reducing the days the town landfill is open.

It would be open on the weekends and one day during the week.

Litchfield explained that , due to a budget cut, his department will have four men after July 1.

"These men have held weekend jobs for years and are unwilling to give them up," said Litchfield.

"We are also very busy right now," added Litchfield, "with the town hall parking lot and with the upcoming resurfacing of North Main St.

"Along with the resurfacing, there will be curbs to be lifted, aprons to be put in and shoulders to be loamed and seeded," he said.

"The board of health also wanted us to install the new drainage system at the transfer station, but we don't have the time or the manpower.

"There are also vacations coming up for these men."

During snowstorms, noted Litchfield, the men are needed to operate snowplowing and sanding equipment.

"As far as interdepartmental cooperation is concerned, I have always helped Joe Laugelle (landfill supervisor) whenever he's needed equipment or manpower.

"The one time I couldn't help him was on a Sunday when his loader broke down and ours did not have the right size hooks on the bucket to lift the containers at the landfill.

"I really don't know what the board of health expects from the highway department operating with only four men," said Litchfield,"but I feel that they should look for personnel for the transfer station elsewhere."

Call me Ishmael . . .

All was not entirely serious at the last session of town meeting Monday night.

On two occasions, moderator William Weeks inadvertently referred to advisory committee chairman Jane Goedecke as Mrs. Gjesteby.

Martha Gjesteby is a member of the board of selectmen.

When her husband, Arne Gjesteby, a member of the advisory committee, came to the microphone, he made something clear.

"I have only one wife," said Gjesteby, drawing laughs from the crowd.

Later when Wayne Sawchuk talked to town meeting about renovation of Milliken/Lillard Field, he added a quip, too.

"This is probably the most somber town meeting I've ever come to," said Sawchuk.

"I wish you (Weeks) would call me Mr. Gjesteby or something."

MCAD charge could be a problem

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The town says it cannot afford renovations to the police and fire station. But in the background looms a situation that could alter that opinion.

Police Officer Maureen Healy filed a complaint this year with the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination, alleging the police station does not contain separate toilet facilities for female officers as required by law.

MCAD found there is probable cause to issue a complaint against the town, but they postponed any action while the town contemplated major renovations to the building. Included in the proposed $714,000 project were separate toilet and locker room facilities for up to four female officers. Currently, Healy is the only female officer in the department.

Now that the renovation project, which would have required a debt exclusion override, has been defeated, there is the possibility the state could move on that complaint.

Judith Wright, a spokesman for MCAD, said the complaint will now be heard at a public hearing. According to Wright, the commission delayed any action until the town decided the fate of the renovation project. Now that it has been defeated, Wright said the complaint will be moved from the conciliatory stage to a full public hearing. That, she said, would be scheduled within the year.

Following the public hearing, a decision will be handed down by MCAD. If the decision favors Officer Healy, the town could be immediately forced to provide separate toilet facilities for the female officer. Or, the commission could order monetary damages to Officer Healy. There is also a possibility the commission could combine the penalities.

The town's labor counsel, Robert Garrett, said he is expecting a hearing to be scheduled on the complaint. It will then be up to the town to prove it has provided Officer Healy with separate but equal facilities.

Officer Healy, who would not comment on the complaint, originally filed a grievance through the police union several years ago. When the town agreed to study the need for major renovations to the station, that charge was dropped. Subsequently, a plan to make $1.1 million of repairs to the station were rejected by the 1987 town meeting. Following that defeat, Officer Healy filed a complaint with the MCAD.

A Cohasset police officer confirmed there is no separate facilities for female officers, and noted that upon request, the bathroom at the station must also be made available to the public.

"You should see this place the day of the Rotary roadrace," he said. "We should charge admission to use the toilet here."

Barbara Moore, chairman of the station renovation study committee, warned the town of possible consequences if the project was defeated.

"We were told by the town's labor counsel that if the repairs and renovations did not happen, the complaint will go forward," she said. "Our positions have been,the work needs to be done. It has to be done, so it's not a question of whether but when these renovations will take place."

In addition to the threat of legal action, Moore said the entire building is not up to state building code. The majority of the $714,000, she said, would be used simply to put the building back into running condition.

The problem is, she noted, the town has not spent any significant amount of money to repair or renovate the station since it was built 28 years ago.

Class of '89 urged to 'bear torch brightly'

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Quoting George Bernard Shaw, School Supt. Stephen Hart encouraged the Cohasset High School Class of 1989 to view their lives "not as a brief candle that burns brightly and extinguishes."

"But," continued Hart," to view it as a splendid torch borne as brightly as possible and handed to the next generation."

Hart spoke before the 116 graduates and their guests Sunday, June 4, at the 1 p.m. exercises held at the South Shore Music Circus under hazy sunshine and 80-degree temperatures.

To the sounds of "Pomp and Circumstance" played by the junior-senior high school band, the graduates entered the music circus.

They were led by marshall Sean McCarthy, president of the junior class.

The young men wore dark blue caps and gowns; the young women wore white and carried red or white carnations.

Some students displayed shy smiles, others wide grins, as their families photographed or video taped the occasion.

Vocalist Rachel K. Grabke, a former graduate, led the group in singing "The Star Spangled Banner."

The invocation was given by the Rev. E. Clifford Cuter of Second Parish Church.

"May your blessings rest upon the class of 1989," he said.

Class president Kathleen M. Ryan welcomed the group, and talked about the changes the students had encountered during their years at the high school.

"A metamorphosis changed us from giggling teenagers to young adults, learning to accept responsibility, joy and sorrow...," she said.

Ryan asked for a moment of silence in memory of two classmates, Shawna O'Leary and Desiree Yess, who died in a car accident in 1985.

"As our high school days come to a close," concluded Ryan, "I wish my classmates the best of luck in attaining their goals."

Salutatorian Amy Elizabeth Hobbs said that she asked herself what experiences the class of 1989 have in common.

"We will all soon become what our society calls adults," said Hobbs.

"...But we will be adults of a different nature.

"We will live on the edge and take risks.

"In order to succeed, we must not be afraid of failure," she said.

"We shouldn't look at life as a tight-rope act.

"Often those who take a different route end up with the best results.

"Everybody falls down at least once.

"A true failure is one who stops trying and fails to learn from mistakes."

Valedictorian Melissa Brooks Nothnagle noted that the graduating class is "pretty diverse."

"We all seem to be going in different directions," she said," and that's great."

Nothnagle talked about her four years studying art, and about "one incredible woman, Colleen Lucas, who involved all the students in her classes."

She noted murals in the cafeteria and at Sandy Beach.

"Seven people intend to major in art, including myself," said Nothnagle.

"The group's dedication to art is a great tribute to Miss Lucas."

"We are lucky to have a teacher like Miss Lucas.

Nothnagle said students need to develop creatively and intellectually.

"We must set high standards in education for ourselves, and for our children," she said.

"Congratulations class of 1989," said Nothnagle.

"We have an awesome future in front of us!"

National honor society awards were announced by principal Mary Ellen Gallagher.

A special honorary award went to biology teacher Robert M. Thompson who is retiring this year.

Thompson was greeted with a standing ovation.

When Hart was introduced, a cymbal sounded, unintentionally or otherwise.

"That's a very unique introduction," Hart laughed.

He extended congratulations to the graduating class, and then had parents stand for applause.

"The next recognition will be when the bills come for tuition," he said.

"Even on such a happy day, I feel it is necessary to ask you to commit yourselves to some things."

Hart emphasized the power of students, and referred to the students in Beijing, China, who are protesting for democracy.

"There are 13 million children living in poverty," said Hart.

"That's three times as great as 10 years ago," he said.

Hart also spoke of problems such as abuse of alcohol, homelessness, and pollution of the Meeting postpones most articles

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Town meeting concluded Monday night, June 5, with most articles postponed indefinitely, and a few, including the renovation and expansion of Milliken/Lillard Field, still alive.

Those that are still alive will probably appear on the ballot at a special election June 28.

That decision is up to selectmen.

During Monday night's meeting at the Cohasset High School gym, which lasted just over two hours, residents voted to move forward with proposals for a defibrillator for the town-run ambulance as well as the Milliken/Lillard Field renovation.

Voters also approved $64,348.66 towards a three-year police contract.

At the first session of the continued town meeting May 31, residents had voted to move forward with a $50,000 appropriation for the design of a town cemetery.

In addition, residents had overwhelmingly approved an override of $303,872 towards the general operating budget.

The advisory committee had recommended a $203,000 budget, but that figure was amended when the school committee proposed adding another $100,000.

At the start of the June 5 meeting, advisory committee chairman Jane Goedecke told the 342 residents in attendance that they would all have to be politicians.

"You need to understand the political process, and to be facilitators," she said.

"The more the ballot looks like the May 6 ballot, the greater the chance the whole thing will fail.

"We have to be very serious, and not just vote with our hearts," said Goedecke.

All but one of the nine questions on the May 6 ballot went down in defeat.

Selectmen Martha Gjesteby said that her board had voted earlier in the evening to set a June 28 date for a special election.

The board had tentatively set the date a few weeks ago, but declined to make it official at last Wednesday'ssession of town meeting.

"I don't think votes should ever be taken in the heat of battle," explained Gjesteby.

She also said that many residents are upset that there will be another ballot.

But she noted that town meeting voted overwhelmingly last week for the $303,000 override.

"A majority vote can't be ignored," she said.

"It is our duty to take one more ballot, so that the electorate will have the last chance to say yes or no.

"I think if it were taken today," added Gjesteby, "it would not pass."

She also proposed that the ballot include the override amount recommended by the advisory committee.

Wayne Sawchuk of Beechwood St. said that the renovation and expansion of Milliken/Lillard Field is a "very, very long overdue project."

"We can go forward, and everyone here will feel a little better," said Sawchuk.

"It will add 50-cents on the tax dollar if it is paid in one year."

Sawchuk said that Cohasset has grown since the land for the field was donated in 1937.

"We haven't done much since then," he said.

Sawchuk said he would like residents to vote for the project "and feel good about living in Cohasset and getting a project done."

Pat Facey of Woodland Drive said she was concerned about drainage from the field.

"Part of the plan calls for a complete design of the drainage," said Sawchuk.

"There will be a public hearing by the conservation commission.

"The drainage system is the real foundation of the project.

"It will cost about $75,000."

Residents voted not to reconsider the Milliken/Lillard Field article.

That means that the previous town meeting vote in favor of the proposal stands, and the question should go on the ballot.

Residents also voted to appropriate $64,348.66 towards a three-year contract for the police union, despite the advisory committee's recommendation that the article not be accepted.

"The advisory committee doesn't feel we can advise you to accept the terms of this three-year contract," said Goedecke.

She explained that the contract includes a six percent increase each year, and that one of the years is retroactive to 1989.

Town meeting postpones most articles . . .

"We're very concerned about six percent in 1991 when we know overrides are difficult to achieve, and other costs are going up," she said.

Goedecke said the third year of the fire department's contract was left open.

"On the basis of the third year, we must advise the town not to accept the contract," she said.

Personnel committee chairman Charles Douglas said,"I honestly feel a six percent increase is very equitable."

Douglas noted that town employees received a six percent raise.

"I strongly recommend adopting the proposal as submitted," he said.

Residents voted 224 to 76 in favor of the contract.

There was also a half hour of discussion on the $714,000 plans for renovation of the police/fire station.

The matter was eventually put off until a future meeting. The previous town meeting action was reconsidered, and the borrowing authority approved in April was rescinded.

But the committee was left intact to return with the same or a similar plan.

"The committee has been working over 10 1/2 months for renovation of the building," said committee chairman Barbara Moore.

"When we started out, we didn't know if the work was needed," she said.

But that opinion changed, according to Moore.

She compared the condition of the building with that of a 28-year-old home that hasn't been painted, and has worn out floors that haven't been replaced, outdated plumbing, and rotten window sills.

"Renovation of the building does have to be done," said Moore.

"It's a matter of public safety.

"This is one tax increase we do feel is justified.

"After many meetings, we found it is necessary."

Moore also said that the building is not in compliance with a state law requiring separate but equal facilities for men and women, as well as access for the handicapped.

"To delay this, will cost more than $714,000," she said.

"If we wait until next year, maybe it will just be the cost of inflation.

"We were in favor of going forward now because we are in an economic slump and prices are cheaper."

Moore said that the renovated building will make the town more desirable for regionalization of services.

She also said there will probably be legal fees because a lawsuit by a female officer will probably go forward without the renovation.

"It will probably be a somewhat larger sum at the next town meeting," said Moore.

"The project does need to be done. It's just a question of when."

Capt. Robert Silvia of the fire department asked how much it would cost citizens if the plans went forward now.

Moore said it would cost the owner of a $200,000 house about $45 the first year, and then it would decrease.

She noted that selectmen have frozen any renovation work to the building over the last four years in anticipation of a larger rehabilitation project.

Emmett Holt of Highland Ave. said that he voted against the question when it was first on the ballot because it is a debt exclusion.

"I don't like that kind of accounting practice," he said.

Override votes . . .

for Milliken/Lillard field and $50,000 for the design of a new cemetery.

The debt exclusion questions would not impact the tax rate until 1991, according to Goedecke.

"The ballot would certainly be shorter than the first one," she said.

The first override ballot last month had 9 questions, and all but one, involving a roof for the Osgood School, were defeated.

The articles had been approved at town meeting earlier.

"I think there was a negative reaction to grouping items together," she said.

"But they were grouped because we didn't want to have a ballot of 20 questions," she said.

"That was a mistake.

"This time it looks as though people will be able to vote separately on items.

"I don't know whether it will make a difference or not."

Goedecke said she thought town meeting went well.

"People understood what they had to do.

"I hope they will find the ballot is clearer this time.

"Personally, I feel this is the last time around."

Goedecke said that the town would have to call a special town meeting if the two operating budget or police contract questions failed to pass.

"We would have to find the money to fund them," she said.

If both the operating budget questions passed, the higher amount would go into effect because that was the one approved at town meeting, she said.

Goedecke said that an education process will be necessary if both operating budgets appear on the ballot.

"Residents who want to vote for one of the override questions, would be well advised to vote for both," she said.

"Half a loaf is better than none," she said.

Town counsel will have to rule if it would be legal to have both questions on the ballot, she said.

If neither of the override questions passed, a special town meeting would be necessary to come up with an operating budget, she said.

But a complication would be that according to Massachusetts state law, towns can't appropriate money from pension funds at a special town meeting.

The town has proposed to appropriate $70,000 from one pension fund to another, to offset a reduction in state aid.

"If there is a special town meeting, we can't do that," said Goedecke.

"So we would be $70,000 short, in addition to cutting 9 percent from town operating budgets," she said.

environment and decline of the U.S. economy.

"All these problems of a social nature need your commitment," he said.

Hart also asked students to commit themselves to education.

"It is really only the commitment to education that ensures that citizens can live in an increasingly complex world," he said.

School committee chairperson Barbara Bliss presented diplomas to the graduating class.

"It's an extreme pleasure for me to be able to participate in this very, very special day," said Bliss.

"...May you be happy."

Each student was met with hearty applause as he or she accepted the diploma from Bliss.

Assistant principal John DeLorenzo aided Bliss.

Her son, Daniel W. Bliss, got an extra hug as he received his diploma from his mother.

Two foreign students were among the graduates. They were Paulo Baca-Manrique of Peru and Michael Weigel of Germany.

Some students accepted their diplomas with quiet pleasure, others with more exuberance as they waved them in the air.

The graduates were met with a standing ovation as the ceremony concluded.

Classmates exchanged hand-shakes, hugs and kisses, mingled with tears, before they processed to the love theme from "Top Gun."

A collation provided by the junior class parents and chamber of commerce awaited them on the front lawn.

Museums open for summer

The Cohasset Historical Society's two summer museums; the Capt. John Wilson Historical House and Maritime Museum, will open for their summer season Saturday, June 17. The two historical buildings are located on Elm Street at Cohasset Center.

Until September 30, hours will be each afternoon except Mondays from 1:30 to 5:30 p.m. Admission for adults is $1.50 per building. Special group tours can be arranged by calling the Society at (617) 383-6930.

The Capt. John Wilson House, a Cohasset Sea Captain's home dating from 1810, and the only "primitive" house remaining in Cohasset, is furnished with artifacts from the town's early homes. Home furnishings, kitchenware, toys and artwork are features. The Maritime Museum, formerly John Bates' Ship Chandlery and dating from the latter 1700's, contains a collection of maritime-related artifacts mostly from Cohasset long "Age of Sail." Ship models, carvings, 19th century fishing gear and navigational instruments, charts and artworks from the town's seafaring days can be seen.

There is a section devoted to Cohasset's volunteer lifesavers, and the story of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse is depicted in artifacts and pictures. The Maritime Museum also holds an extensive collection of items related to the town's general history.

Opening day, June 17, will be an open house at the two buildings, with an opportunity to make a side-tour of the famous Cohasset carillon at nearby St. Stephen's Church. The world-famous Jessie M. Barron Memorial Carillon will be open for view to museumvisitors.

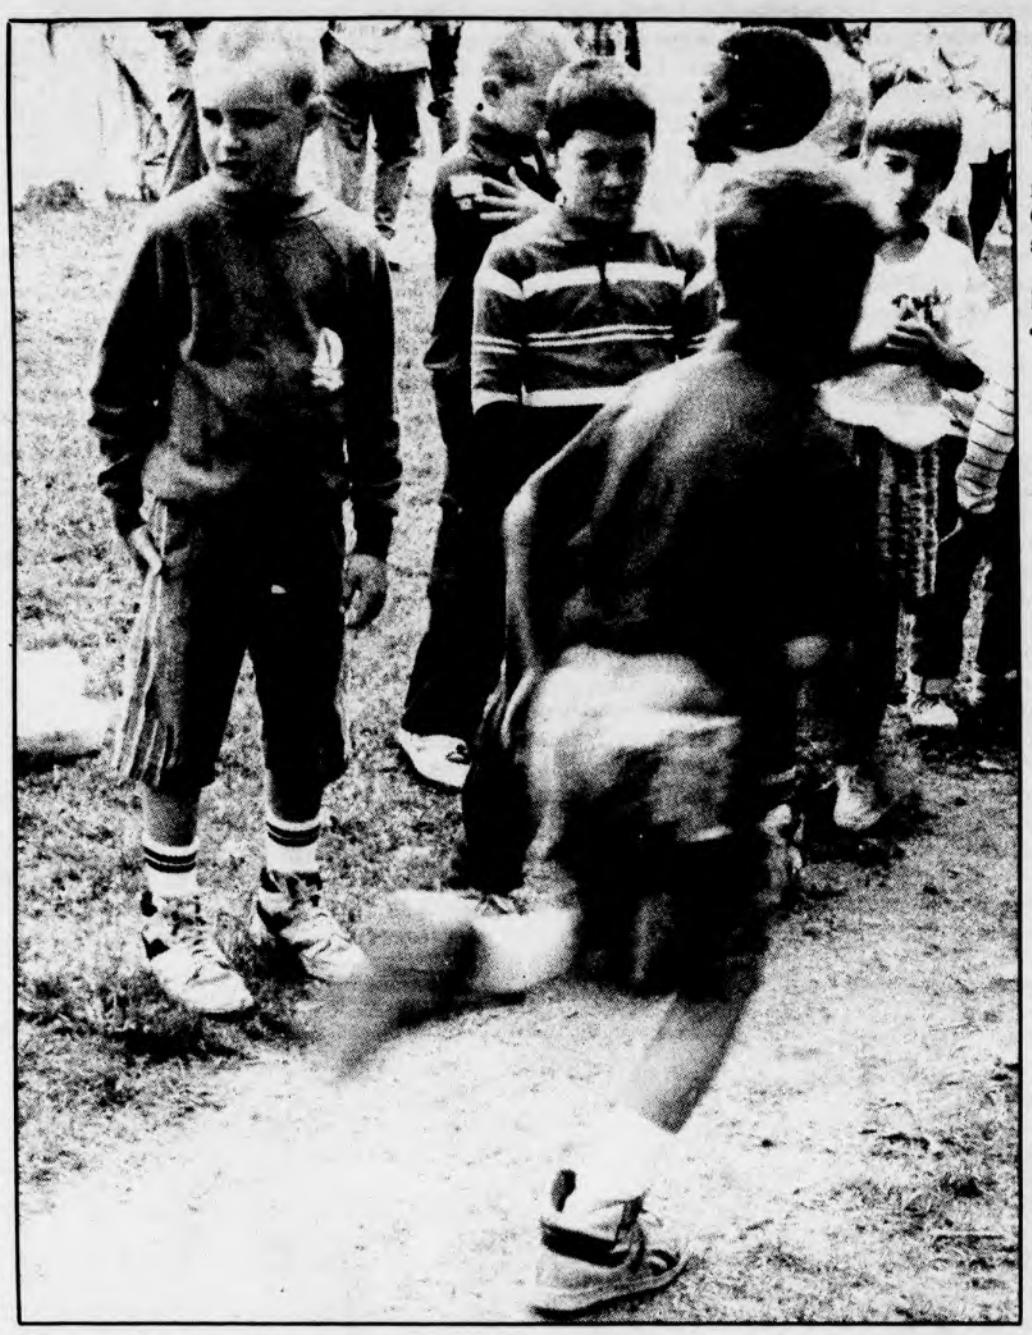
□ Cohasset nutritionist Patricia Messing has just instituted an innovative addition to her nutrition counseling business. Clients who come to see her for follow-up visits have the choice of going on a "walking visit" or having a regular office session of 30 minutes. The "walking visits" consist of a one-mile walk through the town of Cohasset, at the client's pace, but spurred on by Pat, who is also an exercise instructor. Clients bring their sneakers to the visit and are ready to walk for at least 20 minutes. Pat's clients generally follow an exercise program, but she believes that this joint walking session can increase their motivation to make exercise a part of their daily lives. It can also help make them aware that even 20 minutes of walking can be extremely beneficial, both physically and mentally. Moderate exercise like walking burns calories to help with weight loss, helps lower blood sugar levels, increases "good" cholesterol, lowers blood pressure and decreases stress levels. It even helps with depression.

During their walk, client and nutritionist discuss whatever concerns and issues would have been raised during a regular visit.



If you would like more information about the "WALKING NUTRITIONIST" call Patricia Messing at 383-2410.

THE COLD TRUTH

Although all refrigerators manufactured after January 1, 1990 will have to meet new federal energy standards, manufacturers have not waited for the deadline to improve their products. Consider that, between 1972 and 1987, overall energy efficiency for refrigerators has improved almost 80 percent. The 1990 models, on average, will perform nearly 20 percent more efficiently than their 1985 counterparts. This increased efficiency lends added impetus to those looking for reasons to replace a refrigerator as part of an overall kitchen remodeling. In the long run, a new refrigerator will help pay for itself in the form of dollars saved over operating its replacement. When a long list of new features is added to operational savings, a good case can be made to replace a ten-year-old refrigerator.

If it is wise to replace your 10-year-old refrigerator, then isn't it a good idea to improve on your entire kitchen? If refrigerators have become more efficient, then a whole host of other appliances as well as cabinetry have also become more efficient. Time doesn't stand still for all the other items in your kitchen. To find out what has improved come to KITCHEN DESIGN ASSSOCIATES.

We keep up with all the changes and improvements to bring the best quality kitchen to you. We feature Millbrook and Poggenpohl custom cabinets. Experience tells us that change is for the better. Come in to 962 Washington St. Rt. 53, Hanover, Tel. 826-4121.

□ Happy anniversary to Dot and Bill Parmenter.

□ Our town's seniors certainly are putting us on the map, just consider the records in the recent Senior Olympics! How about Ann Leonard winning seven gold medals this year (she will have to add on a trophy room soon, this is the 7th year she has won medals)! Jack Hubbard returned home with two medals to display with pride, a gold and a silver. Virginia Anderson competed and won herself a bronze medal, the first of many everyone is sure! And, how about Gerard Keating, who won two gold medals (we surely can see where his athletic sons got their abilities, can't we!!) These athletes should be an inspiration to all of us, we certainly are pleased and proud of their efforts.

□ Norbert Reardon did something really special on Memorial Day this year, he marched in the parade wearing his brother Dennis' uniform. Dennis died in Vietnam twenty years ago. That is what we call a tribute.

□ One wonders what the Hingham Visiting Nurse Board of Managers will do without Priscilla Streeter, who is retiring after working there since 1973. Just as our schools won't be the same without Dick Streeter we suspect. In any case, here's to two fine people who deserve a happy retirement. We wish you well.

□ Two more students received a special honor this month, they were chosen CHS Students of the Month. They were Allie Redfield and Jason Hunter. That is an honor that they won't soon forget, we are sure. Congratulations.

Rev. E. Clifford Cutler of St. Stephen's Church, gave the invocation at Sunday's CHS graduation.

□ Doesn't the bath house at Sandy Beach look wonderful with the graffiti gone and the ocean scene in its place! Everyone is talking about how nice it looks!

□ Dawn Meehan just keeps on swimming and keeps on winning! She is now the New England Junior Olympic Champion in both solo and figures event. We will hear more about Dawn in July, when she will compete in the Bay State Games. Keep you your good work, Dawn, we sure wish you well.

□ Happy Anniversary to Ruth and Harry Goodwin.

□ The Japanese Homestay program is being planned for this summer, the dates are July 15 through August 14th. If you would like to be a host family, or would like some more information on the month-long program call Margot Cheel at 383-9184 or Patti Durkin at 383-2616.

□ Caren S. Chevalier of Cohasset recently graduated from Fitchburg State College with a Bachelor of Science degree in psychology.

□ David J. Kierce and John T. Kierce of Cohasset received a Bachelor of Science in Business Administration degree from Nichols College at recent commencement exercises.

David, a marketing major, received his degree Cum Laude. He was inducted into the Zeta Alpha Phi Honor Society and the Delta Mu Delta National Honor Society, and was president of the Marketing Club at Nichols.

John, a marketing major, was inducted into the Zeta Alpha Phi Honor Society and was a member of the Management Club.

Both are sons of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Kierce of 189 South Main St.

Editorial

The work begins now

Here we go again.

Almost 1,000 residents poured into town meeting last week and gave their overwhelming support to another Proposition 2 1/2 override. It's not as large as the general budget override we faced at the April town meeting and May election, but it is an override nonetheless.

It was a wonderful turnout and those people should be congratulated on their attendance. Going to a town meeting on a Tuesday evening after a long holiday weekend is not many people's idea of a fun night out. But you were there, you responded to the need, and because of you, the override has resurfaced once again..

And although we agree with the vote of town meeting, and applaud the fortitude of those who worked so hard for it, we suspect the work has just begun.

In the weeks preceding a special election, which is tentatively set for June 28, those who supported the override will have to work furiously to garner more support at the polls. Although 1,000 people attended town meeting, there were certainly some opponents in the crowd. And there are hundreds more who did not attend.

Once again we are confronted with the problem of continuing the momentum as we go from town meeting victory to the polls. This town, as well as many others, has the habit of attracting a much larger crowd to the ballot box than the more public town meeting forum.

Residents of Cohasset must be made aware that passage of an override is essential to the continued fiscal operation of this town. If we do not approve the money necessary to cover the town's operating budget, we will be in a very precarious situation. Right now, we are $303,000 short of covering all our expenses. We need that appropriation approval at the election.Without it, this town can not pay all its bills as the new fiscal year approaches.

Residents were warned, cajoled and begged to attend town meeting, And the largest crowd in recent memory responded. Now, that same spirit of importance and civic duty must be called upon again as the special town election is scheduled. If this override is to succeed, as town meeting voters expressed last week, we need a large turnout at the polls, and a majority of voters who favor the override.

That is not an easy task, as many residents who have never stepped foot in a town meeting are frequent election voters. But that trend must end this month. Voters are urged to stand by town's meeting overwhelming vote of May 31 and support an override to cover our town's operating expenses.

Talk of fewer school administrators, fewer firefighters and school closings will have to be delayed until this year's fiscal problems are solved. That discussion, which many feel is appropriate and warranted, will have to wait. Those are issues which must be dealt with, but only after our immediate situation is successfully completed.

Students invited to summer dances

To the Editor:
Dear Junior-Senior High Parents:

Your children are invited to attend the Saturday night dances at the Cohasset Community Center. These dances are held on the second Saturday of each month, including June, July and August, from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. and are for children in junior-senior high. Admission is $5 and covers the cost of a live DJ and a policeman. Please note the increase in price this month to cover the expense of a policeman.

There are rules that must be observed in order to provide a safe and orderly evening for your child. We would like to explain these rules so that everyone understands before they come to the dance.

In the past, we have had some problems with children arriving at the dance intoxicated. These rules have been established to prevent this.

1. There is a $5 charge to cover the cost of a policeman and a DJ with a light and smoke show.

2. The doors open at 7:30. Please do not drop off children before that time as there is no supervision earlier. Please drop off your children at the door and wait until they are inside. In the past, there have been instances where kids will stop somewhere else first, possibly a friend's house, where there are no parents home, and arrive at the dance intoxicated. We would like to prevent this at all costs and enlist your cooperation in doing so.

3. Once the children enter the dance, they are not allowed to leave or go outside for any reason. This is to insure that there is no drinking during the dance.

4. If a child does leave the dance early, he or she is not allowed back in. Remember, we are only responsible for children while they are inside the building and we cannot force them to remain here, as much as we try to encourage them to stay.

5. No food or drinks are allowed in the gym and no gum. There is a snack machine and a soda machine in the hall. Unfinished drinks may be left on the table in the hall and picked up after they finish dancing.

These dances will provide a safe enjoyable evening for all the children in Cohasset if these simple rules are observed. Discuss them with your children before the dance so that they know what is expected of them.

Judy Volungis
Community Center director

P.S. We are always in need of chaperones. Please call and volunteer your services for one dance. 383-0088.

PSO pledges support

To the Editor:

As PSO president, I would like to thank Town Meeting voters for their support of the schools. I would also like to emphasize that, although we obviously serve as advocates of public education, we support the integrity of all town government, and, in our voter service capacity, we encourage all school parents to do so.

The PSO Board pledges to work closely with the School Committee on their comprehensive Five Year Strategic Plan which will present to the town a cost effective school system based on strict accountability and the highest educational standards.

Court orders plan approval

figured a tie vote was a denial.

In his June 2 decision, Judge Donahue stated, "the tie vote of the planning board does not constitute a disapproval of the plaintiff's site plan. As a matter of law, said plan is deemed to be approved by the planning board's failure to act."

The judge continued, "finally, the court orders the building inspector of the town to issue a building permit to the plaintiff in accordance with the site plan of August 3, 1988 and conditions attached hereto."

After waiting a year for final approval of his plans, Staszko said he is angry. He lashed out at the three planning board members who have traditionally voted against the Cohasset Plaza plans. "(Robert) Sturdy, (Daniel) Cotton, and (John) O'Toole have cost this town about $200,000 in legal and engineering fees in the last seven years fighting this project," he said. "They have cost this town a million dollars in tax revenue in the last seven years."

Sturdy, who is no longer chairman of the planning board, denied those allegations.

"That is absolutely and totally inaccurate. It's a total fabrication and is another self-serving statement on the part of Mr. Staszko," he said.

The former board chairman said town counsel has issued "various advice" regarding the board's legal obligations concerning Cohasset Plaza. He would not say whether town counsel has advised the board to approve the plans.

"There is some advice we have been given that I agree with, and some I do not," Sturdy said. "But I won't say whether town counsel has told us to sign those plans.'

According to the former chairman, the site plan as presented by the developer at this time is incomplete.

Staszko said he "fully expects" to be handed a building permit for the construction of phase two by Thursday morning. "If not, each one of these planning board members will be held in contempt", he said.

Art center plans for 34th summer festival

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

"It's a festival for everyone," said Mandy Avery, chairman of the 34th annual South Shore Arts Festival set for June 23-25 on Cohasset Common.

"There is something here for everyone," said Avery, who is coordinating 300 volunteers and 17 committees for the popular event.

Planning started last December.

Over 5,000 people are expected to attend during the course of the festival which will feature art exhibits, craft and food vendors, artist demonstrations and children's art drop-in workshops.

Admission is free, although there are nominal charges for some of the performances.

Festivities will start Thursday, June 22, 7 to 9 p.m. with an opening champagne reception.

There will be a Margaret Dillon retrospective.

There will also be award presentations for scholarships and juried exhibitions.

The $10 per person admission will benefit the Margaret Dillon Scholarship Fund and the South Shore Art Center.

There will be three concurrent adult art exhibits. They are a juried exhibition, juried photography exhibition and members' exhibition.

A children's art show is sponsored by The Patriot Ledger.

Throughout the three-day festival there will be a variety of entertainment .

It will include Mobius -- roving performers, Fernadina Chan and her ethnic dance troupe who will perform Chinese dances , Bamidele Drums and Dancers, an African dance troupe, and Dan Butterworth and his marionettes.

"Mobius is an innovative and experimental roving performing group which will present a specially developed performance/scavenger hunt call Green on the Green," explained Melanie Meeker Jones, art center public relations director.

"The performance events are scattered throughout the Cohasset Common and are all based on the word green.

"The event, structured as a game, is intended to encourage audience/participants to view the world around them through new eyes."

Dan Butterworth creates a world of imagination with his finely fashioned marionettes, according to Meeker Jones.

"They seemingly come to life as they leave the stage and scamper along the aisles or crawl into the audience's lap," she said .

The South Shore Concert Band, conducted by Richard Whitmarsh, will perform "Pops" selections, according to Meeker Jones.

In addition, Jonathan Edwards and Cheryl Wheeler will perform in concert Friday, June 23, at 8 p.m. at the Nickerson Theatre.

Harpoon Ale of Boston will cosponsor the concert.

WGBH's Dick Pleasants will be MC.

Edwards and Wheeler perform soft rock, blues, jazz and country.

Tickets are available by calling the Nickerson Theatre, 871-2400, or the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

The Festival Fandango, a dance at the Cohasset Community Center featuring the Holly Stevenson Quartet and taped music, is set for Saturday, June 24, at 8 p.m.

Tickets are available at the art center.

The festival, the longest consecutively running outdoor arts festival in New England, is the major fundraiser of the year for the art center, according to Avery.

She noted that the art center moved into its new $1.3 million location several years ago, but there is still a $300,000 mortgage.

Forty-three communities are served by the art center, according to Avery.

The art center's first festival was held in 1955, according to Avery.

"It was a way to bring the community to the artist, and the artist to the community," she explained.

Today, she considers the festival the best around.

"This has more to offer than any of the others," she said.

"It's a good time.

"If people miss out, they are the losers."

The schedule will be:

The craft-vendors will be plentiful during the art center's summer festival.

The Children's Art exhibition held on Cohasset Common is always a big attraction at the summer art festival.

Festival to open with reception

An opening champagne reception for the "Margaret Marshall Dillon Retrospective" June 22 from 7 to 9 p.m. at the South Shore Art Center kicks off the three-day South Shore Arts Festival, June 23-25 on Cohasset Common.

Dillon, Director of the South Shore Art Center from 1975 to 1987 painted gently expressionistic acrylic portraits of interiors. She was intrigued with how objects, rooms or even a jumble of buildings reflect the human hands that made them or the life that is lived in and around them. Instead of arranging still life or interior paintings, she would choose a viewpoint of those subjects that expressed the essence of the owner or inhabitants.

Dillon had a dream of a new art center; and through her spirit, drive and determination saw the dream come true. "She wanted the center available to all ages and all people who could use it.

Also opening is the exhibition "MADEIRA, MY DEAR." Both exhibits will run through August 18. Gallery hours are: Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Saturday, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., and Sunday, 1 to 4 p.m. Admission to the gallery is free. A donation of $10 for the champagne reception will benefit the Margaret Dillon scholarship fund.

For more information about the Festival please call the South Shore Art Center at 383-9548.

Art center summer

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, is offering diverse activities to meet the flexible needs of summer plans.

Saturday, July 8 from 1 to 4 p.m., Janet Amiri will teach a T-SHIRT & SNEAKER PAINTING WORKSHOP for grades 2-6. Two four-week sessions of WHEEL FOR KIDS will be taught by George Dalton beginning July 7 and August 4 for grades 5-9.

One-week sessions for grades 1-3 and 4-6 called SUMMER ART WEEKS begin on July 10, August 14 and August 21. Learn creative art skills working outdoors-drawing, painting and working on mixed media projects.

In addition to Cohasset programs, SUMMER ART WEEKS are offered in the satellite locations of Scituate, Weymouth, Hingham and Norwell for selected weeks.

SUMMER ARTS CAMP 1989: CHINA has two, two-week sessions July 17-28 and July 30 - August 11. The SSAC and the Cohasset Community Center offer a new program of hands-on camp projects and activities which focus on China's rich cultural heritage and traditions. Young Artists (ages 6-12) will have workshops in the visual arts, theater and dance and creative movement. Performances in each of the art disciplines will be presented on the last day of each session.

For a brochure and to register, please call the South Shore Art Center at 383-9548 weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Theatre signups underway

The Young People's Summer Theatre final registration orientation meeting for residents between 13 and 22 years old will be held Mon., June 5.

The meeting will be held from 7:15 to 8:15 p.m. at the First Congregational Church on Country Way in Scituate.

Registration for the program is $50. Mail-in registration at $35.00 will end June 1. No one within ages 13 and 22 is turned down. The meeting will explain in detail the program, the shows YPST will be performing this year, and other membership obligations.

Auditions for casting of the major production "70, GIRLS, 70", and the third annual "Showcase", will be held on Wednesday and Thursday from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m., also at the church additional registrations will also be accepted at this time.

Those interested in a singing or speaking role should audition, but need only attend one of the evenings.

Those interested in only participating in the chorus/dance section need not audition, but should attend the first rehearsal Tuesday, June 13 at 6:45 p.m. when the casts will be announced.

Those who pre-registered by mail are urged to attend the meeting June 5 as well.

Residents are also reminded that the new program for children, seven to 12 years old is still accepting mail-in registration at $75 per person, although a discount will be given to families with two or more members enrolled through June 10.

A walk-in registration will then be held Saturday, June 17 from 11 a.m. - 2 p.m. at the church when registration will be $100 per person. All fees are non-refundable.

Don Capen, YPST director said he is looking for all levels of talent as "70, GIRLS, 70" has many singing and non-singing roles, all challenging as the plot revolves around people in their 60s and 70s.

For more information, call 826-7983.

Flea market planned

The Mary/Martha Circle of Christ Lutheran Church will hold the annual spring flea market Saturday, June 17 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Those people interested in renting a booth to sell their goods may contact Jan Isbrandt at 545-2479 or Dora Reese at 545-1068. Rental is $12 per booth; inside and outside booths are available. The church is located on Route 3A, Scituate.

Rabies clinic June 10

The Hingham Lions Club and the Tri-Town Animal League are sponsoring a rabies clinic Saturday, June 10.

The clinic will be held at the Hingham Highway Department on Hersey Street from 1 to 3 p.m. The rabies shots for dogs and cats will be $8 each. Dog licenses will also be available.

Cholesterol, blood screening

South Shore Hospital's Nutrition Education Services office will hold cholesterol and blood pressure screenings Tuesday, June 20 at Webb's Pro Fitness Club, 134 Washington Street Route 53 in Norwell.

Hours for the screenings are 10 a.m. to noon and 4:30 to 6:30 p.m.

The cholesterol screenings include a "fingerstick blood test" that requires no fasting and can produce results in just three minutes.

The fee is $6 and no appointment is necessary.

For more information, call Nutrition Education Services at (617) 335-1341.

Pops concert June 11

The monks of the Glastonbury Abbey are delighted to welcome members of the Hingham Civic Orchestra and its noted conductor, John Corley, for a second outdoor pops concert at the Abbey, Sunday afternoon, June 11, at 3 p.m. (Rain date, Sunday, June 18)

Set dramatically against the wooded landscape and the profusion of spring blossoms bordering the Abbey's Great Lawn, the Orchestra will present a concert for a summer Sunday afternoon entitled "June is Bustin' Out All Over." Last year hundreds of people attended the first outdoor concert, the highly successful "Mom's Concert" — a "Pops" Concert for Mother's Day.

The program will include a sunny variety of music ranging from shows such as "Carousel," "Gigi," "Music Man," and "Phantom of the Opera" to light classical pieces like Johann Strauss' euphoric "Voices of Spring;" the exuberant "Hoedown" from Copeland's ballet, "Rodeo" and a bit of "Bolero" by Ravel. And, what would a celebration of the month of June be without Mendelsohn's "Wedding March?"

Tickets for the concert are $4 and are on sale at Noble's Camera Shop in downtown Hingham, at the "door," and at the Abbey's office at 16 Hull St. (Route 228 North), open 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. weekdays. For ticket information phone 749-2144. You are encouraged to bring family and friends, folding chairs and picnics!

Eagle scout projects

Nine youths of Scout Troop 110 sponsored by the LDS Church of Hingham are hard at work on their Eagle projects.

Bruce Bradford, 17, of Marshfield, with the assistance of the police department of his town has been making a data base on the computer entering information of the location of all boat moorings both commercial and recreational in the harbors of North and South Rivers, Green Harbor and Brant Rock. In case a severe storm with boats getting loose, this information could help to relocate all moorings more easily.

Four other members of the troop have worked with Bruce on this project, including Jon Garrison of Hingham. If all goes as scheduled Bruce should receive his award sometime this summer.

Summer arts camp registration

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, in Cohasset will host the Visiting Artists for the Summer Arts Camp 1989: CHINA.

The South Shore Art Center and the Cohasset Community Center offer two sessions (July 17-28; July 30 -August 11) of hands-on camp projects and activities which focus on China's rich cultural traditions. Young artists (ages 6-12) will have workshops in the visual arts, theater and dance and creative movement.

Nikki Hu of Hull, a dancer and choreographer will do dance workshops based on stories, myths and folk tales from her Chinese cultural heritage. One piece is based on a Chinese march and will incorporate brightly-colored ribbons and streamers with creative movement. Another piece will use a battle theme incorporating Karate movements and bamboo sticks.

Anne Glennon, a Sumi-e artist, will demonstrate Chinese brush painting techniques and conduct a workshop using the basic techniques. Young artists will have the opportunity to paint traditional Chinese subjects such as bamboo, flowers and animals using authentic materials such as rice paper and sumi-e brushes, and to make their own inks.

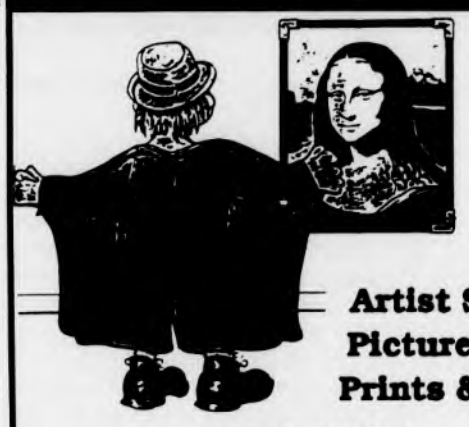
Syma, a Hingham three-dimensional artist, will conduct a clay workshop demonstrating wheel techniques and decorative painting using Chinese symbols and themes. Syma will also lead a mask making workshop where young artists will design and decorate theatrical masks using traditional Chinese characters and folk tales as inspiration.

Cole Hawkins, a teacher and owner of the Pangainoon Club will give a demonstration accompanied by members of the club in the Martial Arts of Karate and Kung Fu.

Chris Demers, a Marshfield multi-media artist, will work the Young Artists on a video project which will become part of the Grand Finale for each session. Young Artists will have the opportunity to work with the video camera to document their creative activities throughout the camp.

At the close of each session, the last day will be devoted to enjoying the results of all of the activities. There will be an art exhibit, a dance performance, a theater performance and the video tape of the young artists. In addition, each theater and dance performance will be videotaped.

Session size is limited. Early registration is encouraged.



To register or for more information, call the South Shore Art Center at 383-9548 weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Fifth grade students interview the elderly

Here are some interviews from people at Cohasset Knoll. Some children from the 5th grade went there on the afternoon of May 16. We met many interesting people and had a pleasant afternoon. I'm sure most of us would like to go back there again.

By Abby Pease

Nellie

When I interviewed eighty year old Nellie at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing home she remembered the years when she was younger. She was born in Pennsylvania but moved to Hingham when she was two. When she went to school, it was a lot different then it is now. "One teacher taught three grades at a time," said Nellie. When she was a little older she liked to sew and grow plants. She was married and had four children.

Some memories were sad though. "My father was hit by a truck and my sister was run over by a motorcycle. My brother was bombed in World War II," said Nellie tearfully. She then got a job at a sewing factory (which was one of her hobbies).Now she lives happily in the nursing home with her friends.

By Caroline deLima

Hazel Paine

Hazel is eight-nine years old. She was born in 1900 in Andover. She has three brothers and two sisters. She moved almost every eyar.

Hazel was married for more than fifty years. She has three sons and two daughters, although one of her daughters died when she was born.

Two of Hazel's brothers died in World War II.

Some of her hobbies were crocheting and knitting. When she was ten-years-old, she liked softball and basketball.

Her school was fun, she said, although it was very small. Only about thirty or forty children were there.

Some of the chores she did were washing the dishes, weeding the garden, feeding the chickens, and running errands.

We met some very nice people at Cohasset Knoll, and we'll probably go back again.

By Abby Pease and David Marr

Mr. Fienstein

Mr. Fienstein is about eighty one years old. He grew up in Roxbury. He has only one sister and is married, but has no children.

Mr. Fienstein's favorite sport now and when he was a boy is basketball. One of his fondest memories is his paper route he had when he was about twelve. He added, "I used to run down the road selling papers at five in the morning!"

His voice became softer as he told a brief story of his Boston Terrier who lived to be fifteen years old. He said that most likely the dog would have lived for a few more years if it had not been for a speeding car.

When asked where he had been when J.F.K. was shot, he replied, "I was at home when I heard that the President had been shot and killed in Texas." He then added that in World War II he was in the army but did not seem to have any real bad memories of the war!

He later thanked me for interviewing him.

By John Whitehouse

Mary J. Berry

We visited the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home during National Nursing Home Week. I interviewed Mrs. Mary Josephine Berry. Mrs. Berry was born in 1895, and will be 94 next month. She was born in Boston, Massachusetts. She grew up in Boston and went to everett High School. She said that she walked to school and brought her lunch.

She got married in 1918 and lived in Randolph during the depression. She had two sons who fought in World War II. One in the Navy and the other in the Marines. She spent a lot of time writing letters to her sons.

Mrs. Berry worked as a solderer at a defense plant during World War II and belonged to the Electric Union. She also worked for the Boston School for the Deaf and Blind where she received her PHD (Pusher of Hot Dishes). She retired at the age of 80. Mrs. Berry said she remembers the Spanish American War. She remembers the soldiers coming to City Hospital.

Mrs. Berry said she was working at the Boston School for the Deaf and Blind when President John F. Kennedy was assisnated. They couldn't believe it.

She also said she has to like sports because her grandson was born blind and he loves sports. He calls her every day to talk about sports to tell her the scores. She said when she was young they posted the score cards in store windows because there weren't any radios or televisions.

Mrs. Berry lives at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home and has been there for the past five years. Her daughter lives in Hingham.

Visit to Cohasset Knoll

I liked visiting the Cohasset Knoll nursing home. It was really fun finding out about what it was like when the people of Cohasset Knoll were young. I met this lady who was one hundred and five years old. I learned a lot about the past. One of the questions I asked was did you have a lot of homework? Two people said no and one said yes.

I am one of the winners in the art contest. I won first prize in the contest. Hopefully, I will get to go back to the Knoll in the future.

Emma Kanies

When we went to the Cohasset Knoll on Tuesday, May 16, I interviewed Ms. Emma Kanies. She is 86 years old and happy.

She was born in Chicago in 1903, and was one of five children. She had only one good toy, one of the first plastic dolls made. Her clothese were homespun. She went to school for six years. Her favorite sport was baseball, which she learned to play from her three brothers. When she first started working, she earned $3.00 a week.

Ms. Kanies has lived in Cohasset for 10 years. She especially likes the scenery here.

I enjoyed my half hour at the Knoll. I would like to go back and visit with more people soon.

Cohasset Knoll interviews

Mary Thomas

I interviewed Mary Thomas. Her age is seventy-nine and she looks great!! Her hobbies were swimming, baseball, tennis, traveling and dancing. She was married twice to Ronald Thomas and Randel Schleich. She had one child, age 44 and his name is Robert Schleich. Unfortunately she is one-legged. Mary lived in Somerville for 35 years and traveled all over and cruised.

For pets she had a cat, dog, and canary. Her favorite books to read are Danielle Steele and Readers Digest. She commented, "I like Cohasset: couldn't ask for a better place, and nice and clean." Mary also said the Knoll is very nice as long as you're not nasty and she's been there for one year. Mary was born in Boston in 1909 on December 30th. When Mary was my age she exercised and had lots of fun. Her favorite event in childhood was dancing and swimming. She traveled all over the U.S.A. and London, the Carribean, and on a cruise. She also commented "I like the environment." She has lots of souvenirs. Mary also commented "I love my room!"

I'm really glad I got to spend time with Mary.

By Jason Murphy

Anne Bowden

At the Cohasset Knoll, I interviewed Anne Bowden who is 84 years old. She was married twice, but they are both dead. She has two daughters and one son. Grover is the youngest and 59. The oldest is Ruth, 66. Rosemay is 63 and in the middle.

She was born in England, and moved when she was 6.

Mrs. Bowden was 12 years old during the Great Depression.

No one had cars, but they had street cars-cars that went on tracks.

She finished all the years of school, but only the rich went to college.

She said the prices of food were much different. For instance, a loaf of bread was 12¢, a dozen eggs were 25¢, and a pound of butter was 35¢.

During World War II, she worked in a factory making machine-gun bullets. After that, she worked at a shipyard in Hanover.

She was working at a place in Braintree when President Kennedy was shot, and men brought radios to listen to the news. When they heard the awful news, the boss said to go home.

The Cohasset Knoll House was a very nice place, and I met some very nice people there.

Mary Thomas

I had a very interesting interview with a lady named Mary Thomas at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home. She was born on December 30, 1909, in Boston, Massachusetts. Her hobbies were swimming and dancing. Her favorite foods are pot roast and spaghetti.

Mary Thomas has thirteen brothers and sisters. Unfortunately, her mother died at the age of thirty-nine. Of the thirteen children in her family, there are only five alive today. When Mary was young she worked as a waitress. For her final career she was a switchboard operator. She has a child of her own named Robert Schleich.

When John F. Kennedy was shot she was working, waiting on people in a restaurant. She was thirty-three years old when Pearl Harbor was bombed.

Mary said that teachers were very strict when she went to school. She loves to travel alot.

I had a very nice time at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home. I hope I'll be able to go back and visit again.

Interviews at Cohasset Knoll . . .

On May 16, nineteen students went to the Cohasset Knoll Center for the elderly. We went to interview individuals, to ask questions and opinions on things that have happened during their lives. People like Helen and Winnie live there now and for the rest of their lives.

There is even a woman there who is one hundred and four years old. She will be one hundred five on the twenty-eighth of May.

Some of these people moved from the South and remember it distinctly while others remember nothing about it.

If you ever go into a nursing home you might feel distress because of the frail people that live there.

Most people have ailments. Some can't walk and some can't talk. Some can't even move their fingers correctly. There is a special disability that affects many. Scientists and doctors still do not know what causes it. It affects the brain. They think the mind gets clogged and is stopped on a memory of something or someone.

I feel sorry for the people there. Some feel they are stuck and in a way they are. They must live there now until the day they die. I am just glad there are people who show enough lvoe, patience, and kindness to take care of them.

A visit to the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home

Yesterday, we visited the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home on Rt. 3A. The "Knoll," is a very quiet and cheerful place, where many interesting older people are cared for. It was our pleasure to interview Nellie.

Nellie was born on August 2, 1909 in the state of Nellie and her ten brothers and sisters to a farm in Hingham, Mass. In Hingham, Nellie attended school until the sixth grade. The subjects taught were Math, Reading, Spelling, and Writing.

Nellie later married and raised four children. When we asked her what was her most exciting moment, she said, it was when her grandaughter adopted a little girl, making her a Great-Grandmother.

Now Nellie is happy and well at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home. Her hobbies are knitting, sewing and exercising. We were very glad to interview Nellie and make a new friend as well. We wish her a long and happy life at the "Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home."

Hortense

I felt scared when I went to the Knoll. I felt sorry for the lady I interviewed. I really wished she was more happy. When I saw her in the window she looked really happy, but looks can be deceiving. When I went in I said to myself that I would like to see the lady that was near the window. So I did, and I could tell by the way she answered my questions that she didn't like it. Inside I felt that maybe I shouldn't bother this lady, but when it was done I was glad that I did do it, because I made a new friend.

Hortense said that she remembered the Pearl Harbor attack of W.W.2. She lived in a 30 year old house in Norwell. She said that she had moved five times, from country to city and now to here, and that she was stuck in the nursing home. I asked her about education today and she said that it is worse then before, and she doesn't like what is being teached in the schools. She told me that the prices today are higher than before, and that she likes the city life because on the South Shore there isn't anything to do. She said that when J.F.K. was shot she was at home in Boston and she didn't care about him at all. Hortense said that she was born in the country and went to grammar school. Automobiles were just starting out back then she said.

Helen Fletcher

Helen Fletcher is an 83 year old woman. When she was born she lived in Scituate in a 7 room house on Jeracho Lane. The house is about 145 years old now. When she was born there were oil lamps, t.v.s weren't invented, neither were cars. They either walked or rode a horse. She was one of eight children. Their clothes were made by hand until the age of five then they were bought from the store. Mrs. Fletcher went to Jenkins School, where the grades were up to nineth, then the nineth grade got transferred to the Scituate High School, where she also went. She said there was too much homework, I don't blame her! There was one classroom per grade, but more than one class in a room. They didn't go home for lunch.

At home her chores were dusting, sweeping, washing dishes, and other housework. Later she worked at the post office for eleven years. She said there was no Community Center. Also she said that prices today are not extravagant, that the prices go with the time. She had 4 children.

Swim team tryouts

Tryouts for the 1989 Cohasset Swim Team will take place at the Swim Center Friday, June 16 from 3 to 5 p.m. and Saturday, June 17 from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m.

The team roster will be posted at 4 p.m. on Saturday and registration and payment of fees will take place at that time.

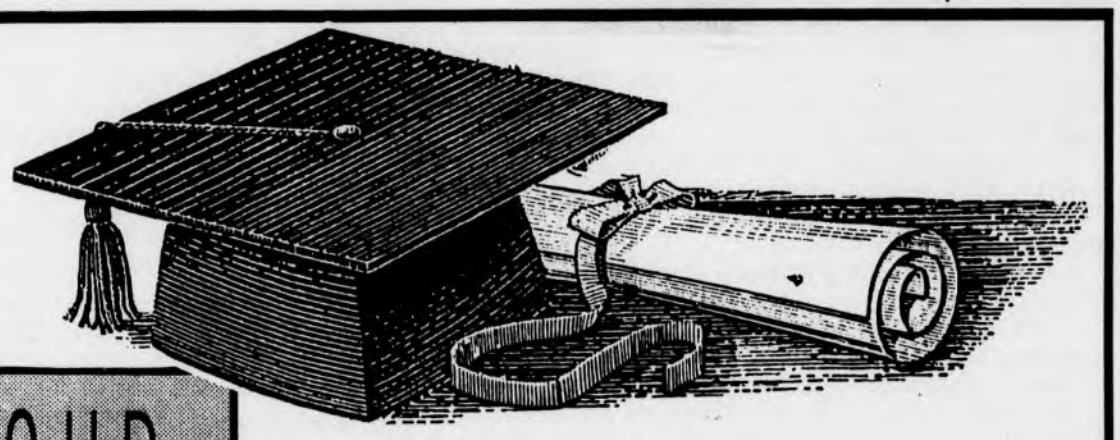
Fees will be $45 for the 1st child, $45 for the second child from the same family, $25 for the third, and no charge for the 4th child. All swim team members must be members of the Cohasset Swim Center, either with their families ($125) or as junior members ($50 per child).

Swimmers in age categories from 8 and under to 16 and under are invited. Practices are held for one hour on weekday mornings and meets with teams from Scituate, Hanover and Duxbury on Friday afternoons. Come and be part of a great Cohasset tradition!

Great Woods Art Concert

The Great Woods Institute is holding their 1st annual art contest for students in grades 3-8. "Pictures at an Exhibition" by Russian composer Modeste Mussorgsky is the theme. Students at Deer Hill School have been studying and learning about the music aspects with Mr. MacInnis and student teacher Rachel Grabke. Mrs. O'Malley has been preparing and guiding the students in art class with their drawings. All students entering the contest will receive 2 complimentary tickets to a special children's concert to be held at Great Woods on July 15 when the Pittsburgh Symphony will present "Pictures at an Exhibition." Winners will have their drawings exhibited at the Great Woods Center for the Performing Arts in Mansfield, MA.

Playground notice



Osgood Playpark is underway after the June 3 & 4 preliminary construction. We ask all visitors to please avoid the site of Osgood School Grounds June 10 & 11. Heavy equipment, delivery trucks, high powered tools will all be on site as well as over 150 workers.

OSHA regulations strictly prohibit anyone under 18 on site. We must enforce this for the safety of our workers and you and your children.

We realize children are excited and may want to see the progress but must request any visitors come only on June 10 from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. accompanied by an adult and do not cross yellow security lines.

We have planned a dedication ceremony for all to see the completed playpark Monday, June 12. All are welcome to join our parade by marching or cheering the children along the parade route from Cohasset Common to Osgood School beginning at 9:15 a.m.

The Deer Hill Band, an antique fire truck, bubble truck and more will lead us to the ribbon cutting at Osgood Playpark. Volunteers, the children, the people of Cohasset who all supported and rallied behind this community endeavor are all encouraged to join in the fun!

First championship for 12-1 team

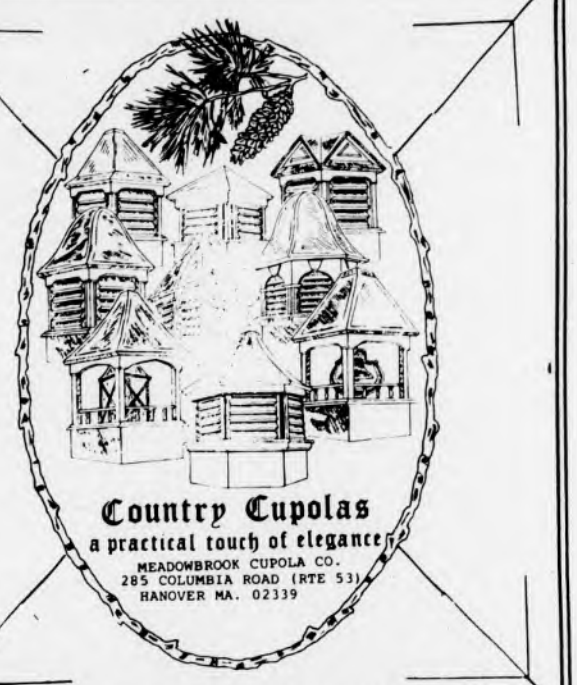
Girls' Under 12-1 battered Carver 6-0 to win Cohasset's first sectional championship in that age group in southeastern Massachusetts' Coastal League. The victory highlighted the tenth week of spring soccer competition, which also saw Boys' Under 10-1 win and need only a tie in a makeup game with Pembroke to take its section title as well.

The Under 12-1 girls, coached by Nino D'Urso, finished their regular season at 8-0-2, scoring 30 goals to their opponents' five. Against Carver, Cohasset got four goals from Melinda Johnansen, and single tallies from Erin Murphy and Danielle Nohe.

Boys' Under 10-1 beat Hanover 5-3 to run its record to 7-1-1, getting three goals from Burke Davis, and single scores from Ryan Staszko and Jamie Buick. Coach Terry Kahn reported strong games by Tom Kittle and Burke Corcoran, too.

The two other Under 10 boys' squads, in a quirk of scheduling, faced each other at Milliken Field. 10-2, as expected, won 5-0, but not before coach Jamie Ross' 10-3 players put up a good struggle. Nate Cotter and John Kasameyer each scored twice, and Justin Golden picked up the fifth goal. Others playing well for coach Paul Cotter were Colton Ralston and Leigh Atherton.

Girls' Under 14-1 fell to Hingham 4-0. Goalkeeper Jennifer Knowles was outstanding, and defender Jen Anstead and forward Colby Lawrence also earned praise.



Girls' Under 16 played powerful Plymouth nearly even, losing 2-1 despite Lisa Coates' score. Michelle Woodlawn got the assist, and the defense got strong play from Linda Hague and goalkeeper Jessica McDonald.

. Girls' Under 12-2 fell to Carver 4-1. Amie Theriault, on a direct kick from outside the penalty area, scored for Cohasset, and Katie Campbell, Megan Fahey and Lena Roukounakis all had outstanding games for coach Sandy Theriault.

In other boys' play, Under 14-1 were beaten by Plymouth 4-1, with Eric Drysdale scoring for coach Steve Endris' squad. Under 14-2 were beaten by Marshfield 3-0 in a close contest. Goalkeeper Wes DeSantis, and halfbacks Brian Duffy and Tyler Studds all had good games.

Boys' Under 12-1 lost to Kingston, while Under 12-3 stopped Rockland. Under 12-2 fell to Plymouth 8-1, getting a goal from Brett MacQuarrie, on an assist by Joey Magner. Defenders John Whitehouse and Jason Murphy also played well for coach Peter Mangan. Finally, Under 16-2 were edged by Hingham 3-2.

Latter-day Saints sermon

The sermon at the June 11 9 a.m. sacrament meeting of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will be on the subject: Service to the Lord.

Elder Donald Dresser, 19, of Duxbury will be guest speaker along with his parents, George and Mary Dresser.

Dresser has served a mission for the church for the past two years in the Ventura, California area and will report on the blessings received. He will return this month to Brigham Young University to complete his education in political science.

St. Stephen's Church

St. Stephen's Church, The Rev. E. Clifford Cutler, Rector, 383-1083.

GRADUATING CHURCH SCHOOL

Sunday, June 4 students graduating from the primary class to the intermediate will receive a Bible, and those completing the intermediate class will receive a Book of Common Prayer. Ann Senechal will complete the Intermediate Class, and Morgan Bigley, Kyle Whiteley, Ian Simons, and Ryan Staszko will graduate into the Intermediate Class. Congratulations.

VEDANTA CENTER ANNIVERSARY

The Vedanta Center, a community in the Hindu tradition centering around the search for wisdom, celebrates its 80th anniversary on June 11. The Rector, along with Mr. Ritts of the 2nd Congregational Church, has been asked to speak. Shuma Chadravarty from the Vedanta Center has in the past talked at St. Stephen's about prayer. Celebrating at the 10 a.m. service at St. Stephen's on that day will be Fr. John Gallop.

OSGOOD PLAYGROND DATE

The proposed playground at the Osgood School will be constructed over the weekend of June 10 & 11. It is not too late to volunteer to help in the playground construction. To do so, leave word at the church office or call Ann Whiteley at 383-9310.

CARILLON RECITALS TO BEGIN

Sally Slade Warner will begin our 65th season of carillon recitals on Sunday, June 11 at 6 p.m. Bring a picnic supper and lawn chair to the Common and listen to her marvelous program of music. There will be five more recitals before work will begin on the carillon renovation scheduled to commence at the end of July.

Funds continue to come in support of the Cohasset Carillon Renovation. If you would like to make a contribution in honor of a loved one, you may send a check to St. Stephen's Church payable to Cohasset Carillon Renovation. Names will be recorded in a Book of Remembrance, and on a special plaque for those who contribute the cost of a bell.

HOST FAMILIES NEEDED

The New Sound Choir made up of 30 junior and senior high students from the United Methodist Church in Haddonfield, New Jersey, will present a dramatic choral concert at St. Stephen's on June 25 at 7:30 p.m. Included as a special highlight will be an abridged version of the popular Broadway Musical, "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat," which will be staged in costume. Other music will include: "O Magnify the Lord," "How Excellent is Thy Name" and more.

Families are needed to put two students up for the night on Sunday and send them off with a breakfast early Monday morning. If you are interested in hosting two students for this short interval of time, please leave word at the church office.

GARDEN TO BE DEDICATED

The South Shore Art Center will dedicate the Shirley F. Neer Garden at the Art Center Sunday, June 11 at 4 p.m. Shirley Neer was president of the Art Center and an active parishioner at St. Stephen's for many, many years. All members of St. Stephen's are invited to attend.

Second Congregational Church

Minister: Gary A. Ritts, Secretary: Muriel Wheelwright. Office phone: 383-0345, Parsonage phone: 383-1422. Office hours: Monday through Friday, 9-noon.

Stroke club meets June 20

The North River Easter Seal Stroke Club will meet Tuesday, June 20, at 12 p.m. at Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant, 44 Border Street.

The Stroke Club members will be having a June luncheon with the Cohasset Exercise Group. If anyone wishes to attend the luncheon, to learn more about both the Stroke Club and the Cohasset Exercise Group, call Catherine Watson at the Norwell Council on Aging, at 659-7878.

Easter Seal Stroke Club members include people who have had a stroke, their families, and friends. Monthly meetings provide the peer support necessary for recovery, with programs that help strokers understand their disabilities and how to cope with them.

For more information about Easter Seal Stroke Clubs or other services, call 508-997-1553.

First Parish services

Rev. Edward T. Atkinson, Minister, Parish House (617) 383-1100, 23 North Main Street.

PARISH NEWS:

At Tuesday's Parish Committee meeting, Deborah Eaton was re-elected as Chair of the Parish Committee, and Shelley Weier was elected to Clerk.

WOMEN'S BOOK GROUP:

The next meeting of the Women's Book Group will be on Tuesday, June 27 in the Living Room of the Parish House at 7:30 p.m. Anywhere But Here, by Mona Simpson, will be discussed.

The book for July will be The Radiant Way, by Margaret Drabble, and we'll be meeting on July 25 at BetteNelson's,10 Poplar Ave., Scituate.

SOUTH SHORE HABITAT

The exciting news from South Shore Habitat is that the house in Randolph is nearing completion. Work parties from First Parish and St. Stephen's have worked on this house. The dedication of the house will be at 11:00 a.m. on Saturday, June 17, and anyone is more than welcome to attend.

This year June 11 through June 18 will be Habitat for Humanity's Annual House-Raising Week. The function of this "world-wide building blitz" is to draw attention to the critical shortage of decent affordable housing, to unite the more than 400 worldwide Habitat projects, and to raise support and recruit volunteers locally. South Shore Habitat will be focusing on the house in East Bridgewater during this week. They anticipate to be working 2 shifts on this house all week. If anyone is able to volunteer for a day or a portion of a day, your help will be greatly appreciated. First Parish and St. Stephen's will be working together on this house on Saturday, June 17. Volunteers are needed for Saturday as well as during the week. A very rewarding way to spend a day. Sign up with Roger Whitley, 383-6312.

VILLAGE FAIR NEWS:

1990 will be a landmark year for the Village Fair. It is the 50th Anniversary, and hopes are that it will prove to be a special day in many ways. Before we even begin to plan for this, our priority is to ascertain who will lend a helping hand.

First Parish will be chairing the Fair. A big portion of the responsibilities rests on our laps. A good deal of the work involves phone calls, organizing meetings and workshops, planning sessions, obtaining necessary permits, etc. Thankfully we will have instruction passed down to us from this year's Fair. And we all know many hands make light work. So, before you start filling up your calendar with other commitments, we ask that you give some thought about helping out. Any success or failure reflects on First Parish.

Madeline Olney will be on the Central Committee for the third year in a row. She needs several others to work for her. Please try to be one of those who commit.

COUNCIL ON AGING —

The Cohasset Council on Aging is a town agency under the direction of the Board of Selectmen. The purpose of a Council is to coordinate and carry out programs and services to meet the problems of the Aging in coordination with programs of the Executive Office of Elder Affairs (Mass. General Law 495 C40 S 8B.) The Council submits an annual report to the Town to be printed in the Annual Town Report and a copy is compiled for the Executive Office Of Elder Affairs.

As a Town Department, the Council may appoint a staff such as a Director, Clerks and any other employees it may require. The Council on Aging consists of Nine (9) voting and Three (3) associate members appointed by the Board of Selectmen. The Officers for the 1988-89 are: Chairperson, Rev. John J. Keohane; Vice Chairperson, Gerard Keating, Secretary, Dorothea Bjorkgren; Treasurer, Margaret Casey.

Voting members are Tony Finegan, Ed Mulvey, Lillian Lincoln, Mary Donovan, Helen Barbary, Jane Hamilton Assoc. Member, Liaison: Ann Hublitz, Chairman Family Services, Social Service League, Mary Ahearn, South Shore Elder Services.

The Council meets the First Monday of each month at 11 a.m. at the Cohasset Senior Center. Meetings are open to the public. The Senior Center is located at the Cohasset Community Center, 3 No. Main St., and a staff is available for information and referrals regarding local, State and Federal programs, Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

STAFF: Kathy Bryanton, COA Director, Marguerite Rittershaus, Senior Aide, Pat Ryan, Shine Coordinator, Susan Connolly, Outreach Worker. Direct services provided by the Council include publication of a monthly newsletter with items of interest to Cohasset Seniors. Senior Shuttle transportation, Outreach-one to one home visits, hot lunch programs, home delivered meals, insurance and tax counseling, information and referral system to all Cohasset residents.

A MESSAGE FROM YOUR OUTREACH WORKER:

I've had the pleasure of meeting many townspeople since my arrival at the Senior Center in February. I'd like to thank you for welcoming me here in Cohasset. For those of you not familiar with OUTREACH "Webster's definition is as follows: "The act of reaching out-provision of services to those unable to seek them." My role is to meet Seniors in the community, identify their needs and assist in meeting those needs. If you are in need of transportation, homemaking assistance, housing, legal assistance or have any questions about activities at the Center you might like to participate in, or questions in general, please contact me at 383-9112. I am in the office Wednesdays 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. If you leave a message, I will contact you promptly. Please be aware the OUTREACH service is free!

CONGRATULATIONS TO: Virginia Anderson, Jack Hubbard, Gerard Keating and Ann Leonard. We are pleased and proud of our 4 Senior Cohasset athletes that were recently honored at the 7th Annual Senior Olympics held in Quincy May 15 to 20. A total of 13 medals in all with Ann Leonard again the top winner with 8 GOLD medals — Cohasset has a lot to be proud of!

JOBS AVAILABLE FOR SENIORS —

Do you enjoy talking on the phone? Do you have time on your hands that could be turned into dollars? A new business in Norwell is looking for a part time customer service telephone representative — Monday-Friday — 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. or 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. You can make your own schedule and adjust the hours to meet your needs. If you have a friendly enthusiastic phone manner or if you are currently in the customer service field and looking for new opportunities, call Lyle Heap at 1-982-8090 (ROCKLAND) and join the new discount wallcovering company based in Norwell. Rate $6 per hour.

STATE AWARDS — $13,835

The Executive Office of Elder Affairs has awarded the Cohasset Council On Aging with two grants under the Discretionary Grant Program 1989. This first grant will be used to continue the regional program serving Health Information Needs of Elders (SHINE) program with Pat Ryan. The second grant will be used to continue the Council's Outreach program with Susan Connolly. The Executive Office of Elder Affairs received a record 175 proposals from 140 communities, totaling $1.4 million dollars requested. The Cohasset Council On Aging is very pleased and honored to have been the recipient of two grants given the financial concerns in the State of Mass. today. We look forward to building a better partnership with the Dept. of Elder Affairs in helping to make life a little better for the growing number of Seniors living here in Cohasset and their families.

June has now arrived and I would like to welcome back all our friends who have been away for the winter months. Please come and join us at the Senior Center — Our doors are always open. Check the monthly Vista or information printed in the Mariner for upcoming trips and programs.

POSTURING

Posture is the relative alignment of body parts which determines a body's vertical shape. In a properly aligned body there is no strain on any one part. Weight is evenly distributed on bones and joints. Muscles are in balanced alignment. How people carry themselves and the positions in which they sit and stand affect thedegree of weight on the bones. Also affected are the length and strength of the muscles that move those bones. Especially affected are the thirty-three bony blocks, or verterbrae, that make up the spinal column. Over time, poor posture can result in a host of musculoskeletal syndromes—pinched nerves, strained muscles, inflamed ligaments, torn discs or cartilage, and distorted bones. The doctor of chiropractic can help restore the body's proper posture.

Such chiropractic techniques will address existing situations while affording a routine that will help prevent other problem conditions from developing. SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC welcomes your calls and visits so that you may better enjoy today as well as tomorrow in a total state of well-being. Located at 80 Front St., Scituate Harbor. Tel. 545-7388. By appt. Early morning and late evening appts. Workers Comp cases, VISA, M/C and most insurance plans accepted.

HINT: Poor posture greatly increases the chances of a woman's developing postmenopausal osteoporosis.

Lawsuit against town is dismissed . . .

County Superior Court Judge James Lynch, all the defendants named in the lawsuit were cleared of the charges.

"This is excellent news for the town and the individuals involved as well," said sewer commissioner Guild this week. "It really underscores the importance of providing legal fees for the town's operating budget. People complain about legal fees. But the truth is, we are living in a suing society and we have to be prepared by providing legal expenses."

The plaintiff can file an appeal of the verdict. Atty. Frank McGee, representing Salvador, could not be reached for comment this week.

Cohasset's labor counsel Robert Garrett, represented the defendants and filed a motion for summary judgement. Following a hearing on that motion, Judge Lynch ruled in favor of the defendants on both counts. In the lawsuit, Salvador alleged that there was intentional interference with his contractual arrangement with the sewer commission, and that the commission breached its obligation to deal in good faith with their employee.

Garrett noted," I think the sewer commissioners should be commended. Although they were sued personally, they never shied away from this case."

He added, "You have a group of town officials who are trying to do their best and had good reason to do what they did. They acted in good faith. They ought to get a pat on the back. Otherwise, I think cities and towns are going to have a difficult time attracting qualified people to public office."

Salvador, a state-certified supervisor of the treatment plant for 16 years, was suspended from that position by the commission in December, 1986. At that time, the commissioners said Salvador left the plant unsupervised during his annual December vacation, and he refused to return despite their requests.

In the lawsuit against the commission, the former superintendent said his position was secure and, according to his employers, he would not be in a position to look for employment elsewhere., "Various members of the commission continuously stated over a long period of time that (Salvador) was an essential employee and that his retirement would be secure at all times during the course of his employment. (Salvador) believed and relied upon the assertions of the defendants," the complaint stated.

Immediately following his suspension in December, 1986, Salvador suffered a heart attack. The commission voted to hire a private firm to manage the wastewater treatment plant and later in 1987, the superintendent's position was abolished.

According to the charges filed by Salvador's attorney, annual town meeting voted in April, 1987 to continue the position of treatment plant supervisor and to provide a salary for that position. "Notwithstanding the vote of town meeting, defendants unlawfully terminated plaintiff on June 30, 1987," according to the lawsuit filed in superior court.

Loss of employment caused Salvador to "lose financial and other benefits," the charge stated. He also alleged the position was terminated so the town could avoid paying his $20,000 salary and various employment benefits.

In the decision handed down by Judge Lynch, he noted that "the undisputed facts clearly establish that efficiency and economy constituted valid reasons for dismissing Salvador and hiring the independent contractor."

His final order was that the lawsuit against the four defendants be dismissed.

Town meeting action

Town Meeting took the following action Monday night, May 5, at Cohasset High School's gym:

*Adopted a resolution "recording deep appreciation for the services rendered by James Gallagher."

Gallagher recently completed a term as selectman. He had also served on the recreation commission.

The resolution was proposed by selectmen.

*Rescinded the borrowing authority for the purchase of three school buses.

*Rejected paying longevity to certain elected officials.

*Postponed the following appropriations indefinitely:

*$27,000 for a truck and body for the wire department.

*$60,000 for the testing, refurbishing and equipping Ladder I of the fire department.

*$7,000 for a used dog van.

Selectman Diana Kornet suggested that an old police cruiser be used.

*$15,000 to paint old town hall.

*$16,735 for a ride-on lawn mower for the tree, park and cemetery department.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 96177T4 96177T5

NOTICE OF FIDUCIARY'S ACCOUNT

To all persons interested in the estate of Mary C. Bigelow late of Cohasset, in said County, deceased.

You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 72 that the 8th through 10th accounts of Francis C. Welch and Thomas N. Dabney as trustees under the fifth codicil fbo Stephanie B. Neal (formerly Bigelow) (being the 45th through 47th accounts of the trust), and the 11th through the 12th accounts of Thomas N. Dabney and Kenneth S. Safe, Jr., (being the 48th & 49th accounts of the trust), as Trustees (the fiduciaries) under fifth codicil of the will of said deceased for the benefit of Stephanie B. Neal (formerly Bigelow) have been presented to said Court for allowance.

If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection to said accounts, you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before the fifth day of July, 1989, the return day of this citation. You may upon written request by registered or certified mail to the fiduciary, or to the attorney for the fiduciary, obtain without cost a copy of said accounts. If you desire to object to any item of said accounts, you must, in addition to filing a written appearance as aforesaid, file within thirty days after said return day or within such other time as the Court upon motion may order a written statement of each such item together with the grounds for each objection thereto, a copy to be served upon the fiduciary pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 5.

WITNESS, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this twenty-fourth day of May, 1989.

Estate of HELEN L. YOUNG late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that GORDON K. YOUNG of KINGSTOWN in the State of RHODE ISLAND be appointed executor named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on July 12, 1989.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the thirtieth day of May, one thousand nine hundred and eighty nine.

CHARLOTTE R. ALMEIDA A/K/A CHARLOTTE RICHARDS, and her heirs, successors, assigns, administrators and executors

ORDER OF NOTICE

To Charlotte R. Almeida, a/k/a Charlotte Richards, her heirs, successors, assigns, administrators and executors

A complaint, in the above entitled action, was filed on March 15, 1989 in which said Charlotte R. Almeida, a/k/a Charlotte Richards, her heirs, successors, assigns, administrators and executors are named defendants and it appearing that said defendants are of Parts Unknown and no personal service of said complaint has been made upon them, it is therefore ORDERED: that said plaintiffs notify the said defendants, Charlotte R. Almeida, a/k/a Charlotte Richards, her heirs, successors, assigns, administrators and executors of the pendency thereof by publishing an attested copy of this order in the COHASSET MARINER, a newspaper published in Cohasset, in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts once a week for three successive weeks, the return of such service to be verified by affidavit, that said defendants may then and there cause a written appearance to be entered, and written answer or other lawful pleading to be filed in the office of the Clerk of said Court at Dedham, in the County of Norfolk, Commonwealth of Massachusetts within twenty days after the last day of publication.

Landfill volunteers thanked

The Board of Health thanks Phyllis and Doug Peck, Elizabeth Durant, June and Jack Hubbard, Michael Sullivan and Sharon Becker for filling dozens of trash bags with litter from the landfill last Sunday.

The volunteers report the daisies and other wildflowers are doing very well on the landfill slopes. They also hope their hard work will be rewarded by homeowners securely bagging their trash in order to prevent future litter problems. Especially troubling are loose plastic bags and styrofoam cups and pellets which seem to end up everywhere.

The Board of Health reminds homeowners of the mandatory recycling by-law passed at last year's Town Meeting, which will be strictly enforced once the Transfer station starts operating in August. Recycling Guides are available at Town Hall when receiving the new Facility Sticker, which are for sale now.

Remember that the landfill is now closed on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Highpoint director on cable

Edward T. Lees, Ph.D., President of Highpoint in Plymouth and Kingston, R.I., will be Wigmore Pierson's guest, live, on Pierson to Person Thursday, June 8, 8 to 9 p.m.

Highpoint is an inpatient residential facility for the treatment of alcoholism. Dr. Lees has been a pioneer utilizing his concept of "Integrated Change Therapy" in the treatment of the disease.

This program will be aired live on Cable Channels 3 and 53. Viewers may talk directly with Dr. Lees with questions relating to alcoholism.

First Parish votes to house the homeless

Quincy, Scituate and Pembroke are already participating in the program, in addition to Hingham.

Early this year, a family was housed at the Curtis Estate in Cohasset as part of the Homeshare program, she noted.

"There was one family in there for three months," said Newell.

"Now they are in their own home."

The problem of homelessness is growing out of control, according to Newell.

"But churches are in the forefront of doing something about it," she said.

Rev. Atkinson suggested the idea of a temporary shelter to parishioners in a sermon on homelessness last fall.

"Faith Nazarene in Hingham has been doing this for almost five years," he explained.

"I thought it was exemplary.

"We had good facilities and I thought it might be able to make sense here.

"Parishioners took the sermon seriously."

Church member Marie Caristi discussed the proposal at the annual meeting.

She noted that the church's outreach committee has already started to address housing problems by its involvement with the Habitat for Humanity Organization.

"Habitat for Humanity addresses the problem of world shelter by building low-cost, affordable housing, and serves as an outstanding model for long term solutions to the problem of affordable and decent shelter," she said in the annual report.

"Providing temporary shelter to families in crisis is more of a short term solution to the problem but very necessary to preserve or restore the dignity of a family in crisis who has lost the ability to provide itself with shelter altogether," said Caristi.

"Homeshare will connect its clients with public assistance agencies and give them approximately three months to find another dwelling.

...."We as individuals are limited in what we can do to effect change," she continued, "but by making minor alterations to one of our buildings to accommodate just one small family for a brief time and then another as the need exists, we can increase the network of shelters and the awareness in our community of the need for more shelters."

After about an hour of discussion, the proposal to go forward with the project was approved by a clear majority at the annual meeting, according to Rev. Atkinson.

"We have been drawing plans and talking to the building inspector," he said.

Rev. Atkinson said the committee working on the shelter is excited about the project.

"There is some good energy," he said.

"I hope we will be able to do this in about six months."

Funding for the project will come from the Outreach Reserve Fund created by a $25,000 donation from Warner Brothers Studio which filmed "The Witches of Eastwick" in town several summers ago.

Rev. Atkinson added that people are also encouraged to provide temporary shelter in their homes, as well.

"There is a need for this on the South Shore," he said.

Hard work over, now it's time for all to play

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

With song and much celebration, the long-awaited Osgood Playpark was opened to the children of Cohasset.

The students of the Osgood School waited anxiously, but with great patience, as the dedication ceremonies continued early Monday morning. Finally, following a parade from the town common to the school, several brief speeches and a few songs, the delighted children exploded into the playground as they took their first swings and slides.

The playpark, a genuine community effort completed through the fundraising and physical labor of hundreds of residents, was completed late Sunday night. By Monday morning's dedication ceremonies, some of the slides and fire poles were unuseable because the cement had yet to dry.

But that did not stop the festivities. Under brilliant sunshine, hundreds of smiling faces filled the streets of Cohasset Village, as Osgood students marched to tunes performed by the Deer Hill Band while they wound their way to the elementary school.

The children and their teachers, bedecked in yellow playpark teeshirts, carried handmade paper torches and paper flowers in celebration of the long-awaited playground opening.

Banners held by the marching students proclaimed, "Thank you for the Osgood Playpark," expressing their gratitude to the entire community for

All is well for local couple now in China

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Selectmen Ned Tebbetts and his wife, Priscilla, "are safe and have a lot of stories to tell" about their travels in China, according to one of their sons.

The Tebbetts, who live on Jerusalem Drive, have been touring China for three weeks, and are due home this week.

China has been the site of student unrest, particularly in Beijing where troops killed hundreds, some say thousands, of protesters in a massacre June 3-4 in Tiananmen Square.

Charlie Tebbetts, 24, of Allston, said he called his parents last Friday, June 9, at their hotel in Hong Kong.

"I wanted to make sure they were ok," said Tebbetts.

"I spoke to the travel agency, and got the phone number of the place they were staying," said Tebbetts.

The tour, planned a year ago, was arranged through Intrav in St. Louis, according to Tebbetts, a recent graduate of Hampshire College.

"I talked to my parents for about a half hour ," said Tebbetts.

"We had an excellent connection.

"It was 4 in the afternoon here, but 4 in the morning there.

"I woke them up."

Tebbetts said his parents were impressed with the Chinese young people.

"They were turned away at different intersections because of demonstrations," he said.

They visited Tiananmen Square, the Monday and Thursday before the massacre occurred.

Local author brings to life a story of inspiration

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

E. J. "Terry" Kahn is a writer who has taken risks. But when he left his job for a long-distance assignment in New York City, he realized this time it would be a real crapshoot.

Before he took a leave as senior editor of Boston Magazine, Kahn needed to talk with the couple with whom he would be co-authoring a book. In the purest sense, he would be their ghostwriter, helping to tell an inspirational story of a New York couple whose lives were altered by catastrophic tragedy. They would provide the storyline-the words would be his.

He travelled to New York about a year ago to meet Patti Ann and Steven McDonald. The 42-year-old Harvard graduate returned to his home in Cohasset, assured that their story deserved to be told. And he was the writer to do that.

Steve, Kahn vaguely recalled from a 20/20 segment he happened to watch last year, was a New York City cop who was gunned down in the summer of 1986. Today, he remains the most seriously-injured police officer in this country to survive.

His story is unique, Kahn realized, because McDonald captured the hearts and imagination of strangers. He was in his late 20's, white, handsome, a son of a cop, newly-married to a fair-haired Irish Catholic girl. And they were expecting their first child.

"I was very frightened. I had never spent any time with anybody that injured. I had no experience at this sort of thing." Author Terry Kahn

Steve was expected to die, but he did not, although his medical condition has not improved since the day he was shot by a 15-year-old bike thief in Central Park. Their lives had been immensely altered by Steve's accident, for better and for worse.

The young, handsome Long Island resident is paralyzed from the neck down. He has never held his three-year-old son, nor can he taste the food he is forced-fed.

Each breath is mechanically forced by a respirator which is hooked up to a trachial tube attached to his neck.

But he and his wife survived the ordeal and continue to survive, Kahn said. Their deep faith has freed them from bitterness against the assailant who committed the crime.

Before last year, Kahn had no experience dealing with an incapacitated person. He had never talked to someone who existed within the confines of a wheelchair - who controlled the movements of that chair by blowing or sucking into a plastic straw attached to the vehicle. Before

Cohasset's week . . .

Speed bump protest

A Canton woman has written to selectmen expressing concern about speed bumps at the town beach.

Mrs. Barbara Berry said that she visited the beach on Memorial Day week-end.

"I started to walk on the road in the parking space and didn't see the speed bump," said Berry.

"I tripped over it and landed on the ground.

"X-rays revealed a sprained wrist and thumb and ankle and slight fracture of a toe.

"Fortunately, none of these were serious injuries and I am improving," said Berry.

"However, for a senior citizen such as myself or anyone else for that matter, it could have been much more serious.

"I realize it was my fault, however."

Berry said that the speed bump matches the road and is hard to see.

She said that some speed bumps are striped diagonally on a solid line in a bright paint.

"Perhaps some paint would help prevent this happening to someone else," she said.

Budget cut problems

Town Clerk Frances Marks has written to selectmen that the annual town meeting and election can not be run as efficiently as expected with 9 percent cuts in those budgets.

In a June 8 letter, Marks told selectmen she is upset that she was not put on the advisory committee's agenda to explain the cuts made in those department.

Town departments were asked to cut their budgets by 9 percent when voters did not pass an override of Proposition 2 1/2.

The advisory committee discussed the cuts with many of the departments.

"The chairman of the advisory board mentioned using volunteers at election and town meeting," said Marks.

"I told her that I would not go in that direction as long as I was running my department," she said.

"In reviewing other budgets recommended by the advisory board, I observed that some department budgets were reinstated with all their cuts or a great portion was returned to them including overtime which we were advised to eliminate."

Marks discussed some of the cuts in the election and town meeting budget.

She said that checkers at town meeting would be reduced from six or eight to four, at $5 per hour.

Town moderator William Weeks appoints four counters at $5 per hour, noted Marks.

"There is no money allotted for these people and he will have to ask for volunteers," she said.

Money has not been budget for custodians who work at the high school to open and close the school, added Marks.

According to Marks, a balance of Democrats and Republicans are used as election workers at town elections at $5 an hour.

"As far as town election," she said," I can cut back to eight instead of 12 - this is dangerous - but if we have to cut I can do it only for town elections.

"If this was a year for state elections, I could not make the cut in my workers.

"Please be aware that 1991 we will have to increase my budget to accommodate the state elections (it is mandated to have a two-party balance.)"

Marks said she also cut back on the hours of the custodian for town elections, as well as extra hours for her office staff.

"The final summation of this indicates that both the annual town meeting and the annual town election can not run as efficiently as expected of a town clerk for the people of Cohasset," she said.

Memorial trees

The Cohasset Dramatic Club would like to acknowledge the recent loss of two of its members by an activity such as dedicating a tree planting to them.

"As I'm sure the present board of selectmen realize, the dramatic club lost one of our most treasured members, Helen Ketcham, recently," said Betty Miessner, club president, in a letter to the board.

She also noted the death of Carroll Richards, "who, although not as active as Helen was, will also be highly missed.

"We would like to do something in their memory, such as dedicating a tree planting to them, perhaps on the town hall grounds, or one of the local parks," said Miessner.

"Could you discuss the feasibility of this?"

Selectmen chairman Burt Pratt said at Monday night's meeting that the suggestion was a good idea.

"Particularly since we don't have any money to buy trees," he said.

The board voted to gratefully accept the donation.

Selectmen action

Selectmen took the following action at their meeting Monday night, June 12, at town hall:

•Signed a card for the residents of Souppes-Sur-Loing, France, celebrating the bicentennial of the Revolution of 1789.

John Dean, chairman of the Cultural Exchange Committee, said that the cultural exchange program is seeking Cohasset participants of all ages to visit Souppes, the town's sister city.

Dean also noted the exchange is year-long, not just during the summer.

The telephone company representative will return with a more detailed plan.

•Appointed a Groundwater Protection Committee at the suggestion of health board chairman William Baird.

The committee will look at such things as testing of underground storage tanks, and an emergency plan to handle hazardous spills.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle was opposed to forming the committee.

•Granted a one-day liquor license to Catholic Charities for a function to benefit underprivileged children who attend Sunset Point, Hull, July 8, 5 to 11 p.m. at the Cox Estate.

•Granted an auctioneer's license to Ronald Viselman of R & S Estate Liquidations for June 23, 7 to 10 p.m. at the Cohasset Community Center.

•Congratulated recent school department retirees Patrick Plante, Robert Thompson, Richard Streeter, Phyllis Graykin, Pat Bowen and Sheila Travers.

Eight override questions

Residents will face eight questions on the June 28 Proposition 2 1/2 override ballot.

Included will be two general override questions.

The first option of $303,800 was approved at town meeting.

The second, of $203,800, was originally suggested by the advisory committee.

Town counsel Richard Henderson told selectmen Monday night that the ballot has been approved by the Department of Revenue.

Selectman Diana Kornet said that question eight, regarding the repair and replacement of the roof of the original town hall, was worded almost the same way as on the last ballot.

"I highly recommend against that," she said.

"This is nothing different from the first time."

All but one of the questions on the first ballot was defeated.

The only one which passed regarded a new roof for the Osgood School.

"The shorter the ballot, the better," said Kornet.

"The more money we can get in, the better," said advisory committee member Arne Gjesteby.

"Then that will give us that much more money to work with."

Other ballot questions will ask for:

*$64,348.66 to finance the new police contract.(levy override)

*$100,000 to remove underground gasoline tanks at the Cohasset Fire Station.(capital outlay exclusion)

*$7,500 to purchase defibrillation equipment.(capital outlay exclusion)

*$55,000 to design and engineer a new town cemetery.(debt exclusion)

*$280,000 to expandMilliken/Lillard Field by four acres. (debt exclusion)

Openings for screenings

There are still seven openings for mammogram screenings which will take place Monday, June 19 from 9 a.m to 3 p.m. The private screenings will be held in a mobile van at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Avenue.

The screenings, by appointment only, are sponsored by the Social Service League of Cohasset. To make an appointment for a screening, please call the League at 383-0771 or 383-0821 between 8:30 a.m. and 3 p.m..

Rep. Murray sponsors bill

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, co-sponsored a bill filed by Rep. Stephen Pierce that would change the membership of the Revenue Advisory Board and create new duties for the board.

Currently, the Revenue Advisory Board consists of five members who have been appointed by the Governor. This bill would require that the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Minority Leader of the House of Representatives, the President of the Senate and the Minority Leader of the Senate each appoint one member of the Board and the Governor would appoint the chairperson.

The bill would also expand the duties of the Revenue Advisory Board. The Revenue Advisory Board, presently, oversees state revenue projections and indicates on a quarterly basis whether the revenue estimates made by the Secretary of Administration and Finance are correct or should be revised.

The bill intends to further expand the Board's role by requiring the Board to examine the Commonwealth's total expenditures and determine if the Commonwealth is spending at a greater rate than it is receiving in revenues.

Selectmen to vote whether to appeal ABCC decision

Selectmen said they will hold a "10-minute meeting" Thursday afternoon, June 15, at town hall to decide whether to appeal a ruling by the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission regarding Cohasset Central Market.

During the meeting, which will actually be a continuation of the Monday night meeting, a vote of the full board will be taken.

Selectmen Ned Tebbetts, who has been out of the country, was not able to attend the meeting earlier this week.

The ABCC recently reversed the the decision of selectmen who revoked the liquor license of Cohasset Central Market in February.

The board had transferred the market's license last October from James Finucane of Marshfield to Kevin McManus.

But the lease arrangement was never completed, and the store wasn't reopened.

In addition, the Department of Revenue notified the board that a tax matter regarding the market was pending.

Cohasset Central Market appealed the selectmen's action.

In its May 11 decision, the ABCC ruled that the applicant "should be afforded some further opportunity to transfer the license."

"The revocation is disapproved," said the ABCC.

"The commission recommends that the licensee be allowed 90 days from the date of this decision to reopen or transfer the license."

According to the ABCC, there is a ready buyer for the license, even though it is subject to numerous creditor claims.

The local board has the right to appeal the ABCC's decision to Superior Court within 30 days.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson advised the board not to appeal the action.

"All the (ABCC) board said was that there was inadequate time to find a buyer," said Henderson.

"Eight to nine months is not considered a long time."

Selectmen chairman Burt Pratt said that Finucane doesn't have a location to sell.

"If in 90 days, there is no lease or no location, you are not precluded from denying it again," said Henderson.

Selectman Diana Kornet said she agreed that the board should not appeal the ABCC's action.

"It's not right," argued selectman Rocco Laugelle.

"They don't have an address. That bugs me.

"We continually let those people (ABCC) run our town."

Laugelle moved to appeal the ABCC's decision.

It was seconded by selectman Martha Gjesteby.

"It's cheaper to say no here," cautioned Henderson.

The vote was 3 to 1, with Kornet opposed.

Executive secretary Greg Doyon said that he and Henderson agree that the litigation has a very small chance of success.

Gjesteby moved to reconsider the board's action. It was seconded by Kornet.

Advisory committee member Arne Gjesteby commented that the appeal could take a year or two in Superior Court.

The reconsideration was tied at 2-2.

Later in the meeting, Henderson said the appeal to Superior Court could cost "in the thousands."

He also said that it is not as simple as an administrative appeal.

"This may cost us a lot of money," said Kornet.

Selectmen decided to take a vote of the five members Thursday.

Another commercial to be filmed

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Cohasset residents may soon be hearing the words "lights, cameras, action" again.

Selectmen voted Monday night, June 12, to allow September Productions of Boston to film a commercial in town for $1500.

Several years ago, the town was the location for "The Witches of Eastwick" starring actors Jack Nicholson and Cher.

Producer Kevin Shale explained to the board that the commercial will be shot for Continental Cablevisions.

Shale said he would like to film the week of June 21 at such locations as the front of town hall.

"Maybe we will find a baseball field and a track field, too," he said.

Each scene would take about two hours to film, according to Shale.

Executive secretary Greg Doyon said that it will be a small budget commercial.

"They are talking about $250 to $500 for a location fee," he said.

Selectmen chairman Burt Pratt said that Continental Cablevision is the third largest such company in the country.

Pratt said that the last company that filmed a commercial in town paid $1,000.

"$1,500 is very reasonable," he said.

"I would be opposed to allowing them to film for less."

Shale said that $1500 is his whole location budget, and he has 17 locations to shoot.

He noted that merchants would benefit from the crew which would eat in town.

"You are using this as an advertisement," said selectman Martha Gjesteby.

"You are making money."

"I agree it is worth more to you."

Gjesteby also said she was concerned about citizens being upset by the upheaval.

"I enjoy seeing these companies come to town," said selectmen Rocco Laugelle.

He made a motion to accept $1,000 from the company, but the vote was 2-2.

The fifth selectmen, Ned Tebbetts, is out of town.

Pratt made a motion to allow the company to film as many locations as they wish in town for $1500, as long as the filming schedule is submitted beforehand.

Gjesteby was opposed.

A story of inspiration . . .

he met Steve, a quadraplegic was someone he glanced upon from the corner of his eye.

He was nervous during their first meeting. "I was very frightened," he recalled. "I had never spent any time with anybody that injured. I had no experience at this sort of thing." It was with immense relief that Kahn settled easily into a conversation with the former high school athlete, talking about the Knicks, the Jets and a variety of sports teams that Steve followed from a television perched at the foot of his bed.

Local author Terry Kahn

"We shared a lot of the same things," Kahn said. Although it was difficult for the writer to accept that this vibrant young man was breathing only with the constant assistance of a machine, and that he was unable to shake his hand, never mind lift a fork from the table.

"I remember at one point he reclined the wheelchair after he had eaten, and I asked him if that helped him digest his food. He explained that it had nothing to do with that. He had to recline every ten minutes or so to recirculate the blood so it wouldn't settle into the lower portion of his body," Kahn said.

It was at that luncheon that Kahn realized he wanted to write this story for the young couple. He liked Steve and felt comfortable with him and his wife. Beginning in April, 1988, until last July, Kahn travelled each week back and forth from Cohasset to Malverne, Long Island, as he began to gather conversations and recollections that would evolve into "The Steven McDonald Story."

It is finished and has since been selected for the Book of the Month Club and Readers' Digest. It has received two glowing national reviews, according to the relieved author. And it is being serialized beginning this week in New York's News Day newspaper.

"It was scary taking a leave from my job - really scary. Only in the past month have I realized this was probably the right move to make. Until that time, however, before the reviews came out, it was a real crapshoot," he said.

And it was an experience, he said, well worth the time, effort and concern he invested.

The McDonalds are celebrities in the New York area. After the shooting, Kahn recalled, they became instant media figures, followed wherever they went by a flock of photographers and reporters. Famous personalities, including the mayor of New York and Cardinal John O'Connor, have become personal friends. Actress Maureen O'Hara, who starred alongside Steve's favorite actor, John Wayne, in many of his favorite films, visited Steve in the hospital and attended their son, Conor's baptism.

Kahn provided a reason for their notoriety. "Violence against cops in New York and everywhere is now high on the national agenda. Steve is an attractive guy, who was the stereotype of the 'good cop.' Secondly, from 1985 to 1986, it was a bad year for the New York Police Department. Cops were being shot at and hurt, and there were some inside scandals that cast a pall over the department. The public was ready to praise a good cop. And when they had this seriously injured cop, a true victim, all that dammed up affection let go."

The writer also admitted that the shooting gave the notorious New York press a solid opportunity to feed upon a good story. If Steve had died, Kahn stated, the story would have ended with the funeral. Because he survived, there is a continued interest.

"Here we have two people who have no bitterness for what happened to Steve," Kahn said. "They have great compassion for each other and they were able to communicate those feelings in public. If they had been inarticulate or unattractive or bitter, there would be no interest in them."

It was a difficult process for the writer. As a quadraplegic, Steve does not have 'normal' days, Kahn explained. He must be dressed and cleaned each morning - it took a couple of hours before he was settled into the wheelchair. Every other day he must be forced to defecate which could take up to four hours, so sometimes he was not out of his bedroom until one or two in the afternoon. Some days, although they are less frequent, Steve is so depressed he does not get out of bed.

"It wasn't like I could plan on a nine to five day," Kahn said. Instead, Kahn worked a four-day week, driving down to Long Island from Cohasset on Tuesday morning, and staying in Manhattan or at the McDonald's home and leaving by Friday. He would transcribe his notes on Saturdays, Sundays and Mondays and squeeze his family business into those brief weekends home.

"It was really tough," he said, ackowledging that his schedule and the topic of his work were equally difficult for his wife to endure.

Often, Kahn would accompany the McDonald's on their many public appearances. He was on stage with Steve when the New York City Policeman's Association endorsed presidential candidate George Bush. And he was there when the McDonald's attended an event at Howard Beach on Long Island.

"That was really terrible," Kahn recalled. "Steve had an anxiety attack and couldn't get out of the van for a half-hour. It was the first time he was going to talk in public about the accident, and he was frightened."

Kahn said the first time Steve actually realized what had happened that summer night in Central Park was when he read about it in the book. "Until that time, he couldn't figure out why he thanked God he was alive. That chapter gave him the reason. Those cops, he said, had a reason to find him. That's why he was alive," the writer said, explaining that Steve's partner, a sergeant in the department, was so distraught by Steve's injuries he was unable to give their location over the police radio. They were found by two other cops who figured out their location by recalling where the pair had been on a previous patrol.

The most interesting conversations between Steve and the writer took place late at night. Steve has trouble sleeping, and often stays awake until early morning, Kahn said. His wife would lie in bed with her immobile husband, talking until one in the morning. As she walked into a separate bedroom, she would awaken Kahn and tell him that Steve wanted to talk with him.

Kahn would them climb into the bed, lying next to Steve while he talked for hours. Often, they would converse while watching one of Steve's favorite films - The Quiet Man or The Prince of the City. "He told the most intimate details about his family - his father and his brothers. A lot of this I wouldn't use in the book because it would hurt too many people.

"But I'll never forget what he once told me," the writer said. Tears filled his eyes as he remembered. "Steve said to me, 'You remember the film, The Christmas Carol? There's the ghost from Christmas Past and he comes into the room wearing balls and chains. I think about that now, because I can't go anywhere now without these balls and chains.'

"And all I could hear was the constant whoosh, whoosh from his respirator. I can still hear that sound as if he was right here."

There are times when Steve still wishes he had died on the sidewalk in Central Park. But then he thinks about his young son, and he's glad he survived, Kahn said.

"He has several reasons to want to live - his family, and he has become a spokesman for many causes, injured police officers, spinal cord injuries, handgun control - they're all his reasons to live."

This was not an easy book to write, nor for his wife, Rose, to suffer through. After travelling long hours from New York, Kahn would lie motionless in bed, trying to sense how Steve must feel every second of his life.

"I'll never look at a person in a wheelchair the same way," he said. "Sometimes I think that it's appalling that medical science can't do more for spinal cord victims. Then I think well wait a minute, 30 or 40 years ago if this had happened, Steve would have died. Now he's moving around in a wheelchair and in a van. He gets around. So maybe they have come a long way."

Kahn expects his friendship with the McDonalds will endure. They will promote the book which will be heavily advertised on national television shows in July to commemorate the third anniversary of the shooting. There is also a lot of interest in making a television movie based on the book.

Now that the jury has returned with a favorable verdict on the book, Kahn is satisfied, but hardly content. He left his job at Boston Magazine and is finalizing plans to begin a new professional sports magazine based in Boston. He is also planning a new book with Bob Farmer, the former chief fundraiser for Dukakis's presidential campaign.

□ Ned Thompson, a student at Tabor Academy, received an award for excellence in economics micro this past semester. Ned just completed his junior year, and that certainly is a fine way to do so!

□ Don Haase was recently promoted to the position of Assistant Chief Engineer of the maintenance department of the Sheraton Tara Hotel in Braintree, part of the Tara Hotel division of the Flatley Company of Braintree. Many of our young people may remember Don from his years as a Custodian at CHS. Congratulations to you Don.

The next Cohasset Community Red Cross Triannual Bloodmobile will be held on Tuesday, June 20, 1989 from 2 p.m. to 7 p.m. at the First Parish House, 23 North Main Street, Cohasset. Previous participants will receive a notice by mail and will be contacted by their Group Promoter to make an appt. New donors are urgently needed! A special vote of thanks to the 129 donors and the many volunteers who participated in the last Bloodmobile held on January 24, 1989. Chairman Al Odermatt urges all who make an appointment to make every effort to keep it. All healthy persons age 17 and over, weighing more than 110 pounds should consider being a part of this most worthy community service, and enjoy the pleasure that comes with giving this Gift of Life — a pint of their own blood.

□ Jimmy (Roso) Rosano came home from South Shore Hospital last week, he arrived home on the tenth. Here's hoping that is his last stint, he has been in there four times since February. Hope all iswell, Jim.

□ Brenda Litchfield dropped me a note last week, to say how proud she and Jim are of their Granddaughter, Kimberly Ann Pattison of Ridgetop Road. Kimberly graduated with High Honors in Business Management and is a member of Phi Pheta Kappa at Aquines Jr. College. She has been accepted at the University of Mass where she will further her education.

□ It was a wonderful tribute to a lot of fine people last Saturday night, and everyone that took part was more than pleased! As was reported earlier, Phyllis Graykin, Pat Bowen and Sheila Travers are all retiring at the end of this year, and between them they have given over 60 years of service. Bob Thomson (34 years), Dick Streeter (19 Cohasset, 20 in Vermont), and Pat Plante (29 years) combined to make 102 years of teaching services! The guests include former teachers and administrators: Ken Peters, who taught in the late '50's and early '60's, is now principal at Braintree; Walter Seccatori, the principal at Hull who is retiring next year; William McCallum, guidance director in the '60's and is retired from the Hingham Schools; Dr. and Mrs. Frank Guilano who was the principal at CHS, and is now Superintendent at Milton; former Assistant Superintendent John Rafftery; former Superintendent Gene Crowell; former school committee members, Dick and Martha Connelly, Dr. Joe Nedrow and his wife Ruth, and Irene Brown; present school committee members Dr. and Mrs. Chris Ford and Mr. and Mrs. Russ Riedy were there, Barbara Bliss was unbable to attend; former math teacher Ron Massa flew in the night before from California; Dick Nash and his wife flew in from Arizona; Patty Perault from Washington D.C.; John Ward flew in in his private jet; Al Flynn; Howie League; Curt Collins, who was department chairman and is now Principal in Dennis Yarmouth; former chemistry teacher, now department chair in Sandwich, Jim Campbell and his wife Marcia; former secretaries Josephine Langelle, Betty Enders and Linda Jorgenson; and teachers Hope Glover and Mimi Holemes were all there to partake in the festivities. The evening was hosted by Jim Franey, and the roasters included Curt Collins, Jack Leary, and Bill McCallum. Mr. Thompson, Mr. Streeter and Mr. Plante all gave brief talks, and Pat remembered those teachers that are no longer here, Charlie Davis, Ed Sheehan, and Pat Coultrip. It was as much a reunion as it was a farewell, and a time that we are sure those present will remember for a long time to come. Best luck to all of you in your retirement.

□ Congratulations go to David and Melissa Barcomb this week! David graduated from Trinity College in Conn. on May 28, and Melissa graduated May 15 from Emerson. They had their big party last Monday, well deserved!

□ Terry Duggan had a real mother's day on the fourteenth this year! She became a mother of her second little girl, Kara Duggan. Beaming from the next town over, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Prescott are happy to be grandparents again . . . this makes four granddaughters for them! After raising four daughters, we are sure there won't be any surprises!

□ Everyone undoubtedly remembers the wonderful article on Commander Dan Brennock that was in the May 25 edition of The Mariner. We neglected to mention that Al Andrews, his wife Ellena and Edvia Yocum were also participants in the gala ceremonies! They had a marvelous nine-day vacation in Hawaii, and had a chance to visit their niece Kathy. From all reports they thought the ceremony where Dan took charge of the squadron was exciting and fascinating, and they were all proud! Again we congratulate Dan on his achievements.

Keep your news coming . . .

□ At the recent annual meeting of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council in Boston, Martha K. Gjesteby of Cohasset was re-elected Treasurer of the Council.

A Selectman in Cohasset, she has been treasurer the past three years. Also as treasurer she is a member of the executive committee as well as the legislative, transportation and Land Use policy committees. This is an especially crucial year in the Council with the full engagement by the executive and policy committees, the subregions and the entire council members in the deliberation process that will lead toward final adoption of the Metroplan 2000 in May 1990 annual council meeting.

He also was presented the Alumni Association Award as the senior "who has shown community spirit and concern with the Academy and has displayed qualities of awareness and humanity."

Sepp has been an Honors student and a member of the G.D.A. Honor Society, and has been the lighting designer for many of the Academy's stage productions in the past three years. He made his on-stage debut as the comic King Sextimus the Silent in "Once Upon a Mattress." Sepp plans to attend Ithaca College.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David R. Manion, 24 Lantern Lane.

□ For the elderly at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home, Mother's Day '89 was a special day.

Thanks to a group of caring Hull senior citizens, Mother's Day '89 was not a lonely holiday.

Twelve of Hull's senior citizens joined to form the Mother's Day Cheer-Up Committee. Members included: Chairperson Rose Curtin, Anne Jenkins, Dottie Gould, Eleanor Santille, Lea Breman, Rita Reno, Marge Staskywicz, Ruthy Fitzsimmons, Kay Allen, Nora Curtin, Betty Papineau, Stella DiVito, Gwen O'Brien, and Adrienne Anastos.

The committee visited the Cohasset Knoll this Mother's Day, bringing along hand-crocheted baskets filled with flower arrangements. Fresh carnations were given out.

Several local businesses have donated towards the completion of this project. A sincere thanks goes out to Riddles, Wellspring of Hull and Nobles Camera Shop, Walgreens, Sestito's Flower Shop of Cohasset.

□ Caren A. Chevalier of Cohasset, who is majoring in psychology, was named to the Dean's List for the spring semester at Fitchburg State College.

□ Michael Greiner of Cohasset was one of 127 seniors selected by the Alumni Relations Office and the Office of the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst to receive the 1989 Senior Leadership Award for outstanding contributions to the University community. Michael, the grandson of Dr. and Mrs. Wayne DeWald of Cohasset, majored in History and is a graduating member of the Class of 1989 at the University of Massachusetts.

□ Two Cohasset babies were born in May: Jeffrey and Barbara A. (Shea) Pinkus of 547 Beechwood Street had a girl at South Shore Hospital on May 21. On May 25, Robert and Alyson (Grief) Silvia of Stockbridge Road became the parents of a boy born at the South Shore Hospital.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (center) presented a Notary Public certificate to Jean Reidy of Cohasset, an administrative assistant to Joseph Nedrow (l) of Cohasset regional northeast manager for General Motors.

Tebbetts okay in China . . .

"They were under the impression that the students were thinning out," said Tebbetts.

"They were losing energy.

"They thought the government made a mistake forcing people out."

Some of the people on the tour gave the students gifts, according to Tebbetts.

"My parents took pictures," he said.

"They took pictures of the Statue of Liberty model they had."

By the time the massacre occurred, his parents had left Beijing, according to Tebbetts.

In addition to Beijing, their tour included stops in Changqing, Xian and a cruise up the Yangtze River.

Because of the unrest, the group was diverted from Shanghai to Hong Kong, he said.

Tebbetts said his parents noted the struggles of the people in China.

Medical care, for instance, is not as accessible as in this country, he said.

When he visited his parents' home in Cohasset recently, Tebbetts said there were a number of calls from people checking to see if they were alright.

"They are fine, and they are coming home," said Tebbetts.

"They are really grateful to have witnessed something pretty significant in China's history."

Tebbetts, who was elected a selectmen in April, retired at age 55 from New England Mutual Life Insurance Companies eight years ago, and became self-employed as an investment advisor.

He and his wife have visited a number of countries including Australia, India, Israel and the Soviet Union.

Needing a miracle

The symbol of St. Coletta's is a pair of open hands letting a dove fly free, its theme, "when you believe in miracles, anything can happen."

St. Coletta's has been working miracles for more than 30 years.

St. Coletta's of Massachusetts represents St. Coletta's Day School in Braintree, Cardinal Cushing School and Training Center in Hanover and South Shore Industries, which operates sheltered workshops in Marshfield, Braintree, Pembroke and Plymouth.

The dedicated staff at the schools and the workshops have given wings to all that is beautiful in thousands of retarded children and adults.

But once you give wings, you must continue to nurture.

St. Coletta's began residency programs 10 years ago so that when its children reached adulthood they could continue living their miracles, so they could live independently and work in the community.

The workshops followed naturally.

But two weeks ago a very disturbing thing happened.

St. Coletta's announced that the so-called Massachusetts miracle is letting the St. Coletta's miracle workers down.

The state Department of Mental Retardation is not paying its bills and is not adequately funding the adult residences run by St. Coletta's.

The lack of funding is draining very heavily on the school and its work.

And, it could impact the workshops.

St. Coletta's no longer can suffer annual losses of $250,000 and adequately care for its 92 youngsters.

After months of soul searching, St. Coletta's directors voted it would discontinue being a provider for the 11 residences it has been operating.

This decision was a heartbreaking one for the board. It affects 49 mentally retarded adults and 100 staff.

The state is now looking for vendors to take over the residential program.

And to make it more economically feasible for a new vendor, the vocational programs may be included.

That represents about 400 adults and 100 staff.

The state should be ashamed that it is falling short on its commitment to mentally challenged people.

There already are many retarded adults living in shelters for the homeless.

And, if residences close, this number will grow to frightening proportions.

Can you imagine how vulnerable a retarded person is?

All that can be hoped for now is that the state can find vendors for the residences and carry on the mission of St. Coletta's.

That mission is to protect retarded children and adults and guide them to the fullest possible life.

"When you believe in miracles, anything is possible.

The 49 retarded adults living in the 11 residences managed by St. Coletta's could use a miracle right now.

Help for those insurance woes

To the Editor:

Health Insurance continues to be a confusing issue for many of our Senior Citizens. As of June 1, 1989, twenty five (25) new volunteers will be trained and certified as SHINE COUNSELORS for 10 South Shore Towns. The Cohasset Council On Aging would like to publically thank these people for their committment to this program and to acknowledge the ten individuals already doing this work in Braintree, Marshfield, Hingham, Quincy, Weymouth and Cohasset. Their assistance to Seniors who have questions about their health insurance has been greatly appreciated.

We would also like to thank the Super Stop & Shop in Cohasset for hosting the training and in particular, Bill Ryan who was most helpful and accomodating.

Finally, we would like to thank South Shore Bank who provided the funds which enabled us to print brochures and posters. We are grateful for their support.

Letters

The following towns will have SHINE VOLUNTEERS who can be reached at the local Council On Aging Office: Scituate, Norwell, Cohasset, Marshfield, Duxbury, Hingham, Weymouth, Quincy, Milton and Hull. Individuals who are having difficulty with their health insurance are encouraged to call.

Again, thank you to all who helped make this training possible. Your support of this state-funded community project is greatly appreciated.

Sincerely,
Pat Ryan

Obtain absentee ballots for election

To the Editor:

The election to override Proposition 2 1/2 is scheduled for Wednesday, June 28, 1989. This is a prime vacation week! All registered voters should obtain their absentee ballots at the Town Clerk's office, Town Hall before leaving on their trips. All registered voters who work outside of Cohasset and return home after the polls close should obtain an absentee ballot also.

Please plan ahead — get your absentee ballot — and remember, your vote is very important for continued town service.

PSO thanks group for playground

To the Editor:

The Parent School Organization would like to thank Ann Whiteley and the Osgood Playpark Committee for the tremendous effort of time and dedication needed to see Project Playground through to completion. At a time when some consider Cohasset divided, hundreds of citizens with the help of many town departments, contributed generously and volunteered unselfishly to build a playground which will benefit generations of Cohasset's children.

Summer school program openings

There are still several slots open in the first session of the Scituate summer school enrichment program. This course is designed for academically motivated youngsters entering grades 2-6 in September.

These students will have four half-hour classes (five days a week) in creative writing, outdoor education, Russian, and word processing, with a one hour daily class in drama. In an attempt to accommodate vacation schedules, the class will run in two, three week sessions.

The first session will run from Thursday, June 29 to Thursday, July 20 (no school July 3 & 4). The second session will run from Friday, July 21 to Wednesday August 9. Both sessions will be held at Scituate High School from 9 a.m. to noon.

Other enrichment courses being offered include: conversational Russian, word processing (adults welcome in both classes), driver education, elementary classroom (remedial math and reading), and an early childhood readiness program for five and six year olds.

Remedial courses being offered include: math 6, 7, & 8; English 6, 7, & 8; social studies 6, 7, & 8; science 6, 7, & 8; Algebra I; United States history; freshman English; sophomore English; junior/senior English; Biology; and physical education.

Registration by mail for all programs will close on Friday, June 16. Registration in person (if space is still available) will be held on Tuesday, June 27 and Wednesday, June 28 at Scituate High School from 9 a.m. to noon. Early registration is encouraged since applicants will be accepted on a first-come basis. If registering by mail make check or money order payable to: Town of Scituate and mail to: Supervisor, Scituate summer school, Scituate High School, 606 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Scituate, 02066.

Brochures listing times and prices for each course can be picked up at any of the five schools or the Scituate Town Library. Further information may be obtained by calling 837-8423, Monday through Thursday evenings only from 7 to 9 p.m.

Museums open summer with carillon concert

The Cohasset Historical Society's summer museum season will begin Saturday, June 17, with an Open House at the Capt. John Wilson Historical House and the Maritime Museum on Elm Street in Cohasset Center.

During summer months they will be open each afternoon except Mondays from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. The closing date is September 30.

As a special event on opening day, June 17, there will be an additional program held in conjunction with nearby St. Stephen's Church. Featured is an "Open Tower" day in the famous carillon tower of St. Stephen's. Visitors to the tower will have an opportunity to view the renowned Jessie M. Barron memorial carillon, one of the world's foremost "Singing Towers." Cast during the 1920's by the English bellfounders of Gillett & Johnston at Croydon, England, the 51 bells of the St. Stephen's carillon instrument often have been played by the world's leading carilloneurs.

The "Open Tower" gives visitors a rare opportunity to see the great bells of the tower and their unique clavier or keyboard.

As part of this event, the Society's Maritime Museum will be the site of a special exhibit of pictures and documents relating to earlier days of the famous carillon, including an original score for a sonata for carillon by the former carilloneur of St. Stephen's, longtime Cohasset resident Earl Chamberlain. Some of the documents pertaining to the construction and enlargement of the original instrument will be on view.

For the special Open House — Open Tower day, society planners recently announced that the regular museum hours will be extended on June 17 to 5:30 p.m. to allow visitors additional time to tour the carillon and museums. Visitors may begin the tour at either St. Stephen's or at the museums. There will be no admission charge on that day, but the Society will be glad to accept donations from tour-goers.

Regular season museum admission to the Capt. John Wilson House and Maritime Museum is $1.50 per building for adults, 25¢ per building for children ages 6 to 12 years.

On the special Open House — Open Tower tour, guides will be present to assist visitors, and light refreshments will be available at the Society's Maritime Museum.

This year will see the first major renovation to the 51 bell instrument. Some smaller bells of the higher register are to be replaced, and a modern keyboard will replace the original old-style clavier. Thus a wider range of music written for carillon will be heard in the future, played by both resident and visiting carilloneurs.

The Historical Society's "Open House — Open Tower" day will give visitors the opportunity to view — and hear — the original carillon instrument just prior to the start of its renovation.

Plan to attend this unusual event this Saturday, June 17. Visit and browse through the Historical Society's two historical museum buildings and take advantage of a rare chance to see the world-famous Jessie M. Barron carillon at Cohasset Center.

The 1989 local fishing season is off to a great start

The Fishing Line

By Bill Bowers

With warm weather and plenty of fish, the 1989 season is off to a great start.

Mackerel are ubiquitous from Boston to the Cape Cod Canal. Ditto for striped bass.

School-size stripers have appeared in the North River in better numbers than anyone can remember in years, according to Jerry Duffy at Mary's Boat Livery in Marshfield.

The schoolies are hitting shiny metal lures like Kastmasters and Hopkins jigs. Don't forget, bass smaller than 36 inches must be released.

Flounder are available in the river, too, but so far they are a bit slow. Use seaworms or pieces of squid for bait.

Hank Kucinski of Cohasset caught a huge cod of 26-1/2 pounds near the H buoy.

David McMeekin of Holbrook had a nice—and surprising—catch of several haddock near Minot's Light.

Mike Pratt of Canton took a 30-pound, 2-ounce pollock at Stellwagen Bank aboard his dad's charter boat Michael Kevin out of Green Harbor, according to J&B Tackle.

Fishing at the Bank is very good right now, and numerous whale sightings offer a nice bonus.

Harry and Jay Ellis of Scituate took striped bass of 40 pounds, 8 ounces and 44 pounds on live herring at the herring run in the Cape Cod Canal.

Flounder are going strong in Scituate Harbor, according to Janet Trask at Trask Tackle in North Scituate. Tony Adams of Scituate and his friend Kelly caught themselves a bucketful on seaworms.

Ned Shields of Cohasset reported a nice catch of cod and mackerel five miles east of the mouth of the North River.

Wayne Galvin of Weymouth won himself a state pin with a 7-pound, 4-ounce largemouth bass from Jacob's Pond in Hanover.

The Beechwood River in Cohasset has produced some nice largemouths lately. Jason Cohen and Sean Galligan of Scituate weighed in bass of 3 pounds, 4 ounces and 3 pounds, 15 ounces, respectively.

Ten-year-old Nate Balboni of Duxbury had another Beechwood bass that tipped the scales at 4 pounds, 8 ounces.

Chuck Houghton of Hingham caught a 37-inch striped bass on a live herring.

Bass are hitting well in the Weir River, according to Pat Newcomb at Fore River Bait in Quincy.

Newcomb also weighed in a 30-pound cod taken near Grape Island in Boston Harbor.

There will be fishing, refreshments, prizes and fun for local youngsters. The event is free of charge, but pre-registration is required. Call (617) 826-8341 fro more information.

Denis Lynch of Pembroke caught and released a beautiful 34-inch striped bass over the weekend. The fish hit a one-ounce Kastmaster near the mouth of Barnstable Harbor.

Anglers are catching plenty of flounder and mackerel in Kingston and Duxbury bays, reports Evelyn at Mike's Bait in Kingston.

Seaworms are the most popular flounder bait just now, and the mackerel will smash any small, colorful lure you throw at them.

Schoolie stripers have been hitting well at Plymouth Beach, according to Danny at The Tackle Shop. Many customers have been releasing the young linesides. Any shiny metal lure, preferably with a single hook to aid in release, is a good choice.

Steve Tavernelli of Plymouth will get a state pin for the 7-pound, 15-ounce largemouth bass he landed at Sampson's Pond in Carver.

The Weymouth park department will hold a fishing rodeo from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, June 10 at Middle Street on Whitman's Pond.

Members of the Izaak Walton Association and Trout Unlimited will assist at the rodeo, which is open to all Weymouth youngsters. Call 335-2000, extension 318 for more information.

"The Fishing Line" is a regular feature in this paper. Fishing clubs, tackle shops and anglers are encouraged to contact Bill Bowers at Mariner Newspapers, P.O. Box 682, Marshfield, Mass. 02050. Telephone (617) 837-3500.

You're better off with a line in the water.

There are still plenty of shad in the North, South and Indian Head rivers, according to Adams Tackle in Pembroke.

The Adams shad tournament runs through June 30. Bring your fish to the shop to be weighed in. The tourney is free of charge.

Adams will sponsor their fifth annual Kids' Day fishing contest Sunday, June 11 at the Indian Head dam in Hanover.

Gjesteby elected MAPC treasurer

Marisa Lago and other Metropolitan Area Planning Council, MAPC representatives May 24 approved in principle a regional development framework which has been developed over the past two years. Lago represents the town of Scituate.

The plan was presented at the agency's 25th Anniversary dinner meeting at the Boston Sheraton. The meeting also featured a speech by Boston Redevelopment Authority (BRA) Director Stephen C. Coyle. MAPC officers president Frank E. Baxter of Burlington, vice president Franklin G. Ching of Natick, secretary Marjorie A. Davis of Wenham, and treasurer Martha K. Gjesteby of Cohasset were re-elected for year-long terms.

The regional development framework designates planning areas based on the availability of local infrastructure, including: areas that are fully serviced (sewer, major transportation networks, municipal water), areas which are partially serviced, and those not serviced at all.

The adoption in principle provides additional time for local officials to revise the plan before it is formally adopted in May 1990.

MAPC representatives will be asked to join at least one policy advisory committee studying regional solutions to environmental problems for the next year. The policy advisory committees will work in the areas of economic development, housing, land resources, waste water treatment, waste management, and siting of regional facilities.

Members of the South Shore Coalition, a subregional group within MAPC, also will be asked to comment upon the regional development plan as it progresses.

Finally, MAPC has also been working with the state Legislative Commission on Growth and Change, which has heard much public testimony about communities' inability to provide services once financed by the state. The commission is exploring assigning increased responsibility for the review of local comprehensive plans, for review of the impacts of new development, and for review of siting needed regional facilities.

Golden wants to restore school aid

Sen. William B. Golden proposed an amendment to the budget to restore Chapter 70 School Aid and Additional Assistance to Cities and Towns to the level recommended by the House of Representatives.

"Our cities and towns cannot afford any more reductions or uncertainty in the funding of local aid," Golden said. "There are certain critical investments which need to be funded even in times of fiscal crises. The education of our children is one such investment."

The Senate Committee on Ways and Means cut approximately $90 million from the school and local aid budget items based on the assumption that these reductions would be compensated by additional lottery funds. Following the committee action, education groups and municipal officials voiced concern over the use of uncertain lottery funds to make up the shortfall. Up to this year lottery funds have traditionally gone to schools and local government. The current Senate budget would mean a net reduction of $90 million dollars to municipal budgets.

The proposed amendment to the budget would also make available to all communities the $20 million now dedicated by the Senate budget to only three cities through the open enrollment pilot program.

First Parish Services

Rev. Edward T. Atkinson, Minister, Parish House (617) 383-1100, 23 North Main Street.

Summer Services —

Four volunteers to lead summer services are still needed. These are brief informal services of readings and recorded music usually lasting about half an hour. We like to keep the Meeting House open during the summer, so please help if you can. There will be a sign-up sheet in the vestibule of the Meeting House.

Women's Book Group —

The next meeting of the Women's Book Group will be on Tuesday, June 27 in the Living Room of the Parish House at 7:30 p.m. Anywhere But Here, by Mona Simpson, will be discussed.

The book for July will be The Radiant Way, by Margaret Drabble, and we'll be meeting on July 25 at Bette Nelson's, 10 Poplar Ave., Scituate.

South Shore Habitat for Humanity —

This year June 11 through June 18 will be Habitat for Humanity's Annual House-Raising Week. The function of this "world-wide building blitz" is to draw attention to the critical shortage of decent affordable housing, to unite the more than 400 worldwide Habitat projects, and to raise support and recruit volunteers locally. South Shore Habitat will be focusing on the house in East Bridgewater during this week. They anticipate to be working 2 shifts on this house all week. If anyone is able to volunteer for a day or a portion of a day, your help will be greatly appreciated. First Parish and St. Stephen's will be working together on this house on Saturday, June 17. Volunteers are needed for Saturday as well as during the week. A very rewarding way to spend a day. Sign up with Roger Whitley, 383-6312.

Second Congregational Church

MinisterL Gary A. Ritts, Secretary: Muriel Wheelwright, Office Phone: 383-0345, Parsonage Phone: 383-1422; Office Hours: Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to noon.

Congratulations to Graduates —

Honored this past Sunday in worship with a gift from Second Congregational Church. Community center courses . . .

For Women Only

Money Management for Women Only: Taking Financial Control

This 4 week course offers women a thorough overview of money management and financial planning. Topics include professional portfolio management, investment philosophies, tax strategies and estate planning principles. This class will be taught by Sandra Manzella, a certified financial planner with the investment firm of Paine Webber. Class will meet on Thursday evening from 7:00 to 8:30. This class starts July 6 and costs $24.

Summer Sleepover

Girls ages 7 to 12 can join their friends for a night of fun "camping in" at the Community Center with Ruthann. The girls will participate in gymnastics, go bowling, make popcorn and tell stories before bedtime. This sleepover will be August 25 at 7 p.m. and costs $15. Participation is limited.

You may register for more than one session of camp or classes. Applications will be taken on a first paid basis. Phone inquiries are encouraged but registration must be made in person or by mail. There are no refunds made on classes. The Cohasset Community Center reserves the right to cancel or reschedule courses where registration is below an acceptable minimum. All fees will be refunded for these courses. Please consider yourself registered upon receipt of tuition and registration form. Due to the number of enrollments, we notify students only if a course has been cancelled or there is a change.

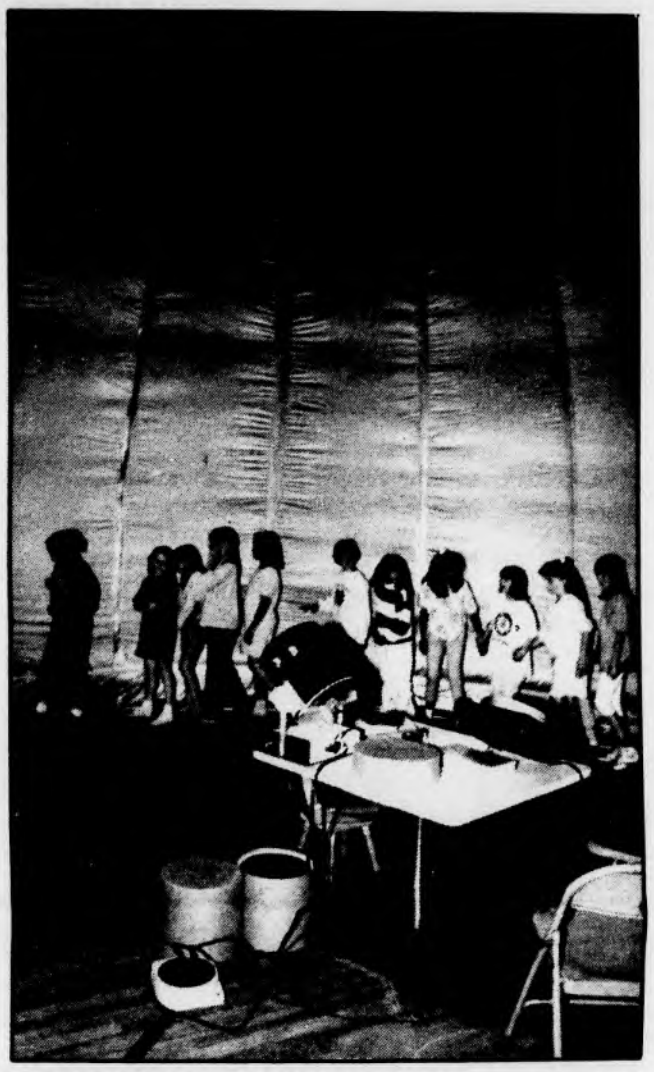
PRE-SCHOOL SUMMER CAMP

All the joys of summer lay in store for the pre-schooler age 3 to 6 at the summer nature day camp at the Cohasset Community Center. The program will offer a regular pre-school format of free play, music, creative activities and exploratory nature walks and related crafts. Activities will be out-doors weather permitting and indoors during inclement weather.

Daily, June 19-23, 9 a.m. - 12 p.m., Session 1 $65; Daily, June 26-30, 9 a.m. - 12 p.m., Session 2 $65; Daily, July 10-14, 9 a.m. - 12 p.m., Session 3 $65; Daily, July 17-21, 9 a.m. - 12 p.m., Session 4 $65; Daily, July 31-Aug. 4, 9 a.m. - 12 p.m., Session 5 $65; Daily, August 21-25, 9 a.m. - 12 p.m., Session 6 $65.

GYMNASTIC CAMP

Gymnastic Camp will offer girls ages 7 to 16 an opportunity to hone their gymnastic techniques with extended periods of more personal instruction. Each day will consist of warm-ups, aerobic dance, time on the beam, time on the bar, a break for snack, work on the uneven bars, vault, floor exercises, and conditioning. Gymnasts may enroll for as many sessions as they wish. Prizes will be awarded each week for numerous contests. Enrollment is limited and will be on a first paid basis.



Daily, June 27-30, 10:30 a.m. - 1:30 p.m., Session 1 $48; Daily, August 22-25, 10:30 a.m. - 1:30 p.m., Session 2 $48; Daily, August 28-31, 10:30 a.m. - 1:30 p.m., Session 3 $48.

SUMMER ARTS CAMP 1989 CHINA

The Cohasset Community Center and the South Shore Art Center invite you to join us this summer as we discover the cultural heritage of CHINA through the arts! Hands-on camp projects and activities will focus on China's rich cultural traditions and inspire the imagination and creativity of our young artists ages 6 - 12. A dance/creative movement performance, a theater performance and a student art exhibit will be presented on the last afternoon of each two week session. Parents and friends of our young artists are invited to attend.

Special demonstrations and workshops in kite making, martial arts, wheel throwing and clay, Chinese calligraphy, mask making, making Chinese dragons, and silk painting will inspire young artists throughout the two week session. Also included are workshops in Chinese theater arts, classes in dance, creative movement, set design and costume making. Time will be available for bowling each day and a supervised lunch period will be provided. Children should bring their own lunch.

Monday-Friday, July 17-28, 9 a.m. - 3 p.m., Session 1 $270; Monday-Friday, July 31-August 11, 9 a.m. - 3 p.m., Session 2 $270.

Youth soccer concludes another successful season

Cohasset youth soccer concluded a successful spring season by placing four players on state all-star teams, and another 14 boys and girls on southeastern Massachusetts district all-star squads.

"Our 18 all-stars," said outgoing town coordinator Larry Shultz, "are testimony to the success of the Cohasset program. On a per capita basis, there's probably no other town that produces the number of quality soccer players that Cohasset does."

Meanwhile, Cohasset's two playoff teams — Girls' Under 12-1 and Boys' Under 10-1 — both were beaten Saturday and eliminated from championship play.

Girls' Under 12-1 lost to state powerhouse Duxbury 4-1, despite Erin Murphy's first-half goal. Murphy's goal, coach Nino D'Urso reported, was only the second to be scored on Duxbury all season. Duxbury was simply too strong for Cohasset, coach D'Urso said. "We only crossed the midfield line once during the game," he said. Girls' 12-1 finished their division championship season at 8-1-2.

Boys' 10-1 fell to Plymouth 2-1 in overtime in the other playoff contest at Duxbury. Plymouth scored the winning goal with ten seconds to play in the second overtime period, and ruined an extraordinary effort by the underdog Cohasset squad, a team not expected at the season's start to be among the division's elite.

10-1 tied the game late in the first half on Taylor Devin's penalty shot, his thirteenth goal of the season. Led by a defense anchored by Tom Kittle, Kevin Duffy and goalkeeper Bobby Meehan, Cohasset played Plymouth better than even the rest of the way, and forwards Burke Davis, Ely Kahn and Jamie Buick just missed several good chances. 10-1 finished its season at 8-2-1.

Continuing their seasons are the 18 Cohasset all-stars, picked from tryouts held earlier this spring. As announced by league coordinator Shultz, they are: State all-stars — Kate Carroll (Girls' Under 14); Travis Coley (Boys' Under 16-and-a-half); and Jimmy and Joel Reidy (Boys' Under 18-and-a-half). The District all-stars include Erin Murphy (Girls' Under 12); Katie Beggan, Sophie Redfield, and Corey DeSantis (Girls' Under 15); Jen Plante and Jen Reidy (Girls' Under 16); Katie Lord (Girls' Under 19); Charlie Endris, Chris Kondrat, and Mike Reynolds (Boys' Under 13-and-a-half); Dan Baird (Boys' Under 14-and-a-half); Bill Baird (Boys' Under 17-and-a-half); and Matt Beggan and Jay Staunton (Boys' Under 19).

The Cohasset youth soccer coaches, coordinator Shultz said, will meet at the Stop and Shop conference room on Monday night at 7:30 to discuss the just-concluded season, and the June 28 Proposition 2½ override ballot, which will include a question asking for $200,000 to renovate and expand Milliken Field.

And in one other reported score, Boys' 10-2 finished its season at 7-3, losing to Scituate 3-2 despite goals by Greg Bilton and Nate Cotter. Tom Leahy also played well for Cohasset.

The Village at Duxbury

The Village at Duxbury is a new senior living community planned for the South Shore—right in historic Duxbury. It is based on service and hospitality, will be self-contained and is for active, independent seniors.

The concept of senior living eases many of life's pressures in an environment that is both caring and exhilarating.

The Village at Duxbury has chosen the pineapple as the symbol most representative of the community because it has long stood for hospitality, friendship and celebration.

The Village at Duxbury is being planned by Welch Healthcare and Retirement Group, a local, family-owned and operated company that has been active in quality senior housing services on the South Shore for over four decades.

If you—or any of your friends—would be interested in knowing more about The Village at Duxbury, call Laura today at 617-934-9744. Or, if you prefer, please fill in the coupon and mail to The Village at Duxbury, P.O. Box 2763, Duxbury, MA 02331-9983.

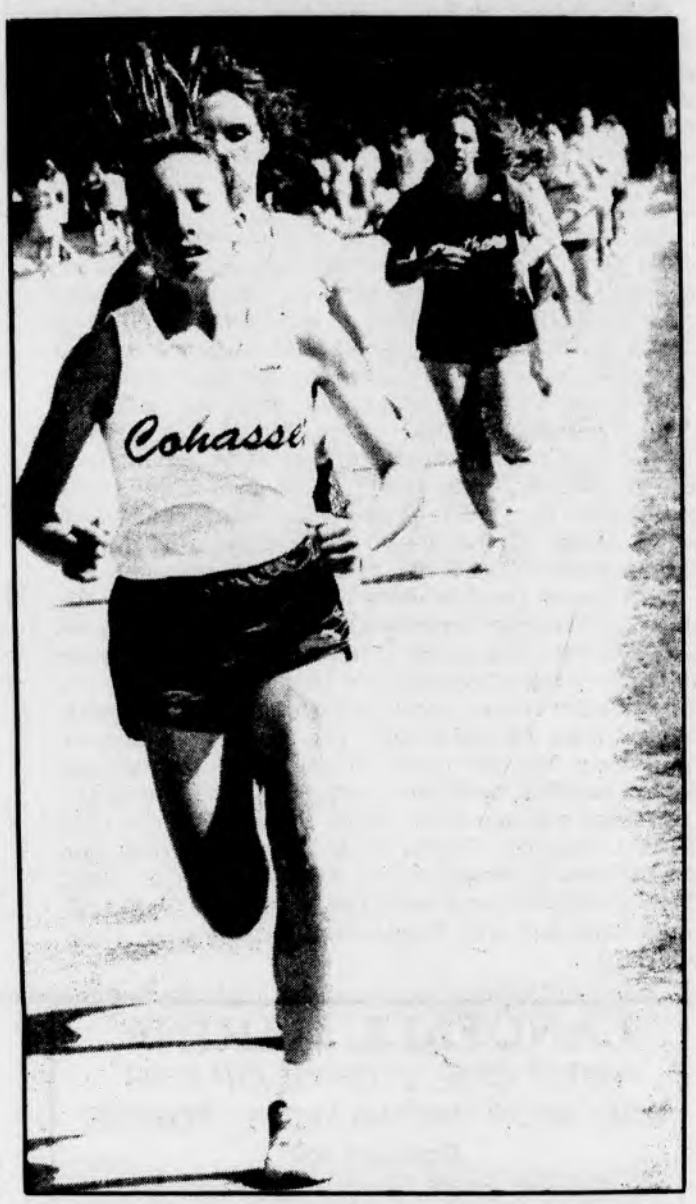
Cohasset was confident in David/Goliath match

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

It was the battle of David versus Goliath last Monday afternoon at Cohasset High School.

Bridgewater-Raynham, whose school enrollment is almost thrice the size of Cohasset, played the role of the Philistine warrior. On the other hand, the Skippers were the confident, enthusiastic opponent. As a result of the two divergent schools, B-R, trailing 2-1 after the singles matches, stood tall at the end to pull out a 3-2, EMass, Division Two South girls' tennis victory over Cohasset.

Cohasset (10-4) was unable to capitalize on Bridgewater's doubles pairs. Katie Lehtola and Kris Cunningham defeated Cohasset's number-one doubles team of Katie Murphy and Sophie Redfield, 6-3, 2-6, 6-4, while Renee Ladouceur and Jen Banks handled Ellen Schramm and Rebecca Jordan in straight sets, 6-4, 6-4, at second doubles play.



"I think the six-day layoff really hurt us," said Cohasset coach Betty Zadel, referring to the consecutive rain postponements that delayed this preliminary round contest. "With the rain, we didn't get a chance to practice very often. Bridgewater (12-5) is certainly much bigger than us, but we gave them a tough match. We were peaking at the end of the regular season. Overall, I am very happy with our season."

Amanda Church (number two) and Michelle Massa (No. 3) took the two points for Cohasset with their singles victories.

"Amanda was very steady in her match. She had trouble adjusting to the passing shots of Loren Matthews (B-R). However, she became very patient in the third set to overtake her opponent (6-3, 2-6, 6-4)," said Zadel. "Michelle, meanwhile, dominated her match (6-0, 6-2). In her last 14 matches, Michelle only lost one game. She was very consistent for us all year."

Notre Dame-bound Katie Ryan, number-one singles player for Cohasset, dropped a three-set heartbreaker (7-6, 1-6, 3-6) to Kathy Hutchinson.

"We are losing four seniors (Ryan, Church, Murphy and Katie Lord), so next season is going to be a rebuilding one for us. Michelle will most likely be our number-one singles player next spring," added Zadel.

Major league baseball action

In Cohasset major league action, Harbor Mechanical Inc. (Braves), the 1988 championship team, began their season on a shaky note, enduring a major throttling (21-4) by the Mets. But sweet revenge was soon to follow.

In a rematch with the Mets, the Braves' ace moundsman Andrew Pozatek pitched a stunning no hitter while the team's bats finally came to life, belting out 15 runs to help earn a convincing 15-0 victory. The Herculean efforts of Jeremiah Hawk and Matt (Bucket) Higgins at the plate advanced the cause, and rookie Robbie Buckley, who made his debut as catcher, has been outstanding in this role ever since. In their third Mets encounter, the Braves won in a 9-8 squeaker, again with powerful pitching by starter Pozatek and strong relief by Michael Lennon, who, in a clutch performance, struck out the final three batters.

The team also emerged victorious with a 16-15 edge against the A's in their first duel. In their second match, Pozatek demonstrated his talent at the plate by whaling two round trippers over the fence, bringing in three runs each. Still, this was not enough to overcome the A's hitting spree.

In a 28-0 walloping of the Cardinals, rookies Jarrod Batts and Adam Donovan hit their first singles, followed by doubles from veterans Jeremiah Hawk, Matt Higgins, Brett MacQuarrie, and Drew Pozatek. They defeated the Cardinals soundly in their second contest as well. As of June 7, the Braves stood 5-5, still being plagued by this season's invincible Red Sox, who remain undefeated and account for 3 of the Braves' 5 losses.

A strong defense mans the Braves infield, including outstanding first baseman Michael Lennon, who doubles as a steady relief pitcher. Guarding second base is Brett MacQuarrie, who made an unassisted double play against the Red Sox and is a speeding terror on the base paths. When not pitching or catching, Hawk, Pozatek, and Buckley share the shortstop position. Hawk's control on the mound has improved dramatically, adding to the team's pitching strength. Matt Higgins, a consistent stopper at third, curbs many line drives from excess mileage.

In the outfield, Josh Roth shows great prowess, and at the plate he has smacked many line drives to the fence. Rookie Keith (Captain) Jackson has shown a strong arm in the outfield, a good eye at the plate, and promise as a future pitcher. Jarrod (Jabbo) Batts and Adam Donovan have made consistent improvements in stopping the ball in the outfield, and Vicky Maynard, who offers steady fielding, played an exceptional game against the Cardinals. Herb Crehan, who has one of the best arms in the outfield and the ability to hurl the ball from deep in left field to home, coupled with powerful and accurate fielding by Andy Church, soundly anchor the team's defense.

Midway through the season, the Braves are increasing their precision on the mound, flexing more muscle at the plate, and demonstrating quick reflexes in the field. Coach Mark Batts and Assistant Coach Bill Higgins are pleased with the team's progress and have confidence in the talent of this year's rookies as well as its seasoned players. In the final weeks of play, the Braves look forward to continued improvement in their performance and a very strong season finish.

the innovative new playground.

It is a nautical playground, filled with pressure-treated lumber and huge monuments built with tires. There are slides, swings, obstacles courses, climbing devices and enough ladders and poles to accommodate children of all ages. There are also several benches for parents to rest upon while they watch their children.

Once the parade settled by the Osgood school, the dedication festivities began. Children and parents pledged allegiance to the flag and the students sang a sweet rendition of "Zippady Do Dah."

Ann Whiteley, whom many consider the prime mover behind the playpark project, passed around tissues for teary-eyed parents as the children performed the song.

Principal Jack Creamer noted that Monday was a day of celebration for all the children of Cohasset. He praised the efforts of parents and children who worked to see the playground completed; and cited the extraordinary efforts of Whiteley during the past several months.

"She is amazing," he said, noting that if she weren't a Canadian citizen, he would nominate her as town manager. "She's a remarkable lady - a woman of action and determination and I admire her deeply."

During the past several months, Whiteley organized the effort to plan a new playground, select a design architect, raise money for the project, and solicit helpers for the construction of the playground.

School committee chairman Barbara Bliss attended the ceremonies, saying the playpark represented a true community effort.

"Thank you for making the Osgood School a fun place to got to school and a better place for this community," she said.

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt also attended the ceremonies, along with selectmen Martha Gjesteby and Diana Kornet.

"The Good Ship Osgood will be here for a long time," Pratt said, emphasizing the playpark's nautical theme. "It stands as a model of the enthusiasm and determination of the people who made this happen."

Pratt presented Whiteley with a golden spike, a present from the playground planning committee in appreciation of her boundless efforts.

The PSO donated a tree which will be planted at the entrance to the park.

Whiteley told the children the entire project was reminiesent of the childrens' story, The Little Engine That Could. She noted that when people pull together, they can make things happen.

"Today is Christmas for all of us," she said, and the gifts received were the friendships formed by parents and children as they planned the project, and the excitement and joy they experienced as it concluded.

"You should remember this playground when you are all grown up," she told the students. "And then you can think about how to do something nice for the community you are living in."

After the principal cut the red ribbon at the entrance to the park, the children sang the dedication anthem. They sang, "it's a place to swing, it's a place to slide," to the tune of "It's a Small World." Following their rendition, they yelled in unison, "Hip, hip, hooray!"

The third graders, who will be graduating to the Deer Hill School next week, were allowed into the playground first. With great speed and some caution, the students took to the slides, the swings, and the look-out towers. As they laughed and crowded around the many areas of the playground, their schoolmates looked on anxiously.

The Osgood Playpark - dedicated to the young at heart - is now open for business.

Summer outings at the science center

Celebrate the beginning of summer with a nature walk, a little stargazing, or a canoe trip with naturalists from the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell.

BOSTON HARBOR CRUISE

Join SSNSC naturalists and staff from Save the Harbor/Save the Bay for a very special program on an environmental issue that has received national attention, Sunday, June 18, 1:30 to 5:15 p.m. Members/$15. Non-members/$20. While Boston Harbor has gained notoriety for its pollution problems, it also has great natural beauty. A talk and video at the Science Center, followed by a cruise around the Harbor Islands, will introduce us to pollution issues and suggest ways of restoring the Harbor's natural qualities. Carpool to Boston. Call the Science Center, 659-2559, for information.

CANOEING ON THE NORTH RIVER

Spend a day canoeing on Massachusetts' first scenic waterway with Russ Sears, a certified canoe guide, Saturday, June 18, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. (raindate: June 24). Members/$20 adult, $16 child under 12—our canoe; $9, $7 adult—your own canoe. Non-members/$26 adult, $21 child—our canoe; $11 adult, $9 child—your own canoe. The river is alive with summer plants and animals. Picture the shipyards of yesteryear that dotted the river banks where workmen built the stately clipper ships. We provide canoes, paddles and preservers. Canoes hold 3 adults or 2 adults and 2 children (under 12). Some ability to canoe is necessary. Please note the raindate. Raindate refunds will not be given unless your space is filled. Call the Science Center, 659-2559, to register.

NATURE DRAWING

Discover the beauty in nature by learning to draw flora and fauna in a four-week course, Tuesdays, June 20, 27, July 11, and 18, 7 to 9 p.m. Members/$30. Non-members/$40. Designed for both beginners and accomplished artists, this class will heighten your artistic abilities and your appreciation of nature as you work with form, color, and perspective. Call the Science Center, 659-2559, for registration information.

WEDNESDAY NATURE WALK

Join SSNSC naturalists for a leisurely walk in Melody Woods, Hanover, the Science Center's newest property, Wednesday, June 21, 10 a.m. to noon. Members/Free.

Forum on teen problems

Over 100 parents, teachers and other interested citizens, including representatives from the police department, met last week to discuss the problems the teens in our society are facing regarding drugs and alcohol. Cohasset, along with every other town in this area, has its share of drinking and drugs especially amongst the teenage population. This forum was held in an attempt to come up with some strategies for the upcoming summer months. Mike Gill, the Health Education Coordinator at Cohasset High School, facilitated the discussion.

The goals and objectives of the forum were: 1. To establish regular lines of communication among all parties who will play a role in your drug prevention program — including school staff, parents, community leaders, law enforcement officials, etc. 2. To obtain a commitment from all to support a firm no-use stance, and 3. to establish a means of regularly monitoring the extent and characteristics of tobacco, alcohol and other drug use, possession and distribution in Cohasset, through the schools and in cooperation with local law enforcement officials.

As far as the school's involvement is concerned, research shows that no curriculum has much impact on student's behavior concerning drugs unless it is delivered in the context of a comprehensive prevention program encompassing school instruction and activities, parent involvement and community support. Among the themes that should be present at all levels of the curriculum are the following: A clear and consistent message that the use of alcohol, tobacco and other illicit drugs are unhealthy and harmful; respect for the laws and values of society; and promotion of healthy, safe and responsible attitudes and behavior by correcting mistaken beliefs and assumptions, disarming the sense of personal invulnerability and building resistance to influences which encourage substance abuse.

Some of the successful strategies suggested for parents to follow were: 1. Parents should know where their children are during non-school hours. Adolescents and young teens should have a definite purpose and place to go, with a specific time of return.

2. Parents should know whom their children are with.

A gala party was held last week to honor three retiring high school staff members: (l to r) Bob Thompson, Dick Streeter and Patrick Piante. (Staff photo/Buzz Wadsworth)

3. Parties should be chaperoned by adults who are visible.

4. Alcohol and drugs should not be available or served.

5. Parents should be responsible for the behavior of guests at any party in their homes.

6. Small parties should be encouraged; open parties should be discouraged.

7. The parents of any adolescent or teen who shows up at a party with, or under the influence of alcohol or other drugs, should be contacted immediately.

8. Parents should contact host parents to verify party arrangements.

9. Parents should have the telephone number and address of the party, and should expect a call from their teenager in case of a location change.

10. Parents should be aware that they can be held libel to civil and criminal charges if injury to a minor results from underage alcohol consumption or illegal drug use on their premises.

11. Regarding social activities such as movies, dances, etc., parents should arrange transportation when appropriate. Proper planning to avoid "hanging out" or loitering before or after a social event is a helpful tool in preventing experimentation and/or regular use and abuse.

12. Parents may want to consider initiating dialogue or contracts with their children which pertain to methods of dealing with potentially difficult situations such as drunk driving, etc.

The conclusion was also made that as adults, we may need to re-evaluate our own consumption and attitudes regarding alcohol. We need to set a good example to our children, regardless of the ages involved.

The next meeting will be held in the fall, after the start of the next school year. Please look for announcements of the next meeting at that time and plan to attend.

Cohasset Knoll interview

On a rainy day on May 16, 1989 while you were doing your thing 19 children were doing theirs. They were at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home interviewing and talking with the residents that live there. Many asked questions mainly having to do with the early 1900's. One woman was quite special. Her name was Mamsille and she was 105 years old! Which was quite impressive. You don't get to see a person that old all the time! The children were there because as you might remember, May is nursing home month. It was a great day to go and all of the people were friendly. We had a great time. Not only did poeple interview but three children from Deer Hill School were given art prizes that they had voted on as a special thing to do. The art is what gave teachers in the 5th grade the idea to have students interview. Four children were chosen from each classroom to go and the ones that did had a spendid time. Happy Nursing Home Month!

Osgood's "Official Board of the Arboretum"

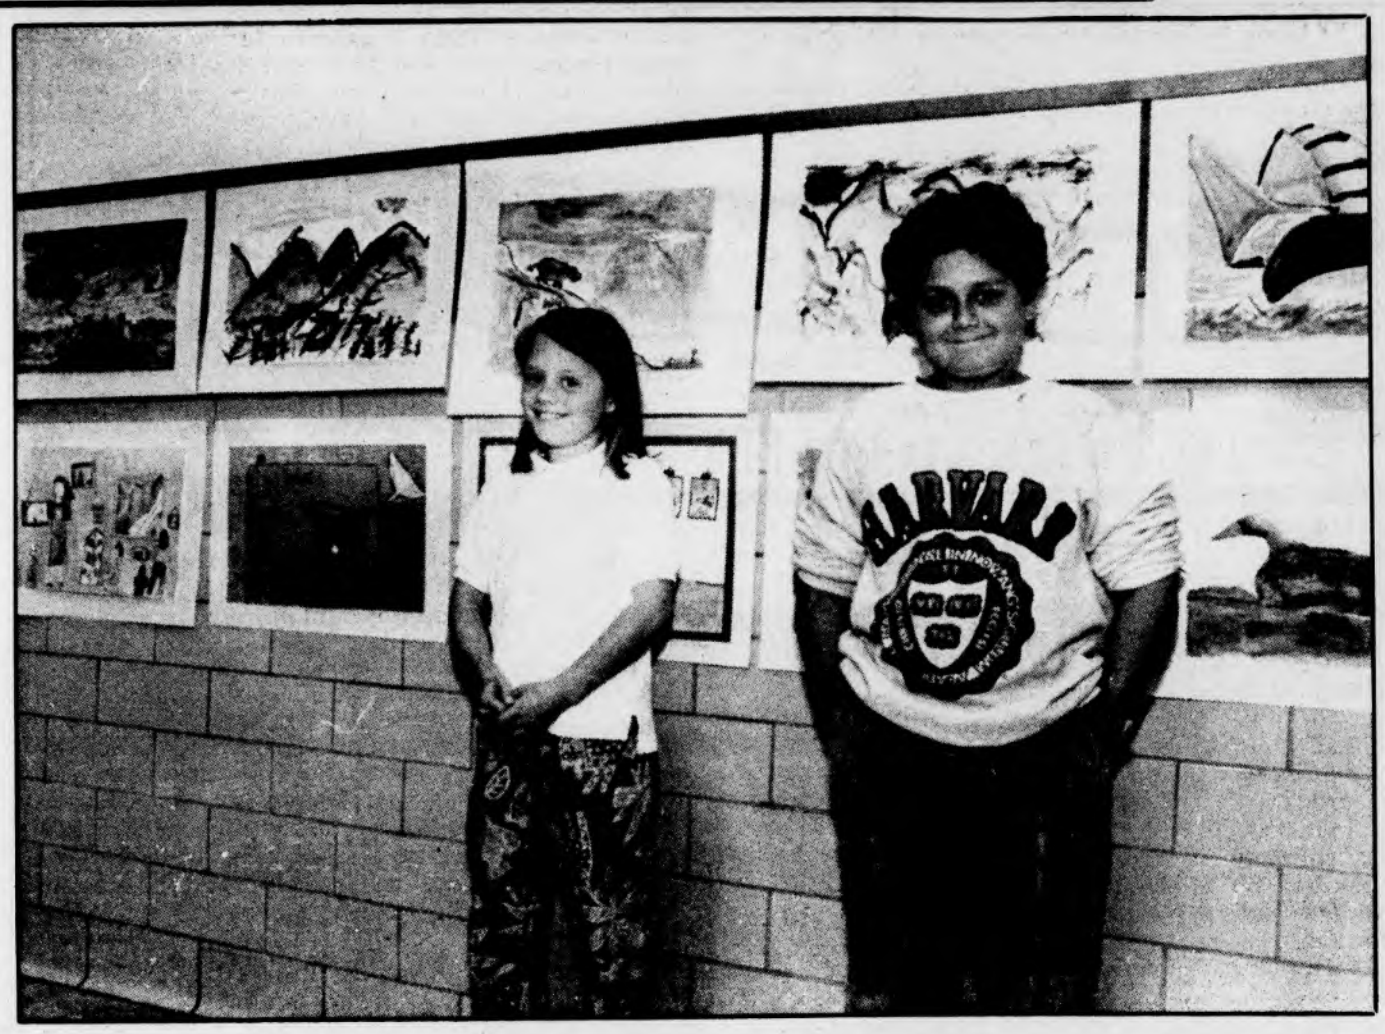
The third grade students at Osgood School entered a poetry writing contest sponsored by The Arnold Arboretum of Harvard University in celebration of trees for Arbor Day — 1989.

The children had a wonderful time expressing their appreciation of nature in verse and their efforts were rewarded with a certificate which proclaimed them all as an "Official Board of the Arboretum."

Teacher to travel to Middle East

Jack Buckley, Director of the Alternative School, is travelling to the Middle East to participate in a study tour about the Arab-Israeli dispute. The trip is sponsored by the PAX WORLD FOUNDATION — a group dedicated to promoting "international understanding, reconciliation, and development in Third World countries." The trip takes place June 10-24.

Educational loans at low rate



The Massachusetts Loan Authority (MELA) interest rate on the Family Education Loan and Graduate Education Loan has been set at 9.5 percent for the start of the 1989-90 academic year.

This will be the third consecutive year MELA has been able to maintain this below-market interest rate. At a fixed rate of 9.5 percent, monthly payments will be $11.74 per thousand dollars borrowed for the thirteen and a half year repayment period. Loans may be secured through a home mortgage at the borrower's option.

Forty-seven public and independent colleges and universities in the Commonwealth offer MELA loans.

MELA was created in 1982 through an act of the Massachusetts legislature in response to concerns about the affordability of higher education. The Authority's purpose is to provide low cost financing options for families with children attending participating Massachusetts colleges and universities. Operating with a self-financing structure, the Authority sells bonds on a pooled basis and uses the proceeds to provide fixed-rates, long-term loans. Participating colleges help keep the interest rate low by providing administrative and financial support to the program. Since the spring of 1983, over 13,000 loans totaling more than $100 million have been made through MELA.

Brochures are available at the Hingham, Hull and Cohasset libraries to inform families on the eligibility requirements, application process and participating institutions.

"What was inside your flower?"

The following are stories from some of the children at the Osgood School:

The Flower

Once there was a flower and it was a strange flower. No one would play with her. Her name was Rose. One day the flower was getting bigger and bigger until it punched out into a fairy princess. She was beautiful. Then, she found a boy fairy prince. She married him. She had a baby and they lived happily ever after.

Kim Welby

The Flower

We could plant the seed in the garden in my backyard. Then, cover the seed up with dirt. Then, it grows four feet tall. When the sun came up, I looked out the window. I saw a computer in the flower. I went downstairs to get it. I brought it in the house. I brought it upstairs to my room. Then, I plugged it in and turned it on. I did schoolwork on the computer.

Shaun Galvin

The Alien That Once Could

Once upon a time there was a flower on a small planet. Halleys Comet was going by the flower and it started to cry. Suddenly, POP, a little alien named Charlie, came out of the flower.

It jumped on the comet. Then the comet disappeared. Charlie fell off, and landed in a chimney. A little girl who lived there went to get her homework in the room with the chimney. She found Charlie in the fireplace. She took him out of the fireplace. She thought he was a stuffed animal. So, she went upstairs and threw him on the bed. She said to herself, "How did he get in the fireplace?" After a month or two she found out that he was real. They played together for a long time. One day it started to snow and Charlie did not know what was happening. So, he ran under the bed. The little girl said, "It's nothing to be afraid of. It's just snow." They made a snowman. After a long time, they went to watch Halleys Comet. He said, "I have to be going now. I hope I can see you again." He jumped back on the comet and rode back to his planet.

Jordan Fiore

Boston school studied

This article was written by METCO graduate Vonnessa Goode about her senior project.

Yes, the education which I received from the Cohasset school system was excellent but there was one thing I wanted to learn about and it was not possible within the walls of Cohasset High. Thanks to the creation of the senior project, I was able to explore the thing which most interested me, a Boston Public School. Even though I live in Roxbury, I have gone to the Cohasset schools all of my schooling years. Through these years I've tried to picture what Boston Public schools were like. Therefore, when the opportunity came around I took it.

The week before Senior Project began I had nightmares about the students not accepting me but when I got there it was totally the opposite. I was greeted with wonderful smiles and friendly hellos. Walking through the doors was like entering a new world for me. There was some of every nationality. Actually, out of a population of 3,225 students 66 percent were Black, 17 percent were Asian, 7 percent were Hispanic, and 10 percent were other according to the assistant headmaster, Mr. Bell. Although the population was large and one person had a different ethnic background than the next person, most everyone seemed to get along well. Well, so much for the social aspect of Boston Technical High.

The academic content was right up there with Cohasset High. (With Cohasset being about one step ahead.) The teachers that I had taught well even though I was not used to a certain teacher's style of teaching. I found the majority of the senior class well prepared to go on to any four year college of their choice. The students participated in the class work and they were not being prosecuted for drugs or any violent crime. The school wasn't perfect but no school is.

One might ask me if I thought I missed out by coming to Cohasset High. My answer to this question is yes and no, respectively. Culturally, I believe I was sheltered. I'd never come in contact with Asians, Dominicans, or any other nationality besides Blacks and Whites until I went to Boston Technical High. Academically, Cohasset and Boston Technical High are basically on the same level with Cohasset maybe one step ahead of Tech. In a whole, my experience at Boston Technical High School was superb and I'd like to thank everyone who made it possible.

New New Medicare Law:

The Medicare Catastrophic Coverage Act of 1988 provides several new benefits for Seniors. However, it's fairness is being questioned for two reasons: First, very few Seniors will benefit from the expanded coverage. Second, not only are seniors themselves paying for the new benefits through increase premiums and a surtax, but the surtax falls unevenly on people depending on their source of income.

New Benefits: There are several examples of changes in coverage for which few Seniors will benefit.

For instance, coverage of care in skilled nursing facilities is extended from 100 days per spell of illness to 150 days a year. However, there is no change in the definition of "skilled care," a limitation which eliminates all but a few nursing home residents.

In 1984, for example, only 0.6 percent of nursing home patient days in Mass. were covered by Medicare. Furthermore, for those patients who do qualify for Medicare coverage, the average coverage period is only 15 dys. Thus, with so few people qualifying for more than 100 days of coverage, the 150 day extension will benefit a very small number of Seniors. The new law provides unlimited hospital benefits after an annual deductible of $564 (1989) as opposed to only 90 days plus (60) lifetime reserve days, per spell of illness under the old plan. However, with a 17-day average length of stay, this will be used to only the rare Medicare patients. The caps on payments to Doctor's under Part B, and the new prescription drug provisions, with help only the most severely ill beneficiaries. The out-of-pocket expenses under Part B will be limited to $1,370 in 1990 (indexed to inflation in later years). Beginning in 1990, Medicare will begin to cover one half of the "Medicare-approved charge" for prescription drugs, after the person has paid a deductible, which will be $550 in the first year. The deductible will increase to $600 in 1991 and to $652 in 1992 as well as the Medicare-paid portion of the cost each year to 60% in 1992 and 80% in 1993. Most Medicare recipients do not have prescription drug costs exceeding the deductible.

New Taxes: The inequitable in the Medicare Catastrophic Coverage Act lies in the distribution of the insurance premiums rather than benefits come in two forms: and additional Part B premium of $4 a month in '89, increasing to $10.20 a month in '93.

If you have questions regarding this matter, please call the Cohasset Council On Aging Office and ask for the SHINE coordinator, Ms. Pat Ryan at 383-9112. This program is sponsored by the Executive Office of Elder Affairs in conjunction with Council On Aging. The program hosts 25 volunteers placed at near-by Councils around the South Shore.

WELLNESS TIPS:
STRESS VITAMINS DON'T HELP.

So called stress vitamins, which manufacturers claim will help cope with emotional stress, "serve no purpose," according to a recent issue of the University of California, Berkeley wellness letter. "Although your body may need more vitamins during periods of physical stress (after surgery for instance) there is no evidence that these special formulas (usually vitamins C, E, & B complex) will help you if you are facing psychological stress.

TIP: FREE YOURSELF FROM TENSION:

(1) breath deeply, slowly, calm your mind — relax. (2) think positive, remove negative thoughts — they cause tension. (3) recognize your signals (when things get crazy, see it, let it go.) (4) take time for seclusion, take a break, be alone, relax, meditate, rest, pray and sing. (5) be true to yourself, your values, goals and priorities. (6) don't get hassled by small stuff. (7) remember — it's all small stuff.

SPECIAL SENIOR WEEK THANKS!

Our Senior Center appreciation week was a great success and the Council wishes to thank the following! Frank Anderson for all his great help with printing and signs. Ronnie Wach for designing the flyers, South Shore Elder Services for great lunch (DAKA), to the ten member volunteer committee for all their hard work, to the Selectmen for helping with relocating classes, to Michael McNamara for his expertise in investments, to David Wadsworth — great slides on Cohasset, to Lot Bates — wonderful bread & teaching, to Betty Grassie for her wonderful oral History project with the Seniors, to Rose Ryder & Co. for the great sing-a-long, to Lou Simeone for taping the event and to June Simeone for all the table signs, to all the instructors for coming and displaying their talents, to all the Great Bakers. I hope we didn't leave out anyone! This project could never have happened without all the wonderful dedicated volunteers we have. We thank you all for your caring and sharing for our Seniors.

The Council offers a variety of programming and classes to Seniors, Keep Well Clinic with South Shore League, the Board of Health Nurse, and the Yearly Health Fair. In addition, the Council processes fuel assistance applications for eligible town residents. It is the 116 volunteers (wonderful people) who help us provide quality service to the 1,425 Seniors living in Cohasset. In 1988, for every dollar spent by the Town-One (1) unit of service was delivered through the Council On Aging to the Seniors. We hope you find this information interesting and informative. To answer your questions regarding services, please contact the Council On Aging at 383-9112.

Profile of Little League METS

The METS, currently in a battle for second place standings within the five team major league division, have valiantly weathered a first half of injuries.

Off the Field injuries halted the baseball seasons of Bradley Potolichio and J.L. Williams. Bradley and J.L. were both expected to provide power hitting to the lineup. Brad has been lost for the summer due to a broken foot. And J.L. may see limited action in the second half after sustaining an injury to his mouth.

The METS success has been due to their pitching and speedy base running.

Pitching outstanding ball for the METS have been Eric Henry, Brendan Kinchla, Taylor Devin and Ben Redfield. While speedy baserunning is evidenced by the Inside the Park home runs registered by both Eric Henry and Brendan Kinchla.

Catching has been provided by Ben Redfield, Brendan Kinchla and Andy Fitzsimmons and the catching has been excellent. The METS catchers have the lowest average of stolen bases per game in the league.

Shortstop duties have been held by Eric Henry and Taylor Devin. Third base has been held by Ely Kahn. First base has been held by Andy Fitzsimmons. Second base has been held by Taylor Devin and Trevor Cook. Centerfield is owned by Kenny Leahy. In Left Field is Andy Collins and Right Field is rotated between Jason Murphy and Sam Goedecke.

The team has been led by their veterans 12 year olds, Brendan Kinchla, Ben Redfield, Andy Fitzsimmons and Trevor Cook and 11 year olds Eric Henry and Kenny Leahy. Other 11 year olds on the team are Jason Murphy and Andy Collins. 10 year olds on the team are Taylor Devin, Ely Kahn and Sam Goedecke.

Rookies on this year's team have made a large contribution to the success. Both Ely Kahn and Taylor Devin have hit with power, while Sam Goedecke is platooning at catcher late in the game.

Coaching this year's METS are Roy Fitzsimmons, David Leahy and Bob Devin.

The METS were sponsored this year by Dean Witter Investments.

Some classroom problems stay after school for a lifetime.

"Sliding" grades. Long periods of daydreaming. Difficulty communicating with family and friends. Problems with balance or coordination. Behaviors which hinder success.

These could be symptoms of a learning or developmental disability. Left undiagnosed or untreated, the resulting problems could affect a child for a lifetime. The Braintree Hospital Pediatric Program can help.

Pediatric Evaluation Is the Beginning.

Your child's problems are thoroughly diagnosed by a team of specialists during a comprehensive evaluation that focuses on social, intellectual, communicative , educational and physical development. Specific concerns with hearing, speech and language, and fine and gross motor can be evaluated individually.

Results are shared with you, your child's teachers and your pediatrician. Treatment recommendations designed to improve functioning in school and at home are provided.

Pediatric Treatment Is the Remedy.

The Braintree Hospital Pediatric Program provides individualized outpatient treatment services in physical therapy, occupational therapy and speech therapy, utilizing a team approach when appropriate.

Early Detection Is the Key.

Discuss this with your pediatrician. Call for an appointment today. Services are covered by most third-party reimbusement plans.

Annual garden tour

Step "Through the Garden Gate," for the South Shore Natural Science Center's annual Garden Tour, Wednesday, June 28, 9:30 a.m. - 3 p.m. This year's tour features six spectacular South Shore gardens in Hanover, Norwell, and Scituate.

The "Through the Garden Gate" garden tour committee, cochaired by Joan Kenworthy of Rockland and Priscilla Crosby of Hanson, has chosen an array of interesting horticultural experiences to entice longtime gardeners and novices alike, from sunny spots to shade to woodland gardens. Some highlights of the tour include lavish rose gardens, rare ornamental trees and shimmering perennial flower beds. Raised vegetable beds and organic gardens will also be shown.

Tickets are $12 for the Garden Tour and a light luncheon of chef's salad, which will be catered by Arthur Roebuck of Hingham's British Relief Restaurant and served at the Science Center from noon to 2 p.m. Luncheon tickets must be purchased in advance (deadline is Monday, June 26). Tickets for the Garden Tour only are $8 and may be purchased in advance or at any of the gardens or the Science Center on the day of the tour. Tickets are available at the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell and may be purchased by cash, check or credit card (Mastercard and VISA). For more information, please call the Science Center (617) 659-2559. Raindate for the tour is Thursday, June 29.

South Shore Natural Science Center is located on Jacobs Lane, Norwell, just off Route 123 and less than one mile from the Route 3/Route 53 interchange (Exit 13). The Center is open Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sundays, 1 to 4 p.m.

Workshop deals with stress

Aline Benoit a clarinetist with a master's degree in psychology, will give a two hour performance enhancement Saturday, June 17 from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. at the South Shore Conservatory in Hingham.

After graduating from the Eastman School of Music, Benoit furthered her studies in psychology and graduated with a degree in Holistic Counseling Psychology from Lesley College.

"I'd like to think of this class as stress management", said Benoit, "with a focus on doing a job, whatever job, better. Music is simply a metaphor for whatever task you want to complete. I will teach the tools we all need to perform better. The psychology of performance carries over to every aspect of our life."

It is necessary to register in advance for this course. You may register by calling the South Shore Conservatory office at 749-7565. The fee for the workshop will be $30.

Young at Heart auditions

Young at Heart Theatre will hold auditions for its 1989 summer musical, "Annie, Get Your Gun," on Tuesday, June 20 and Wednesday, June 21 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. The audition site will be St. John the Evangelist Church Hall, 172 Main Street in Hingham.

Young at Heart Theatre provides an opportunity for young people, aged 12 to 23, to take part in the staging of a full-scale musical theatre production each summer. Last year's critically acclaimed production of "The Pajama Game" involved nearly eighty young performers and crew members from a dozen area communities.

This summer's show is the musical life story of Annie Oakley, a classic by Rodgers and Hammerstein. The director is Bonnie McArthur-Connor of Hingham, and the musical direction will be provided by Jose Coronado of Brockton.

Auditioners must be aged 12 through 23, and should be prepared to sing, dance and act. Please try to make it as early as possible on the evening you decide to attend.

St. John's is a stone church on the corner of Main and Water Streets near Hingham Square. Parking is limited, so please arrange a drop-off if possible.

For more information, contact Justine at 749-4620.

Nature day camp

Cohasset Community Center's Pre-School Nature Day Camp will offer a regular pre-school format plus nature-related activities to children ages 3-6.

Campers will enjoy free play, music, creative activities and exploratory nature walks. During inclement weather, camp will be held indoors in the nursery school. The instructor is Irene Volpe, a special needs teacher.

Camp will be held Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to noon during the following one-week sessions: June 19 to 23, June 26 to 30, July 10 to 14, July 17 to 21, July 31 to Aug. 4, Aug. 21 to 25. Cost is $65 per session. To register or for further information call the Cohasset Community Center at 383-0088.

Taoist workshop at Wah Lum

Wah Lum Academy of Cohasset will host three workshops with world renowned author/Taoist Master Mantak Chia on June 24 & 25.

Master Chia's teachings deal with the cultivation of one's personal life force (Chi) energy through meditation and chi kung practices. The workshops are open to the public and are for anyone seeking to enhance their own energy level or better manage negative/stress energy.

The first workshop, the Microcosmic Orbit meditation, awakens and circulates Chi energy through the accupuncture channels. The second workshop, Iron Shirt Chi Kung, strengthens the structural and immune systems of the body, and the third workshop, Healing Hands, is particularly suited for anyone involved in the healing process of others.

To preregister or for more information, call 617-383-6822.

Council on Aging annual meeting

The Friends of the Cohasset Council On Aging will hold its first Annual Meeting on Saturday, June 17, at 10 a.m. at the Cohasset Senior Center. There will be an election of officers and directors for the coming year.

Donald H. Strong of Hingham will be a guest speaker. Mr. Strong is the past Executive Director of the Massachusetts Department of Elder Affairs, Quincy Council On Aging and Beechwood Center. He serves on the Board of Directors for the Protestant Social Service Bureau and has been a Program Specialist for the U.S. Administration On Aging.

Everyone is welcome to attend. For information call Karen Corcoran, 383-6767.

Center needs volunteers

Cohasset Swim Center has started off its 1989 season with a bang.

There is a new cast of guards, a new board of managers and a new look, thanks to the help of many volunteers both young and old. Volunteers are still needed to assist throughout the season.

June 4, the parking lot was cleared of all debris and brush. Michael Jones was generous by donating his time and machinery to chip and discard all the brush that was cut. Abbie White will serve as Director, Sarah Trask as Assistant Director, Kate Anderson and Eiren Canavan as swim team coaches this season.

June 16 and 17 will be swim team tryouts and the Red Cross sign-up. Opening Day will be June 17.

Amateur gardeners meeting

The last meeting of the current season of the Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will be a trip and luncheon at Green Tree Farm in Merrimac, June 20.

Members will meet at St. Anthony parking area at 9 a.m. Regular meetings will resume September 19.

Trustees to keep watch July 4

There was a Trustees Meeting of the Cohasset Conservation Trust on June 7.

At that meeting, Sumner Smith Jr. of King Street was unanimously voted to become a new trustee.

The Cohasset Conservation Trust is a private land trust, the purpose of which is to acquire and hold land which is of value for open space/conservation purposes in Cohasset and adjacent towns.

Currently the trustees are Charles Fink, Roger Porter, Edward Long, Richard Leggat, Sumner Smith Jr. and John Hubbard, president.

In other business, trustees expressed concern about overnight camping which has taken place over past July 4 weekends on Bassing's Beach in Scituate which is one of the properties owned by the Trust. There are no sanitary facilities for camping on Bassing's Beach; environmental damage may be occurring to the dunes and beach grass; the danger of fire from cooking equipment and fireworks is a serious threat; litter is also a serious problem, the trustees concluded.

The Trustees decided to monitor activity during this year's July 4 activities.

Summer theatre registration

A reminder to all area residents that the final registration for the Young People's Summer Theatre of Scituate's new program for ages 7-12 years old will be held Saturday, June 17 from 11 a.m. - 2 p.m. at the First Congregational Church on Country Way in Scituate.

Details on the program and its schedule will be available during those hours. Registration is $100 per person (non-refundable), with a discount given to families with two or more members enrolled. There will be a total of sixteen sessions held, starting June 20 and culminating in a musical revue which will be presented on the last weekend in July. The sessions will include rehearsals for the show, but will also be workshops studying various aspects of performing.

Don Capen, Director of the existing YPST program for ages 13-22 which is now in its 13th year, will run the daytime program with assistant Wendy MacPhetres, and Musical Accompanist Meri-Lee Mafera.

More information can be obtained by calling 826-7983.

First summer concert

The Cohasset Recreation Commission's first concert of the 1989 season, will be held on Sunday, June 25, at 3 p.m. at the town common. The 30-piece South Shore Concert Band will perform under the direction of Richard Whitmarsh. The band is sponsored by the American, and local Brockton, Federation of Musicians. This year, the recreation department did not have sufficient budget money for the annual concert series. The South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc. has donated enough money for three concerts to be held in June, July, and August. The Art's Lottery Council has also contributed towards a concert. People attending the concerts are encourage to bring either lawn chairs or blankets.

SUMMER PLAYGROUND

Registrations for the Cohasset Recreation Department's summer playground program will start Monday, June 19, from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m. through Thursday, and again Thursday evening from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m.

The program will begin on Wednesday, July 5, and continue for seven weeks, through Friday August 18. The fee for the program is $80 for the first child in the 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. program with $15 discount per child for other family members in that group, and $60 for the 3 and 4 year olds, half-day, program, also with $15 per child discounts available for other siblings in the 3 and 4 year old group.

Discounts between the 5 and 12 year old, and the 3 and 4 year-old program are not available.

If these fees are a financial burden, contact Jack Worley at the recreation office or any member of the recreation commission.

YOUTH TENNIS

Registration for everyone who wishes to take tennis lessons will be held during the same hours as the playground registration. The fee will be $30 for the seven-week program, with $10 per child family discounts available.

Derek Lacks and Frank Willshire will be the instructors. Youth tennis will begin Wednesday and Thursday, July 5 and 6. Pre-registration is required.

Summer At The Science Center

Take a canoe trip, a bird walk, or a cruise with naturalists from the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell.

POW WOW

Join Chief One Bear and his People for the 13th annual T.O.P.I.C. Pow Wow, Saturday and Sunday, June 24 and 25, 11 a.m. - 6 p.m. Donation: Adults/$.99; Children/$.50. Come see tribal dancing and browse the Indian craft tables. Shows: Saturday, 2 and 4 p.m.; Sunday, 2 p.m. At the Science Center.

Obituaries

Anne E. Cifrino

A funeral Mass was celebrated June 14 at St. Anthony's Church for Anne E. (Garvey) Cifrino, 61, of Cohasset, who died June 10 at Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, after a short illness.

Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Mrs. Cifrino was an avid golfer and gardener.

She was a member of the Wollaston Golf Club, the Cohasset Golf Club and the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

Born in Boston, she lived in Dorchester before she moved to Cohasset 38 years ago.

Mrs. Cifrino was a 1945 graduate of Boston Girls Latin School and a 1949 graduate of Regis College, Weston.

She leaves her husband, James P. Cifrino; five sons, James P. Cifrino Jr. and Steven Cifrino, both of Cohasset, Thomas M. Cifrino of Hanover, David A. Cifrino of Boston and Michael S. Cifrino of Hingham; three daughters, Mary Ellen McNamara of Columbia, Md., Anne M. Cifrino of Hingham and Amy Rooney of Cohasset; three sisters, Mary Findley and Regina Garvey, both of Milton, and Helen O'Meara of Hingham; and five grandchildren. She was the sister of the late John A. Garvey and Thomas F. Garvey.

The Rev. John Broderick celebrated the funeral Mass.

Funeral arrangements were by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St.

Louise J. Wheelwright

A funeral service was held June 13 at Second Congregational Church for Louise J. (Thomas) Wheelwright, 75, of Cohasset who died June 11 at South Shore Hospital, Weymouth, after a brief illness.

Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Mrs. Wheelwright was a former salesclerk at the Children's Shop in Cushing Plaza.

She was formerly associated with the Elizabeth Bristol retail clothing store in Cohasset.

Born in Brockton, she lived in Quincy for 21 years and attended Quincy schools.

She moved to Cohasset 55 years ago.

She leaves her husband, Walter C. Wheelwright Jr.; a son, Frank W. Wheelwright of Hanover; her mother, Esther (Hanson) Thomas of Brockton; a brother, Joseph Thomas of North Kingstown, R.I.; two sisters, Marjorie Backman of Carver and Louise Anderson of Canton; three grandchildren, Frank W. Wheelwright and Denise Gardner, both of Cohasset, and Robert J. Wheelwright of Hanover; and two great grandchildren, Lindsey Gardner and Jessica L. Wheelwright, both of Cohasset.

Funeral arrangements were by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Donations may be made to charity.

Quarterly cash dividend report

The Board of Directors of Cohasset Savings Bank (NASDAQ-CHTB) has declared the Bank's sixth quarterly cash dividend payable July 3, 1989 to stockholders of record June 16, 1989, continuing the rate of $.06 per share established for the first quarter of 1989. The Bank has 1,002,978 shares outstanding.

The Bank reported net income of $131,000 or $.13 per share for the first quarter ended March 31, 1989. At the annual meeting in April, Donald E. Bates, President, noted that during the first quarter net interest income continued to increase despite higher rates on deposits that were introduced to stem an earlier outflow. Total deposits increased approximately $2.3 million in the first quarter to $48,089,000. Total assets as of March 31, 1989 were $64,719,000 and stockholders' equity at that date was $12,716,000.

Endangered turtles released by science center to ponds

Twenty Redbelly turtles, who spent the winter at the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell, were among 130 of the federally endangered species released to ponds in Plymouth and Carver recently.

The turtles were "headstarted" by nine conservation organizations (including the Science Center), under the auspices of the Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Wildlife as part of an effort to increase their population.

The Plymouth Redbelly turtle, numbering about 300 adults, is found in only a handful of ponds in southeastern Massachusetts. They are also found in northern New Jersey, eastern West Virginia, and northeastern North Carolina.

With research indicating a high rate of mortality in young Redbelly turtles as the key factor holding down the population's growth, Mass. Fish and Wildlife developed a plan to "headstart" young turtles to assist them in surviving the period when they are most vulnerable. With this in mind, nesting females were tracked, nests were protected and watched, and, as the eggs hatched, the hatchlings were collected and distributed to the cooperating organizations.

During their stay at the Science Center, the young turtles were part of an exhibit to educate the public about these special reptiles. "We used them to teach school and youth groups about the importance of habitat conservation and to highlight local environmental issues," said Ted Elliman, Science Center Education Director. "The kids were excited watching them grow and being involved in this important research to increase their numbers."

The exhibit was constructed with one-way glass, allowing the children to observe them without the turtles getting used to human beings or losing their natural fear of predators.

Declared an endangered species in 1980, the turtle has been the subject of research and restoration efforts by the Mass. Division of Fisheries and Wildlife and other cooperating individuals and organizations. In 1980, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service designated 3,269 acres in Plymouth as "critical habitat," giving limited protection from development to key ponds and their surrounding areas. In 1983, the turtle was further protected with the establishment of the Massasoit National Wildlife Refuge. This 140-acre area contains two of the 15 ponds where the turtle is known to exist and is the first national wildlife refuge ever established for a freshwater turtle.

In 1981, the Division contracted with Dr. Terry Graham of Worcester State College, an acknowledged authority on the rare reptiles, to study the biology of the turtles.

Maintained in a warm environment and well fed through the winter months, the young turtles grow rapidly. At the South Shore Natural Science Center, the turtles' winter diet consisted of red-leaf lettuce and commercially available turtle food. By spring the 1 1/2 inch hatchlings had grown to more than 4 inches. In fact, many of the eight-month-old turtles were as big as four- or five-year-old turtles in the wild.

On May 26, Science Center staff member Bev Litchfield joined people from the other fostering organizations at the Division's Field Headquarters in Westboro where the surviving 130 turtles (only 10 died over the winter) were marked so that each turtle could be identified in the future. "I was happy to see that the Science Center's 20 turtles were among the largest," said Mrs. Litchfield.

These turtles have an advantage over their wild counterparts, as their increased size offers some protection against predatory snapping turtles, bullfrogs, and large fish. Many of the approximately 300 headstarted red-bellies released in the past four years have been recaptured and appear to be thriving — a good indication that the management technique is successful.

In addition to the Science Center, other organizations taking part in the headstart program this year were: Museum of Science, Boston; New England Aquarium, Boston; Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield; New England Science Center, Worcester; Springfield Science Museum, Springfield; Triton High School, Byfield; Roger Williams Park Zoo, Providence, R.I.; and Connecticut Science Museum, West Hartford, Conn.

Debate over June 28 override special election

• Selectmen wanted more options . . .

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Selectman Martha Gjesteby was the first to suggest that there should be two general override options on the June 28 special election ballot.

She suggested, and the majority of the board of selectmen agreed, voters should have the option of approving a $203,800 override figure, as well as the higher figure proposed by the school committee and adopted by the May 31 town meeting.

She did not intend to confuse people, Gjesteby stated this week. She simply thought that residents should have the opportunity to vote on the override figure recommended by the advisory committee following the override defeat at the May 6 special election.

"Before town meeting, people were watching the selectmen's meetings and the advisory committee meetings, and they saw the process whereby the advisory committee came up with a $203,800 general override figure. Then there's a sudden bolt out of the blue at town meeting and the school committee is proposing an extra $100,000. That is their right, but I believe many people in this town

(See page 9)

• But schools disagree

The school committee's override proposal of $303,800 will not restore the school budget to the level originally recommended by that committee and the advisory committee.

School committee chairman Barbara Bliss said that some residents think that if the override succeeds, that amount will be an "extra" added onto a $5 million school budget. In fact, she explained, passage of a $303,800 override will still require a $150,000 reduction in their budget.

Without any override, $400,000 will

(See page 9)

• Advisors task over

The job is all but over for the advisory committee. Prior to the May 31 town meeting, they worked to pare down an override amount that might be more acceptable to the voters.

Following the defeat of the override questions May 6, the committee worked furiously to present an acceptable alternative to town meeting.

They devised an alternate override choice of $203,800, which will retain $50,000 for all town departments, and $150,000 for the school department. If both overrides fail June 28, every town

Tebbetts family had front seat to China's history

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

When Ned and Priscilla Tebbetts of Jerusalem Drive signed up last year for a trip to China, they expected to learn about that country's history.

But the Cohasset selectman and his wife didn't plan on having a front row seat to a new chapter.

During their three-week trip, the two visited Tiananmen Square just days before troops killed hundreds, some say thousands, of student protesters in a massacre June 3-4.

The students had been demonstrating for freedom of the press and against corruption.

"It wasn't only scary, but I felt very sad," said Priscilla Tebbetts. "The people had been so friendly."

"The students were very brave to do what they did," said Ned Tebbetts. "China is a dictatorship.

"A lot of the students knew they would be treated harshly. It was a big risk."

Ironically, when the Tebbettses had visited Tiananmen Square the second of two times, they had thought the protest was ending.

"There always was the potential for violence," said Ned. "But it looked to us like the demonstration was petering out.

"What happened was frightening. "There are plenty of methods for dealing with situations short of bullets."

Their first view of the square May 30 was through the windows of a tour bus, they said.

"We wanted to go by the square, so we persuaded the guides," said Priscilla. "Students were giving the V for victory sign."

"They had been there for some time," said Ned, who compared the size of the square to that of the Boston Garden and Boston Common combined.

"They were playing the communist anthem," he said. "They were trying to modernize communism like the Russians. There was more of festive air at that point."

Included among the pup tents and signs was a statue of liberty made of plaster and foam.

"They called it the Goddess of Liberty," said Priscilla.

The tour group walked through the square for about an hour Thursday, June 1.

"Some in our group gave gifts to the students," said Ned.

He estimated that there were 5,000 students at the square on Tuesday, and 2,000 on Thursday, June 1.

Asst. superintendent gets ready for another change

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

When Cohasset's assistant school superintendent Richard Streeter cleaned out his desk last week, it wasn't with the usual thoughts of summer and vacation.

Because for the first time in 39 years, he wouldn't be returning to school in the fall.

Streeter, 63, has decided to call it a career and to retire with his wife, Priscilla, to a home in Sandwich.

"I'm looking forward to retirement," he said. "I'm not sad. But I'll miss the people."

Cohasset, where he has been involved in the educational system for 19 years, has been a big part of Streeter's life.

He served as principal at the high school for 16 years, and then became assistant superintendent three years ago.

Streeter and his wife grew up in Wilmington, Vt., a small town not too different from Cohasset.

"I was a pretty good student," he said. "I was into athletics."

He earned a BS degree in biology and health from Springfield College, then worked for the next 20 years as a teacher and later administrator at several Vermont high schools.

He also coached sports for a time.

"I enjoyed teaching," he said. "There was real direct contact with students on a daily basis."

He describes himself as reasonably strict as a teacher.

"But I always tried to interject some humor," he said.

When there was an opening at Bellows Falls High School for an assistant principal, he applied and was selected for the job.

"I enjoyed being assistant principal even though you had to be a little bit tough at times," said Streeter.

"Times were different then," he reflected. "You could send a girl home because her skirt was too short. Or you could send a boy for a haircut because his hair was too long.

"One time when that happened, the mother thanked me.

"Those were different times. You could do that."

Cohasset's week . . .

Remove trees at intersection

The junction of Forest Ave. and Forest Notch is the site of a dangerous intersection, according to a local resident.

Peter Lelecas of Forest Notch wrote to selectmen to bring the situation to their attention.

"Several years ago, the town had attempted to correct this situation by having the county engineers survey the town's right of way on both Forest Avenue and Forest Notch, marking the ledge that interfered with the vision of oncoming traffic, and had that portion of the ledge that was on town property removed,"said Lelecas.

"Since then, the owner of the property at the southerly junction of Forest Avenue and Forest Notch, 195 Forest Avenue, has planted shrubbery on the town property that was cleared.

"This, together with two trees that he had planted on town property, now completely blocks all vision of oncoming traffic.

"It is now necessary to move one's auto completely out into the roadway when leaving Forest Notch before one can see what is approaching in a northerly direction."

Lelecas asked selectmen to order the immediate removal of the trees and plantings, and order the owner of 195 Forest Notch to refrain from further plantings on town property.

"Since both I and another visiting relative have been involved in collisions when attempting to leave Forest Notch in previous years when the ledge obstructed this view, it is now only a matter of time before another collision occurs," he said.

Doyon thanked by Chamber

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has written to Greg Doyon, executive secretary of the board of selectmen, thanking him for speaking before the group.

"You did a fine job, and I think everyone in attendance gained a lot of insight into the workings of town government," said Robert E. Martin, Jr.

"They also gained an appreciation of some of the everyday problems that confront you," said Martin.

"Your preparation for this meeting was very apparent and is greatly appreciated."

Town won't appeal ABCC

Selectmen will not appeal a ruling by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission regarding Cohasset Central Market.

In an hour-long meeting last Thursday, June 15, the board voted 3 to 1 not to appeal the action.

Selectmen chairman Burt Pratt had been in favor of pursuing the action.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle was not at the meeting.

The ABCC recently reversed the decision of selectmen who revoked the liquor license of Cohasset Central Market in February.

The board had transferred the market's license last October from James Finucane of Marshfield to Kevin McManus.

But the lease arrangement was never completed, and the store wasn't reopened.

In addition, the Department of Revenue notified the board that a tax matter regarding the market was pending.

Cohasset Central Market appealed the selectmen's decision.

In its May 11 decision, the ABCC ruled that the applicant "should be afforded some futher opportunity to transfer the license."

"We voted not to pursue the action because it was too expensive and too time consuming," said selectmen Ned Tebbetts.

Also voting agains the action were selectmen Martha Gjesteby and Diana Kornet.

Town counsel Richard Henderson, who had advised the board not to appeal the decision, said the cost of further action could be "in the thousands."

Henderson said that if the market owner does not have a lease or location in 90 days, the board can deny the license again.

"It's cheaper to say no here," said Henderson.

"In the letter (from the ABCC) they said to give Cohasset Market two to three months to find a buyer," said Tebbetts.

"So, that's what we are going to do."

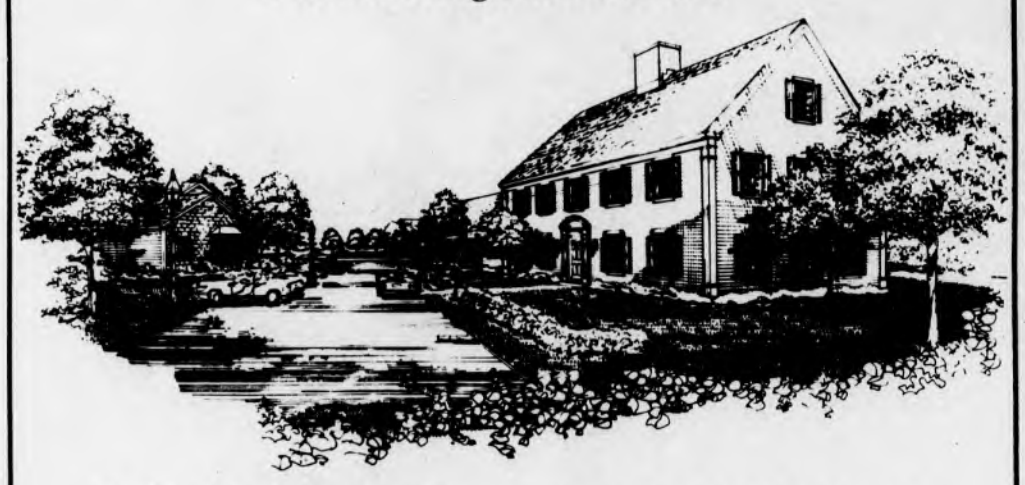
Absentee ballots for election

Absentee ballots are available at the town clerk's office for the June 28 special election, according to Town Clerk Frances Marks.

Office hours are Monday to Wednesday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m., and Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., she said.



Last day to apply for absentee ballots will be Tuesday, June 27, at noon, said Marks.

The polls will be open for the special election 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Wednesday, June 28.

Cohasset's week . . .

The water cooler at the town hall, now deceased, was a favorite fixture of the town hall kitchen.
(Staff photo/Jane Lane)

Watering hole gone dry

Town hall employees are holding a wake.

But it's not for a fellow employee.

It's for the popular spring water cooler in the employee's lounge soon to be a casualty of budget cuts.

The water cooler, which dispenses hot and cold water, is draped in black crepe paper, and a sign proclaims, R.I.P. (Rest in Peace).

It is scheduled to be removed by the end of the fiscal year, June 30.

"It was a petty thing to cut," said one employee who asked not to be identified.

"And we do feel bad about it.

"We use it for coffee, tea and soup.

"And the selectmen use it for their meetings."

When voters did not approve an override in April, town departments were asked to cut 9 percent from their budgets.

Selectmen felt the water cooler was one item which could be cut.

One board member called the water cooler a luxury.

It costs $600 to $900 a year, according to the board's executive secretary.

"We fought for the water cooler for 15 years, maybe longer," said the employee.

"We have no water at town hall, except Cohasset water and that's lousy.

"It was really appreciated when we got the cooler.

"We just really think it is picayune, and a small thing to do," said the employee.

"Especially since other departments are not being cut at all."

Amidst the crepe paper and RIP sign on the cooler, is also a cartoon of a duck.

"That's because selectmen have talked about filling up the duck pond on Cohasset comon with water even though it leaks out," said the employee.

ZBA ponders permit July 6

The Zoning Board of Appeals will likely decide at its July 6 meeting whether or not to grant a comprehensive permit for the Crystal Woods project proposed for the Cohasset/Scituate line.

But though the board hasn't acted yet, it is moving in the direction of granting the permit with conditions, according to board chairman Myrna Putziger.

Putziger explained that the ZBA is in a difficult position.

If it denies the permit and the decision is appealed, the state will likely overturn the decision because of its concern for providing affordable housing, explained Putziger.

Twenty-two of the 60 units at Crystal Woods would be priced in the "affordable" range.

"We feel the town is better served by putting conditions on the permit, than denying it and having the state overturn it with no conditions,"she said.

Earlier this year, the local board granted its first comprehensive permit, with 34 conditions, to the Deck Point project off Route 3A.

A comprehensive permit allows developers to bypass some local zoning in exchange for providing affordable housing.

But the project did not receive Housing Opportunity Program funding from the state and has not moved forward.

However, Crystal Woods, proposed for 20 acres of land, did receive $1.9 million in HOP funding.

Jack Hurley of Crystal Land Development Corporation is proposing to build Crystal Woods which would have 10 affordable units in Cohasset and 12 in Scituate.

They would be sold for $75,000 to $95,000 to first-time homebuyers or to local housing authorities.

The market rate units would sell for $145,000 to $185,000, according to Hurley.

The ZBA deliberated on the application for about an hour and a half Thursday night, June 15, at town hall.

About a dozen residents attended the session, which followed three earlier public hearings on the application.

Board member Terry Farrell noted planning issues with Crystal Woods such as the septic system.

It will be located in Scituate but will serve Crystal Woods residents in both towns.

Board members suggested that cutting down the number of units at the development might reduce the risks that the system will fail.

They had a front row seat for China's history

"It looked like it was trickling off, and the students were getting ready to go home," Ned said.

The Tebbettses were shocked to hear the news of the massacre two days later, after they had left Beijing. They were completing a cruise of the Yangtze River and had arrived in Yichang.

"There was a telex waiting for us from Intrav (their travel agency) saying to prepare to leave the country," said Priscilla.

"We didn't really know what the political situation was," she said."We were worried about the airports being closed.

"But we never felt threatened by the Chinese people. I don't think our lives were ever in danger."

The Tebbettses and their group of about 40 people were driven some 45 miles from the boat to what looked like an abandoned airport.

Then there was a dispute over when their plane would take off.

"It was very scary," said Priscilla. "The plane couldn't fly in the dark because it didn't have the proper equipment."

Ned described the aircraft as an old, four-propeller Russian plane known as an Illyshin. There were 60 seats.

On the flight to Xian, one of the stewardesses became ill.

"I think maybe it was because she was upset," said Priscilla.

They bypassed their scheduled stop in Shanghai and went on to Hong Kong where they stayed for the remainder of their trip, which was cut short by several days.

"Now the government is taking the position the whole massacre didn't happen," said Ned. "They claim the people attacked the soldiers.

"The soldiers were only 18 or 19," he noted. "They did what they were told."

Aware of the student unrest, the Tebbettses had been undecided until the last minute on whether or not to make the trip to China.

"We had planned it about a year ago," said Ned. "And we paid a lot of money in advance."

"The day before we went, we talked to Intrav," said Priscilla. "I'm glad we went. I would have been sorry if we didn't.

Selectman Ned Tebbetts and his wife Priscilla admire the gifts they received during their recent tour of China. The artifacts included a silkscreened shirt worn by Mrs. Tebbetts, and a fan.

"We saw history in the making. It was incredible."

"The students had demonstrated five weeks before," said Ned."Troops had been sent in, but they refused to fire on the crowd.

"We had hoped there wouldn't be any violence."

The Tebbettses had chosen to visit China, a country about the size of the United States but with four times as many people, for a number of reasons.

"The country had been closed to visitors, so it was very intriguing," said Priscilla.

"The lifestyle is so different from our own. There is sort of an exotic quality to the old pagodas."

Priscilla also explained that she and her husband wanted to see the Yangtze River before the Three Gorges disappear.

A gigantic dam will be built across the river, forming a huge lake that will fill the canyons and gorges.

The first stop on the Tebbettses trip was Beijing where they visited such sites as the Temple of Heaven, the Summer Palace and the Great Wall of China.

Field repairs are good investment

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Wayne Sawchuk of Beechwood St. urged town meeting to approve $280,000 for the renovation and expansion of Milliken/Lillard Field and "feel good about living in Cohasset and getting a project done."

And he continues to feel that way about the proposal which will appear as Question 8 on the ballot next Wednesday, June 28.

"It (the $280,000) is a very small part of the overall budget," he said,"but residents will see something for the money being spent.

"It's a very good investment for the town. It makes the quality of life better."

Sawchuk explained that the field, behind and across from the high school, will be expanded from six to 10 acres.

The extra land is already under the control of the town, he said. It includes land donated by the Bancroft Estate, school facilities property and a small section of water department land.

"Now it is brier and underbrush with a rocky surface," said Sawchuk. "It is land that can't be used."

The $280,000 will go towards proper drainage and grading so that neighbors won't be affected, he said.

"Some people ask why we can't raise the money, or have volunteers do the work," noted Sawchuk."But it is not the kind of project where you can use volunteers.

"You need large equipment to do it safely and efficiently. It would be like having volunteers build the trash transfer station (at the landfill)."

He added that volunteers will be used later to work on scheduling for the facility.

The whole project would take about a year, Sawchuk said. Most of the work would be done during the summer and fall.

He said the rest of the time would be used to "get the grass in good enough condition so that the surface will be 'playable '".

The additional acres would allow the number of playing fields to be increased from two and a half to five, according to Sawchuk.

"There will be five football-sized fields," he said. "They can be used by the schools, recreation department and other town groups and organizations of all ages.

"Education is first, but I think music and sports are an important part of growing up in town," he said.

"The physical part is as important as the mental part."

The additional space will allow one of the fields to rest each year so that it can revitalize, said Sawchuk.

"You have to give it some rest to grow the grass," he said.

Sawchuk stressed that there is a need for the work at Milliken/Lillard Field which has been in use for about 40 years.

"We haven't had any expansion of any fields in the last 20 years," he said. "Yet, 635 people signed up for spring soccer and there weren't enough playing fields for all who signed up.

"It's tough talking about increasing the playing field when there isn't enough money to renovate the police/fire station.

"But people showed at town meeting that they realized what we wanted to do."

The proposal was favored at both sessions of town meeting.

Sawchuk said his committee has been working on the plans for about two years.

"This has been very, very well thought out," he said. "It may be unfortunate timing in that the town is in such a financial crisis.Taxpayers want to say that enough is enough. "

"But we still have to move forward. The facilities we acquire will be long lasting."

Cost to taxpayers will be about $10 per household per year for the 10 years of the borrowing note, according to Sawchuk.

"The committee estimates that it will add about 14-cents on the tax rate per 1,000 valuation for the next 10 years," he said.

Sawchuk, a lifelong Cohasset resident, noted that three years ago, a planning committee asked for a much larger figure, some $1 million, to improve Milliken/Lillard Field.

Looking at China's turmoil from the front row

million bicycles, they said.

Commercialism was mixed with history at the Great Wall, according to Priscilla.

"There was a big cluster of stores selling junk," she said.

They also enjoyed visiting cloisonne and jade carving factories, and were guests at a Peking Duck Dinner Banquet.

Most of the food was delicious, according to Priscilla.

"There was a lot of chicken and fish and vegetables," she said.

"And there were also duck feet," she said with a grimace. "I tried one."

Their next stop was Chongqing, where they toured the city and other sights, before embarking on a cruise down the Yangtze River.

During the cruise, they visited Wanxian City, Wushan and arrived in Yichang.

In Xian, they visited the terra-cotta warriors. The statues were discovered in 1974 by a group of peasants digging a well. It was the tomb of China's first emperor Qin Shi Huang (210 B.C.)

Archaeologists have since uncovered 7,500 life-sized figures of soldiers and horses, with real chariots and bronze weapons, created to protect the royal mausoleum.

The rest of the Tebbettses trip was spent in Hong Kong.

"Some people wanted to leave early, but we didn't have a choice," said Priscilla. "We had to abide by what arrangements were made. We were there and we had to make the best of the situation."

The Tebbettses, who returned to this country June 13, were left with a number of impressions about China, including its beauty and the friendliness of its people.

"We had first class accommodations everywhere," said Priscilla.

"The Shangri-La Hotel in Beijing was absolutely gorgeous," she said.

"All of the hotels were run by foreigners who had Chinese employees.

"The food was excellent. We ate out at a number of restaurants. Most times, we used chopsticks.

"No one in our group became ill until we got to a hotel that served Chinese and Western food. Most of us had the Western food."

Ned noted that U.S. television shows such as the evening news and the "Today Show" were shown on Chinese TV. But, there is a 12-hour time difference, he said.

"We saw the evening news at 7 a.m., and the 'Today Show' at 7 p.m.," Ned said.

The Tebbetts also enjoyed a visit to a park on Children's Day.

"Children are doted on in China," said Priscilla. "They are very colorfully dressed. Older adults wear old Mao suits."

Priscilla said that women sweep the parks, which have no grass.

"I couldn't figure out why they did it," she said. "It just stirred up the dust."

Ned said that China enforces a one child per family law.

"They test women every month to see if they are pregnant," he said. "They have to have an abortion if there is a second pregnancy."

In addition, said Ned, only one percent of students go to the universities.

"Then the government decides where they will work," he said.

Both also noted the pollution in China.

"They burn a lot of coal and there is a lot of dust," they said.

Language wasn't a problem because guides were always with the group.

And the weather was usually warm.

The Tebbetts returned home with mementos such as fans, lacquered items, and a watercolor of the Yangtze River, as well as a host of memories.

"The friendliness of the Chinese people really sticks out in my mind," said Priscilla.

"They were very curious about us, but very friendly.

"They are poor," she added. " By our standards, they live a very spartan life."

Enthusiastic travellers who visited the Soviet Union two years ago, the Tebbettses would like to tour China again.

"Maybe then they will have some political change for the better," said Ned.

Repairs to Milliken Field

"I spoke out against it, and they appointed me to this committee," he said.

"This is a very important project . Many people have worked a long time on it.

"It's a priority in the community to continue to upgrade and improve on what we have.

"There is a pride people get in maintaining their own property, protecting their interest and getting value out of it.

"It would be a good, long-term utilization of the property.We will all be getting the most for our money.

"It will encourage a feeling of pride for the community."

Sawchuk called the proposal a community project.

"The townspeople will be proud of the work," he said. "They will feel good when they participate in events, and when they watch their children use the fields."

□ Sandy King recently joined Hallmark 100 Properties, one of the leading Real Estate firms on the South Shore. King is a million dollar agent.

Sandy is a Summa Cum Laude graduate of the University of Massachusetts Boston where she earned a B.S. in Business Administration. As the result of her academic performance, Sandy was nominated by members of her faculty for the Kennedy Award, the highest honor bestowed at graduation. In addition, she was chosen by members of the Accounting and Finance Department to receive the annual Concentration Award. She is also a graduate of Indiana University where she earned a B.S. in Education and graduated with distinction as an elected member of the Pi Lambda Theta National Honor Society. Currently, Sandy is participating in the highly selective M.B.A. program at Babson College. Her efforts at Babson will focus in finance and entrepreneurial studies.

Locally, Sandy is a member of the Cohasset Community Center and a South Shore fitness enthusiast. She is also a member of Save the Harbor/Save the Bay and Masspirg.

□ This weekend is the one that so many wait for each year, the South Shore Arts Festival. It will be held from June 23rd to the 25th, and there will be a special honor, the festival will honor Margaret Marshall Dillion, a fine lady who passed away last year. She was instrumental in the Art Center's planning and she saw her dreams come true! Here's to a wonderful festival in memory of a grand person.

□ Also opening this week is the Music Circus, hope you got your tickets early as the season promises to be another super one!.

□ The Osgood Playpark is complete, and is "awesome". Kids from 6 to 60 are admiring it, it certainly looks like a lot of fun. Drivers beware, there are tons of kids on bikes and they don't always look where they are going. So drive with caution and safety!

□ Hats off to Elizabeth Durant, Phyllis and Doug Peck, June and Jack Hubbard, Sharon Becker and Michael Sullivan who all chipped in to fill many trash bags full of litter from the landfill recently. Remember to secure your trash bags so that their hard work won't have been in vain, we would all appreciate it!!

This is what it would look like if the kindergarten students took over the fire department — pretty impressive! The students who toured the station last week included: (top, l to r) Margaret Olney, Matthew Woodworth, Susan Dane, Emily Coyne, Evan Byrnes, Lane Forrer, Patrick Carbone, Sandy Flynn, Abbie Butman, Steven Coyne and Daniel Williams.

□ Congratulations go to Jeffrey and Barbara Pinkus, who had a baby girl on May 21st in South Shore Hospital. What a grand time of year to have a little one!!

□ There is some sad news to report from the Logan family. As most of you know, Martha Logan lives in New York and is a senior vice president of McKinley Aslopp and does leveraged buyouts. Martha was to be married on August 12th of this year to Edward Schuldner, who died of an aneurism recently. Knowing how badly those of you who know Martha must feel for her here is her address: 341 East 51st Street, IR, NY, NY 10022. Drop her a line, it would be nice to hear from those on the "home front".

School officials press for higher override . . .

be taken out of the school budget. That, she said, will require the elimination of 10 to 13 staff positions, reductions in athletics, art, business education, home economics, industrial arts, foreign languages and the enrichment programs; reduction of supplies, teacher aides, secretaries, custodians and coaches; and a significant reduction in the school bus service.

If the $303,800 override question succeeds, there will probably be only one teaching position eliminated, she said. "The cuts that we will have to make will not impact the students as greatly as a $400,000 reduction," she said.

If the $203,800 override passes and not the higher alternative, the school committee will be forced to cut their $5 million budget by $250,000.

Bliss is not happy with the June 28 ballot, and sensed that some voters will be confused by the two general budget override options. "I think it's very unfortunate," she said. "The two alternative override questions have been tried in two communities and both failed. I don't think the $203,800 override option is representative of the will of town meeting. A significant majority of the almost 1,000 voters at that (May 31) meeting voted to approve another $100,000 for the override."

"After the override the school committee made a list of all the items which would be cut by a $400,000 budget reduction. We felt it would be quite harmful to the school system. We also heard from a number of people in the community that perhaps some amount of override would be acceptable. So we made our plea to the advisory committee," she recalled.

The school committee devised a list of "more acceptable" budget cuts totalling $160,000. They explained the school committee needed time to formulate a more cost effective future plan for the school system, although they could forecast no great savings for the department since student enrollment is on a steady incline.

"At this point, we simply want to get the most for the money we do have," Bliss noted.'

The committee members left the advisory committee's meeting that night, hopeful that they would support a minimum $200,000 override for the schools. "We were somewhat disappointed when the advisory committee came up with an override that would amount to a $250,000 budget cut for the schools," she said.

The members then decided to ask town meeting on May 31 to support a higher override amount for the schools. "This is not an extra amount to be added to our budget. The $303,826 override simply means we will have to cut our budget by $150,000 rather than $250,000, or $400,000," she said.

With the $250,000 budget cut, the school committee would be forced to make reductions in transportation, athletics, supplies, and some teaching positions. If the alternative override amount of $303,800 succeeds, maybe one or two teachers will be cut from the staff, along with less severe cutbacks in transportation, athletics, and supplies.

Bliss said the committee is urging voters to approve both overrides, so that one alternative will win in the June 28 election.

"The school committee is doing its best to run our schools on a tight budget. We're doing our best to run a cost effective department. There is no fat in our budget, and unfortunately, we are being forced to make cuts that will have a direct negative impact on our students."

Advisors' work completed, they stand with original votes department budget will be slashed by nine percent.

According to advisory committee member Ray Kasperowicz, the advisory committee's assignment is complete. "We've never even discussed the $303,800 option," he said. "We presented a recommendation to town meeting for a $203,800 override, and that's it - that's our recommendation. It's not our job to start presenting alternatives to what we recommended."

And as far as the capital outlay and debt exclusion overrides are concerned, the advisory committee's previous opinions still stand, Kasperowicz said. The three debt exclusions questions, $50,000 for the design of a town cemetery, $280,000 for renovations to the athletic fields, and $26,000 for the repair of the town hall roof, were not recommended by the advisory committee after they went down to defeat in the May 6 special override election.

"They were all shot down by the committee for the same reason," Kasperowicz said. "Although some of us had strong feelings about these articles, particularly the renovations of Milliken Field, they were voted down by the advisory committee. Right now, with the budget problems we're having, we felt the capital outlay requests and the debt exclusions questions have to take a back seat to the town's operating budget."

If the committee members were asked to take a second vote on the $203,800 or the $303,800 general budget overrides, Kasperowicz said he would once again favor the lower alternative. "That's what we recommended prior to town meeting, and that's what I recommend today," he said.

The advisory committee still believes the three-year police contract should not have been approved by town meeting. Just prior to the May 31 meeting, the committee voted not to recommended the contract which calls for a six percent increase for the department over three years, retroactive to last July 1.

The committee felt the third year of the contract should not be approved, saying it was beyond the town's ability to pay it within the confines of Proposition 2 1/2.

But now that town meeting has approved the contract, it will appear as a ballot question. The appropriation must be approved, or the $64,348 will be taken elsewhere from the town's operating budget.

Selectmen say town wants options

would be comfortable with the lower amount agreed to by the advisory committee. They don't feel so comfortable with the higher amount proposed on the floor of town meeting." she said. "That's the feedback I've received since this whole thing began."

The selectman has familiarized herself with the Proposition 2 1/2 legislation, which states "if two or more (ballot) questions seeking an override for the same purpose are approved, the question specifying the greater amount will be the one which applies."

Question one on the ballot requests a general override for $303,800 for the town's operating budget. The second question requests $203,800 for the same purpose. Conceivably, both questions could win a majority of votes, in which case the higher amount, $303,826, will take precedent.

"I feel it is the duty of the board (of selectmen) to propose both options," Gjesteby said. "This is a small town and I think there is a feeling that people will support the lower override amount, and there are some who want the larger override for the schools. So now they can choose. "

If both options fail, however, voters will have to return to town meeting to rescind their approval of the operating budget.

Some people might argue that Gjesteby proposed the alternative override option because her husband, Arne, is a member of the advisory committee which first proposed that amount. She laughed at such a suggestion. "It has absolutely nothing to do with Arne," she said, noting that they tend to disagree on many local issues. "I did it simply because of the feedback I received. I got a lot of calls. Many people felt angry because there was no specificity to that larger override amount proposed by the school committee.

"Proposition 2 1/2 gives us choices. That's part of the law passed by the state," she added.

The selectman said she is unsure how the vote will go next Wednesday. "There still seems to be a split in the town. I really have no idea what's going to happen," she said.

"But as far as selectmen are concerned, we tried to be fair about this ballot. There's a lot of concern out there, and we were trying to react to their concerns."

Maintain our support

Next week, Cohasset voters will hopefully face the last decision they must make in 1989 about an override of Proposition 2 1/2.

Wednesday, June 28 is the scheduled special election in which voters will make decisions regarding eight override options. These questions became necessary when the May 31 town meeting refused to reconsider several articles although the appropriations had been defeated at the May 6 election. By town meeting's inaction, voters will now have to decide once again whether the money will be appropriated for the expenses approved by this year's two town meetings.

If all this has you confused, be assured you are not alone. And perhaps Wednesday's ballot may be the most confusing of all.

Voters will find two override options for the town's general operating budget.

The first general budget override option will restore $303,826 to the town's operating budget. This proposal was made from the floor of the May 31 town meeting and was overwhelmingly adopted by voters at that time. The higher override amount will result in a $150,000 cut from the school budget - less harsh than the $400,000 cut which will be required if the override fails at the ballot.

The second option on next week's ballot will restore $203,826 to the budget, an amount that required much effort to pare it down from the original override figure of $844,000.

That option represents a nine percent decrease in many town department budgets, and a $250,000 reduction in the $5 million school budget.

Among the other questions on the June 28 ballot is a debt exclusion question for the design of a town cemetery. The Milliken Field renovations will reappear on the June 28 ballot as another debt exclusion question. Voters will also be facing a request to repair the roof on the original section of town hall, and a debt exclusion override to purchase a defribrillator for the fire department ambulance.

It was explained at the May 31 town meeting that approval of a $203,826 general override will add 36 cents to the tax rate. The second option of the $303,826 override will add about 15 cents more to the rate.

Many people in town still feel that enough is enough, and that we have to say no now to more taxes and more overrides.

But we stated in the past and we will continue to argue, this is surely not the end of the overrides. And this town would be shortsighted to say enough to enough, when clearly our taxes are simply not enough.

Without the override, our tax money is not adequate to cover the cost of operating this town or the school department in the manner to which we are accustomed. And we must state for the record, we prefer the higher general override option, so that school department reductions will not be as severe. We don't want to see our teaching staff slashed, and we don't want to see textbook purchases postponed.

No one wants higher taxes. Come to think of it, no one really wants any taxes. But the reality is , we must pay taxes. And like the weather in these parts, nothing stays the same for long. Taxes must rise as sure as the rain falls.

Most of us are proud of our small school system. Our sons and daughters prospered in these schools. They have graduated, gone on to prestigious colleges and succeeded in their careers. Now, we must return the favor. Good school systems do not exist and surely do not flourish if the financial support corrodes. We must maintain that support. This does not mean we cannot question or object to certain procedures or plans being implemented in the schools. That is our right as the caretakers of this system, to question procedures and to receive answers to our inquiries.

But we must not confuse priorities right now. Our first priority as taxpayers is to agree to continue the necessary financial support of our schools and our town departments. We must then work with town officials to find new methods of sharing scare financial resources. That is a secondary priority which cannot be addressed until our override obligations are complete.

Once again, it is time to swallow that bitter pill called a tax hike. But we must realize the alternative - harmful cuts in all town budgets - will be a more drastic and undesirable alternative.

Schools need support for the future

Letters

To the Editor:

As members of the Cohasset School Committee, we would like to address the two major criticisms of the School Committee which have been expressed by some townspeople during recent weeks: first, the Committee's decision to seek an amendment on the floor of Town Meeting reducing by $100,000 the budget cuts recommended by the Advisory Committee; and second, the Committee's reluctance to cut an administrative position.

Why did the Committee request an amendment to the budget recommended by the Advisory Committee?

By way of background, the School Committee released, at its public meeting of May 22, 1989, a list of budget reductions totaling $400,000, as requested by the Advisory Committee. However, the School Committee stated very clearly its opposition to these cuts and its intention to seek a maximum reduction of $158,000 either from the Advisory Committee, or on the floor of Town Meeting if necessary. The committee then presented to the Advisory Committee both its $400,000 list and its recommendation for a maximum cut of $158,000 at a public meeting on May 23. The Advisory Committee, in turn, recommended a $250,000 reduction in the School Department budget. Finally, the School Committee recommended a $150,000 budget reduction on the floor of Town Meeting, which was adopted.

Clearly, the School Committee's intention was to reduce its budget cutting by $100,000, not to raise its budget by $100,000 as some have suggested. And the reason is very simple: the $100,000 will be used to fund teacher jobs, as well as supplies and the athletic budget. The $100,000 will mean the possible reduction of 1-2 teaching positions, rather than the 5-7 teacher cuts that would be necessitated by a $250,000 budget reduction. In our judgment, the School committee's request that its budget be reduced by $150,000 rather than by $250,000 in order to save teaching jobs is entirely defensible.

Why do we believe that the School Committee should not eliminate administrative positions at this time?

First, the School Committee released the findings of the Whalen Report at its public meeting of June 8, 1989. After listing five major areas of concern in the School Department — including the need for a financial master plan, a curriculum master plan, the setting of priorities and objectives and the improvement of organizational communication — the Report recommends four alternative structures, all of which would increase the number of administrators.

Second, townspeople are seeking more accountability, a greater return for the tax dollar. But the School Department has already reduced its central administration by 50% and its overall administrative staff by 25% since 1981. Any further cuts will erode the School Committee's ability to implement management goals and objectives which will ensure the accountability the Town seeks.

Third, current trends in education are toward school-based management, with current research indicating tht the building principal is a crucial factor in successful schools.

Finally, a comparison of comparable school systems shows the following central administrative structures: Bedford - 4 positions, 1800 students: Westwood - 5 positions, 1800 students; Weston - 7 positions, 1600 students. Cohasset — which must accomplish the same tasks of finance, personnel, curriculum, special education and transportation as these other communities — has only 2 central office positions.

The taxpayers of Cohasset want administrators of the highest quality, professionals who are competent and dedicated to providing quality service to the town. And the School Committee should be held accountable by the voters for its efforts to provide a framework of accountability that ensures efficient use of resources.

In our judgment, however, this is not the time to cut an administrative position. The administrative structure can be reorganized to save tax dollars, but such a reorganization must not impede the School Committee's ability to meet the long-term needs of the school system. To borrow a phrase from the world of sports, we clearly have no depth, no bench. If we are to develop long range financial and curriculum plans, improve the evaluation process and provide evidence of the efficient use of resources, then we simply cannot cut our already thinly stretched administrative organization.

We urge our fellow townspeople to carefully weight these two issues and then to support the School Department with a positive vote on Question 1 on the June 28 ballot. However, to insure the passage of at least a minimum override, we urge a positive vote on both Questions 1 and 2.

The School committee has embarked on a 5-year long-range plan, and we need your support for planned, rational change in the years to come.

Sincerely,
Barbara Bliss, Chairman

Playground workers are thanked

To the Editor:

As the dust settles and the aches of muscles subside, I would like to pay public tribute to the hundreds of people who made the Osgood Playpark a reality.

We were warned by our designers, Tom Bowler and Tony Salerno of Custom Playgrounds Inc., that most projects have a difficult time enlisting the volunteer help necessary to complete construction — 110 people in our case. Cohasset was a stellar example of what community spirit is all about! There were 166 people working on Sat. June 10 and 163 on Sun. June 11 plus food workers & childcare workers. It was indeed a moving experience to witness this kind of cooperation, enthusiasm and expertise. New friendships were made, great admiration for the tradespeople developed and a bond was made which will be difficult to duplicate, let alone break. Congratulations to all who took part in the experience.

Congratulations also to a very hard working and dedicated committee whose work for months behind the scenes really paid off. Where would we be without the enthusiasm of the fundraising co-chairs Kevin Lewis and Rhonda Myers and their dynamic committee — Peggy Lewis, Paul Buick, Fraser Cameron, Marianne McLaughlin, Meredith Gledhill, Cheryl and Dick Bugley, John and Susan Carr along with the children of the Osgood School who alone raised $6500 for their playground. How fortunate we were to have Selma Ingber, Joanne Lehr, Irene Volpe, Diana Kinch and Jennifer Plipenbrink organize such interesting crafts and activities to provide a quality childcare experience while parents were busy at the build site. Food and beverages were really something to look forward to and so enthusiastically coordinated by Moira Stansell. Many thanks to Jane Hamilton and Betsy and Ed Connolly for patiently handling the prewashing of some 100 tires of varying sizes. The hundreds of volunteer sheets were systematically and calmly handled by Amy Folden who did a great job of arm twisting at every opportunity. The organization of hundreds of tools, computerizing of lists and typing of letters too numerous to mention came about because of the dedication of Gordon Whitely who also managed to keep the family together during the hectic times this year. Ralph Kidder, our treasurer, really kept a tight hold on our purse strings and has our admiration and recommendation for his next audition for "A Christmas Carol." Andy Krueger, our materials coordinator, treated each nail as his very own and thanks to his conscientiousness we didn't lose anything. Many hours of working in his basement to design the lighthouse, build the crow's nest and collect flag materials were given by Phil Lehr. Without his terrific support, good advice and general expertise this project would not have the aesthetic details which make it so special. We are also deeply greatful to Bob Protulis for searching out materials, for running the heavy equipment on site and for sharing his delightful sense of humor with all. We owe so much to Wayne Sawchuck for donating so much of himself, his company's manpower and his equipment to this project. Not only did Rhonda Myers co-chair fundraising, she also co-chaired publicity and filled in gaps wherever and whenever she was needed. She is truly a human dynamo whose great energy and optimism gave everyone strength. And finally, to Linda Keller, whose grace and serenity helped maintain a sense of calm throughout this project and who was willing to do anything to help see this project through — my very sincere gratitude.

Despite the darker side which this world often shows us, when I view the Osgood Playpark I will always see goodness, kindness and hope. Hats off to Cohasset!

Thanks for scholarship

To the Editor:

I wish to express my deep gratitude for receiving my Cohasset Mariner award. I feel honored and privileged to be the recipient of such an award; rest assured the money will not go to waste.

Though I do not fully intend to eventually become a journalist, while attending Trinity College I do hope to be a member of their newspaper staff. Besides, as a Political Science major, I will rarely be far from a newspaper anyway.

With heartfelt thanks.

Community needs to continue its support

To The editor:

Our school libraries and media programs need public support now! Over the years, the townspeople of Cohasset have been enthusiastic and generous in devoting volunteer time to our school libraries. Parents and others have put a high priority on the fight to preserve the love of books and reading and writing in a world that is increasingly bombarding our children with commercial television.

I urge you to continue the battle, now! Vote yes on question one and yes on question two to prevent the necessity of the "elimination of the high school librarian" that an override failure would cause.

No librarian in the high school would mean an end to the library as we have come to know it in the building years by Joan Gutturna and then Liz Glasfeld, and the "coming of age" under Susan McFadd. Besides the library being frequently physically closed, even when open, teachers and students used to professional help, would be "on their own." Osgood's library, unsupervised, would be adrift. Because the reduced library program would be given to the A.V. Director, A.V. services to the elementary schools would stop and training in video production would be greatly reduced — work that has taught students and teachers the creative use of a powerful communications tool.

Please help one more time to support these essential programs for our children in reading, research, and communications!

Vote yes on questions one and two.

Conservatory summer program

A new summer program at the South Shore Conservatory in Hingham will give students the opportunity to learn more about their musical instruments and to handle certain repair problems themselves.

It will be an overview on brass, woodwind, and percussion instrument care and maintenance. The class will begin Wednesday, June 28 from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. and continue for six weeks.

Paul Weller, head of the music department in Norwell Junior High School, is also a technician and owner of Weller's Instrument Service in Marshfield. He will instruct the program.

Classes will deal with general care and maintenance, precautions, inspections, repair equipment, standard repairs, and how to handle the most frequent problems. The Conservatory is taking registrations for this and other summer programs.

For information call 749-7565.

Summer basketball camp

The South Shore Basketball camp will begin its eighth season June 26 through June 30 at Scituate High School.

Paul Svensen of Scituate High and John LeVangie of Boston College High are the camps' directors. The camp is open to boys in grades 5 to 9.

"During the past seven years, we have taken what we feel are the best things from all the camps we have worked at and incorporated them into the South Shore Basketball Camp," Svensen said.

The camp is limited to 100 campers and runs from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. For more information, call 545-0970 or 545-0384.

Swim center open for season

The Cohasset Swim Center opened Saturday, June 17 with a schedule of programs under director Abbie White and her staff.

Membership fees are as follows: family $25; adult single $75; jr. single $50; sr. citizens, $45.

Rabies clinic scheduled for dogs

The Standish Humane Society will be conducting a rabies clinic for dogs Saturday, June 24 from 9 to 11 a.m. behind the Scituate Town Hall on Route 3A. The town garage, also behind the Town Hall will be used in case of rain.

Cohasset residents are welcome to bring their dogs to the clinic.

Kenneth Roberts of the Animal Clinic on Wheels of Pembroke is the veterinarian. Shots will be $5 each. Any pup three months or older may be vaccinated. Proof of current rabies inoculation is necessary to license a dog in any town in the state.

For more information on the rabies clinic or Standish Humane Society please call 545-2808.

Politics discussed on cable TV

State Representative and Democratic candidate for Governor, John H. Hood (D-Canton) will be the guest on Wigmore Pierson's "Pierson to Person" cable television show, live, Thursday, June 22 from 8 to 9 p.m.

Pierson's second guest on the same program will be William J. Spence who is the president of Massachusetts Bay Lines — the commuter boat between Hingham and Boston. Spence is a former State Representative from Hingham.

Dramatic choral concert

The 30-voice "New Sound Choir" from the United Methodist Church in Haddonfield, N.J., will present a dramatic choral concert at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Avenue, Sunday, June 25 at 7:30 p.m.

The concert will include a wide variety of musical styles, from classical to contemporary Christian. Included as a special highlight will be an abridged version of the popular Broadway Musical, "Joseph and The Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat", which will be staged in costume. In addition to the choir, there will be vocal solos and duets as well as solo piano selections.

The choir is comprised of 30 junior and senior high students who have been preparing throughout the past year for this performance. This season's tour to New England will include concerts in Newport, Cape Cod, Andover, Hartford, and Port Jervis.

Included on the program will be, "All Things Bright and Beautiful", "O Magnify The Lord", "How Excellent Is Thy Name", "Gloria", "Simple Gifts", "More Than A Song", "Go Ye Into All The World", and "He Lives Today". Accompaniment will be on piano and organ as well as a state-of-the-art synthesizer. Other instruments include flute, percussion and trumpet.

The group is directed by John L. Wilson, who is the full-time Director of Music at the Haddonfield United Methodist Church.

The concert is open to the public and there is no admission charge, but a free-will offering will be taken to help defray expenses.

For further information call 383-1083.

Library needs financial support

The Friends of the Cohasset Library voted this week to conduct a town-wide appeal for support of its efforts on behalf of the town public library, the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

President Anne Costello and membership chair Frederick Garrison recommended the campaign, and the Executive Board unanimously voted to do it. This will be the first time in many yers that the Friends have sent an appeal to every household in Cohasset. In recent years, the membership drive has consisted of asking former members to renew.

The Friends recently expended most of their treasury to purchase services and furnishings requested by the Library Trustees. This includes: $2100 to furnish family passes to the Science Museum; the Aquarium; the Childrens Museum; the Museum of Fine Arts; and Plimoth Plantation. Also: $250 for the children's summer reading incentive program and field trip to the Museum of Fine Arts. Also: $2500 to replace and repair library furniture.

The Friends note in their letter of appeal for contributions that "The Friends of the Cohasset Library, a nonprofit organization, was established in 1968 to encourage awareness and support of the Library," and that the Friends, through 2,500 hours of volunteer help in the library, and through expenditures of about $3,500 a year, "achieve library services beyond what tax dollars provide."

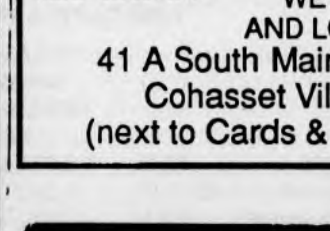
Next year's library budget from the town has been reduced due to the constraint on taxes. The book budget will be reduced. The Friends invite all those for whom the Cohasset is an important and valuable service to become a FRIEND. Contributions are tax-deductible.

Summer reading porgram

This year's summer reading program at the Paul Pratt Library will focus on an "Asian Adventure."

With folktales and stories of China, India, Japan, and their neighboring countries, participants will be exploring the continent and culture of Asia. The program will end in late August with a field trip to the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, and a special guided tour of the Asiatic collection: colossal Buddha statues, beautiful kimonoes, samurai armor and ceremonial swords, fantastic deities in stone, screens and scrolls that tell stories. A celebration will conclude with refreshments in the outdoor courtyard of the museum.

The summer reading club is open to all children who have completed grades 1-6. Reading cards for recording the titles read on each person's own reading level may be picked up at the library. Participants in grades 1-3 who read 20 books will be awarded a paperback book of their choice from the Friends of the Library. Participants in grades 4-5 will read 15 books for their paperback gift, and those in grade 7 and up need to read 10 books.



A new feature this year will be a program for "Almost Readers," those younger children who enjoy being read to or are just beginning to read themselves with help. These children will receive stickers for each book read, and the library will chart their progress.

Dates of the summer reading program are June 19-Aug. 25. There is no registration for this program, except for the field trip to the MFA.

Assistant superintendent Richard Streeter displays his pen and ink drawings — something he'll have a lot more time to do when he retires this month. (Staff photo/Dave Sullivan)

Streeter is ready for a change

Streeter was also principal at Northfield High School for two years.

He still maintains friendships from those days, and is regularly invited back for class reunions.

Streeter was offered a job in Cohasset when his Vermont school superintendent, Nelson Megna, transferred to this town in 1970.

"He asked if I was interested in the high school principal position," said Streeter.

"I really hadn't had the desire to leave Vermont. I knew I could make more money in Massachusetts. But that wasn't a big issue."

Streeter said to his wife, "You wouldn't be interested in moving, would you?"

"Try me," she replied.

"We were both ready for a change."

He and his family moved to a house on Bancroft Rd., across the athletic field from the high school.

"I could walk to school," said Streeter."But I usually didn't."

He didn't find Cohasset too different from his home town in Vermont.

"They are both kind of small towns," he said. "But this is an affluent community, and I had to get used to that."

His daughter, Debbie, was a seventh grader when the family moved to Cohasset.

"She kind of enjoyed me being principal of the high school," he said.

But for his daughter, Nancy, the transition was more difficult.

"She was a senior and she had wanted to graduate with her friends in Vermont," he said.

As high school principal, Streeter dealt with such things as scheduling and budgeting. He also worked with the PSO.

"As you keep going up, you see the student population as a group," he noted.

"You don't get to have relationships with the students as you do when you are teaching. But you get to know all the teachers."

Among the staff at the high school was a guidance counselor by the name of Stephen Hart.

Hart is now Cohasset school superintendent.

As principal, Streeter enjoyed the opportunity to change things, to implement new programs.

"Or at least to suggest them to the school committee," he said.

He also enjoyed attending conferences and meeting principals from schools in other communities.

"You got to pick their brains, and to know about other school systems," he said.

"We were always comparing notes. I enjoyed the interchange."

Streeter attended many school functions.

"It wasn't a chore for me," he said. "I enjoyed watching the kids in action.

"It's always a pleasure seeing kids out of the classroom atmosphere."

His career hit a snag in 1973 when then school superintendent James Gray did not recommend him for rehiring.

"I took the case to arbitration," said Streeter. "I wasn't given adequate information about what the superintendent expected."

After 18 months, it was ruled that Streeter's contract had been violated, and he was reinstated in 1975.

"That was a little bit traumatic," said Streeter about that period. "I could have moved, but I didn't want to.

"I tried (working in) real estate, but the market was worse than it is now."

Streeter also taught at Newbury Junior College and Fisher Junior College.

"It wasn't much different dealing with college kids than high school kids," he said.

In addition, he studied for a certificate of graduate study at Northeastern University.

THE CYCLE IN DISHWASHERS
A dishwasher seems more like a necessity today than a luxury. Yet, industry studies show that as recently as 20 years ago only 20 percent of all households had dishwashers. Today, dishwashers can be found in approximately half of all homes. The increase in popularity of this kitchen appliance may be directly linked to the upsurge of two-earner families. According to one survey, mothers in this setting say that the dishwasher saves them four hours of work each week. Once a person has experienced this kind of time savings, she is reluctant to let it go. That is the reason given for the dishwasher's continued hold on retirees and single-earners.
What may be a luxury to one person is a necessity to another. Do what is right for you in your family situation. A dishwasher "saves" in so many areas and is a better washer besides. The average life of a dishwasher is 11 years, so if yours is older, you're doing well. Leftover food on your dishes and stains on your silverware are signs that your washer is not doing its job and wasting energy. If this is the case, check out the facts at KITCHEN DESIGN ASSSOCIATES. We handle all areas of a kitchen remodeling. See us at 962 Washington St. Rt. 53, Hanover, Tel. 826-4121.
HINT: It takes far less water to wash dishes in a dishwasher than it does by hand.

Library summer program

The Paul Pratt Library announces the following summer programs:

For children ages 3 1/2 to 5, there will be a summer story hour on Friday mornings at 10 a .m., from July 7 through August 11. This consists of 45 minutes of stories, songs, fingerplays, and projects. No registration required.

A new story program will also be held for toddlers, ages 18 months to 3 years. This is a program for children accompanied by a parent. It will be held on Thursday mornings at 10 a.m., July 6 through August 10. No registration required.

Older children of elementary school age are invited to participate in the summer reading program, "An Asian Adventure." Ask the librarians for details.

Students completing grade 6 are invited to join the children's librarians and Mrs. Murphy, Deer Hill School librarian, for "Rad Reads," a reading discussion group to meet at the library on Monday or Tuesday evenings throughout the summer. Ask for details at the library.

In addition to these regularly scheduled activities, the Library is pleased to offer a series of three delightful family programs by guest storyteller Karen Wesoloski. "Bedtime Stories" will be on Tuesday evenings, July 11, July 25, and August 8, beginning at 7 p.m.

Also, take a moment to check out the on-going display of Reading Rainbow books in the Children's Room and the new Parenting shelf. Cohasset residents are reminded that they may borrow a free family pass to the Children's Museum, the Museum of Science, the New England Aquarium, the Museum of Fine Arts, and Plimoth Plantation. These library memberships are a gift of the Friends of the Cohasset Library.

Call the library, 383-1348.

Summer recreation

The recreation playground program begins Wednesday, July 5, at 9 a.m. at the Osgood School. Late registrations will be accepted by calling the recreation office.

YOUTH TENNIS CLASSES

Youth tennis for the Monday and Wednesday group will begin Wednesday, July 5, and Thursday, July 6, for the Tuesday and Thursday group. If the class conflicts with other activities, see either Derek or Frank at the Milliken Field tennis courts, next to the C.H.S. football field, at the top of Norfolk Road.

BAND CONCERTS

The first concert of the season will be held Sunday, June 25, at 3 p.m. at the Town Common. The 30 piece South Shore Concert Band will perform under the direction of Richard Whitmarsh.

The public is invited to attend this free concert, sponsored by the South Shore Playhouse Associates.

Also contributing to the concert was the Mass. Art's Lottery Council.

MUSIC CIRCUS REGISTRATIONS

The first Music Circus registration will be held Thursday, June 29, from 9 a.m. to noon and again Thursday from 6 to 7:30 p.m.

This registration is for the "Snow White" show date: Thursday, July 13.

All tickets are $3.75, and registrations will be held at the recreation office for the next five Thursday's two weeks ahead of the show date. Checks for payment must be made payable to: "Town of Cohasset." Be certain you have both the summer flier and the playground special event flier because there is essential information for registration. If you need the information see Ted at the playground or stop by the office at town hall.

Playground program staff members volunteered a great deal of time and effort to plan special activities and researching projects for the summer program. Each should be thanked for their efforts.

Registrations for all special activities, projects, events, and field trips is necessary and, with few exceptions, it will be done at the playground. Timely registration is essential as financial commitments must be made by specified dates prior to the actual program.

Many activities will be limited in number.

Legislators must provide more leadership

To the editor:

I have just finished reading the excellent editorial "Needing a Miracle" in the June 15, 1989 Cohasset Mariner.

It is ironic that just last week the same newspaper featured a 54 year old Marshfield resident, Corey Kent, in a picture with Taffy Nothnagle of Cohasset, participating in the "Handicap Awareness Program" at the Deer Hill School in Cohasset.

Corey Kent attended a Legislative Breakfast in Braintree on April 27th and I witnessed the tearful testimony of this man, who is mentally retarded, and who lived for almost three decades in a state institution. Corey Kent has no family, and for the most part is living on his own — in a Marshfield Community Residence — paying taxes as an employee of the South Shore Industries. My heart ached for Corey Kent, who while wrenching his hands, pleaded his case to the legislators and legislative aides in attendance, to keep his home and job intact.

Letters

While sympathetic and generally supportive to the needs of the mentally retarded population in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, our area legislators fail to bring the message back to leadership on Beacon Hill — that we are in a crisis situation! 10 percent to 15 percent of the 271 adults living in group homes on the South Shore are at risk of losing their beds. As many as 15 percent of the community-based job training and day programs in the state will close next year unless they receive more state money. We are depriving mentally retarded adults of their right to work and live in the community.

It is unconscionable for us to allow the "Massachusetts Miracle" to fade into a mirage and watch these law-abiding, productive mentally retarded adults (in the wake of the FY 1990 budget) perhaps be numbered among the homeless.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Maria A. Plante,
Vice President and Legislative Chairman

Cast absentee ballots

To the Editor:

The election to override Proposition 2 1/2 is scheduled for Wednesday, June 28, 1989, from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. This a prime vacation week. All registered voters who are unable to cast their ballots on election day should obtain an absentee ballot at the town clerk's office, Town Hall, before leaving on their trip. All registered voters that work outside of Cohasset and return to town after the polls close should also obtain an absentee ballot.

Absentee ballots can be obtained at the town clerk's office, Town Hall until 12 p.m. Tuesday, June 27, 1989.

Please try to plan ahead.

Committee to vote on administrators

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

An independent study of the school's central office administration has concluded there is a need for more personnel. But while the school committee will vote next week on the recommendations, it is doubtful whether more people will be added to the staff.

"We have to be realistic about what we can do," Supt. Stephen Hart stated. "While we want to address the issues raised in this study, we have to look at the ways it can be made feasible given the reality of our financial condition.

The school committee is expected to vote on the recommendation at its June 26 meeting.

The study, which was paid through a state incentive aid grant to the schools, was conducted this spring by former Brockton and Weston superintendent, Thomas Whalen. He concluded his study of the central office administration by noting that more administrators should be added to the staff. He suggested four alternative staffing arrangements for the office which now includes two administrators - the superintendent and the assistant superintendent.

In his highest-rated alternative, Whalen suggested that a director of K-12 curriculum be added, along with a director of financial services and a director of special education. The second option would include an assistant superintendent for curriculum, and an assistant superintendent for special education and financial services; the third option would include an assistant superintendent for curriculum and special education, and a director of financial services; and the fourth option would include an assistant superintendent for curriculum and financial services and a director of special education.

Supt. Hart explained that despite the size of a school system, there are responsibilities and programs that must be addressed. The additional recommended personnel would leave more time for the superintendent to develop strategic plans and priorities with the school committees and to work closely with school administrators.

"Right now, I am also the administrator of the special education program in Cohasset. He (Whalen) said we are the only school system he knows of that operates that way. He recommends that the functions be separate," Supt. Hart said.

The director of financial services would be responsible for establishing long range financial planning for the schools, while taking charge of the transportation budget and other functions such as cafeteria, maintenance and custodial services. The financial director would also be responsible for preparing and presenting a budget to the school committee.

The director of special education, according to Whalen, would supervise the operation of the state and federally-mandated programs and its ever-changing regulations. The director would be responsible for overseeing student placement and providing resources to teachers while monitoring student progress and evaluating special needs staff and budgets.

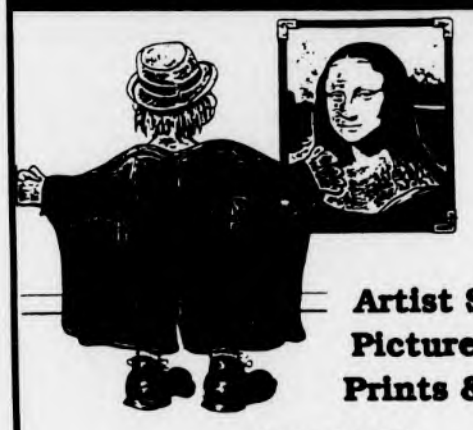
The curriculum director would be responsible for planning, designing, developing and assessing the K-12 curriculum, while serving as a leader of a curriculum council, and supervising the testing programs within the schools.

"Obviously, the school committee will look at some alternative structure to accomplish these tasks," the superintendent said. "I will probably make some recommendation to the committee about the reorganization of the central office administration in light of the study's recommendation and our own fiscal contraints."

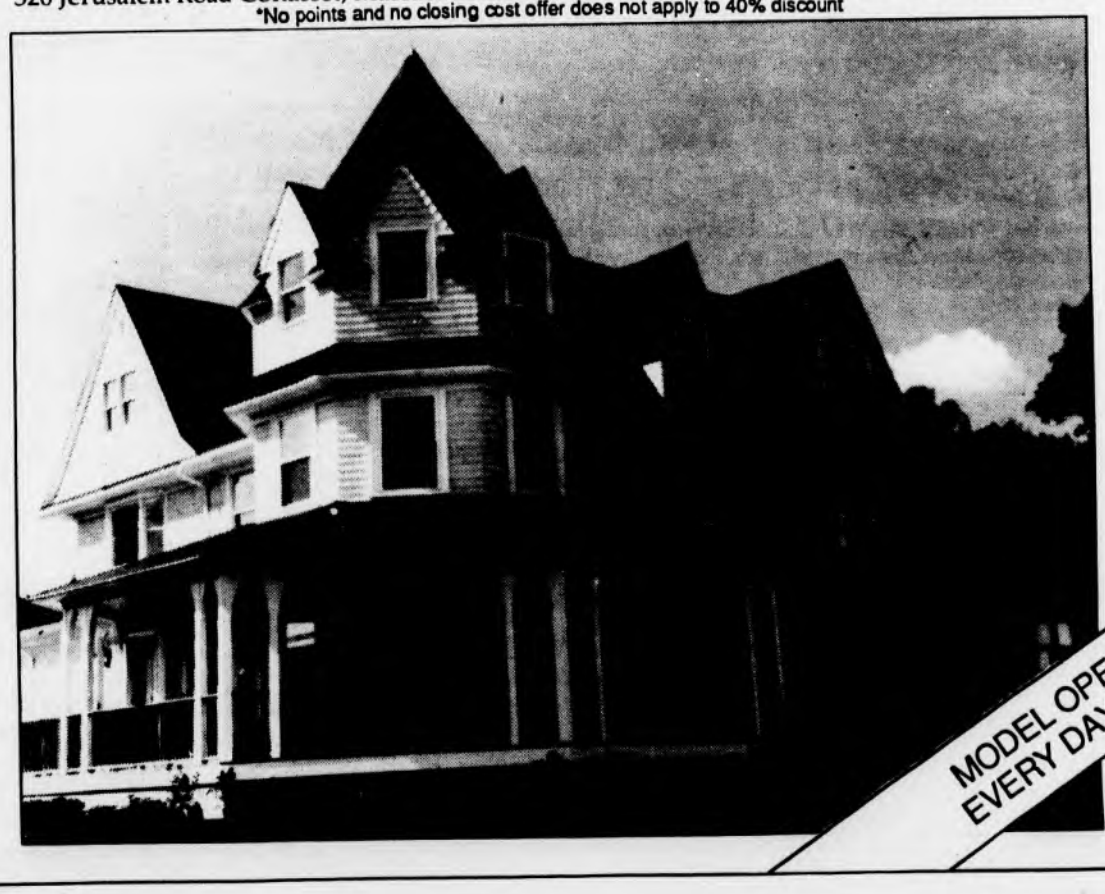
He noted that even if the larger of the two general override questions succeeds at the June 28 special election, the school department will be forced to cut $150,000 from its recommended budget.

"We'll likely look at how these responsibilities can best be met with the staff we have in the school system now. Obviously, the building principals will be taking on even more responsibilities," he added.

Roadrace is cancelled



The Scituate 10k Roadrace, a popular South Shore event which attracts more than 500 runners every year will not be held this summer because of organizing difficulties. The North River Athletic Club, who has sponsored the race for the last three years, plans to resume the 10k (6.2 miles) classic in 1990, a club spokesman said this week.



"People just don't realize that this is a full-time job to manage a race. We start organizing the race around Christmas. There are many meetings to attend. Secondly, it involves a lot of money to stimulate interest. We have supplied each participant with a T-shirt every year.

"The total cost of buying those T-shirts (approximately 600) comes to about $3,000, thus making T-shirts our biggest expenditure. Then, there are monetary prizes, medals, application forms, race numbers and officials to pay for and those items can add up. As for the sponsors, we have to line them up and then arrange meetings with them individually. "We just don't have enough time to do this," said the spokesman. "We could've done it but this year's race would not have been the same as compared to others."

Ten commandments sermon

At The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, June 25, members of the High Council will continue their talks on the Ten Commandments in the churches of the Hingham Stake (diocese.)

This month the subject will be: Avoiding Adultery. "The Lord gives the commandment, and we are expected to follow," says Hingham Ward guest preacher, Bro. Clark Cox of Walpole. Despite the world's message — if it feels good, do it — when the commandment is broken all kinds of problems result, like broken homes, violence, abortion, divorce. An adulterer is always a liar. Follow the commandments and you'll find happiness and peace of mind.

The family worship hour begins at 9 a.m. at the chapel, 379 Gardner St. in South Hingham.

The regular Sunday classes will continue throughout the summer. Visitors are welcome.

First Parish services

Rev. Edward T. Atkinson, Minister, Parish House (617) 383-1100, 23 North Main Street.

Annual Parish Meeting:

The Annual Meeting of the Parish concluded on Tuesday evening with action of the last three Articles to come before the meeting. It was voted to accept the recommendation of the Financial Planning Committee to retain the parsonage and expend up to $35,000 on needed maintenance and improvements to the building. Consistent with this action the parish also voted to transfer the Minister Emeritus Reserve Fund to the Parsonage Reserve and to permit expenditures up to $35,000 from this reserve for maintenance of the property under the direction of the Parish Committee. The meeting expressed thanks to the Financial Planning Committee for their clear and well-researched report.

Congratulations:

Sara Virginia Godwin and Leo J. Meehan III were married at the Meeting House on June 10.

Christened at the Meeting House on June 11 were Stephanie Nicole Hubbell and Elizabeth Jean Brownell.

Summer Services

Please help us keep the Meeting House open for fellowship on Sunday mornings during the summer. We still need someone to lead a brief, informal service of readings and recorded music on July 16, August 6, August 20 and August 27. Please call the church office if you can help. We would like to complete the schedule by the end of next week.

Summer schedule

The church office will close at the end of June, with a final newsletter published on June 28. If you have any notices you would like included in this newsletter, please get them to Nina by Tuesday, June 27. She will mail an August schedule on August 2, and will include any August news at that time.

Women's Book Group

The next meeting of the Women's Book Group will be on Tuesday, June 27 in the Living Room of the Parish House at 7:30 p.m. "Anywhere But Here", by Mona Simpson, will be discussed.

The book for July will be "The Radiant Way", by Margaret Drabble, and we'll be meeting on July 25 at Bette Nelson's, 10 Poplar Ave., Scituate.

The Music and Worship Committee — will meet on Wednesday, June 28 at 8 p.m. in the Parish House.

Second Congregational Church

Minister: Gary A. Ritts, Secretary: Muriel Wheelwright, Office phone: 383-0345; Parsonage phone: 383-1422; Office hours: Monday through Firday, 9 a.m. to noon.

Summer Early Worship Services — begin Sunday, July 9, 8 a.m. at the Sailing Club off of Border Street. Join us for an informal, relaxed worship experience.

New members to be taken in on Sunday, June 25 — please call the church office by Friday, June 16, if interested.

Another graduate neglected in our recognition lists — from Cohasset High School, Bill Walsh, Jr.

The New Sound Choir — for Haddonfield United Methodist, Haddonfield, New Jersey in concert at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Sunday, June 25 at 7:30 p.m. Among other offerings, they will be featuring portions of the dramatic musical, "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat."

Saint Anthony's Parish

Rev. John J. Keohane, Pastor, Jean Lennon, Coordinator of Religious Education, Rectory: 383-0219; Office: 383-0630, Tuesday and Friday 9 a.m. to 12 p.m.; Kathleen Keyes, Organist 545-5058.

Sunday Masses: 7, 9:30, 11:30 a.m. Saturday: 5 p.m.;

Daily Mass: 7 a.m., Saturday: 8 a.m. followed by Novena & Rosary;

Sacrament of Reconciliation: Saturday from 4:15 to 4:45 p.m.

Banns of Marriage: Dorothy Heiler - John Dings

A Concert at St. Stephen's Church will be presented on June 25 at 7:30 p.m. "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" is a dramatic choral production made up of 30 junior and senior high students from New Jersey. If you are interested in hosting two students for overnight, please call St. Stephen's Office at 383-1083.

The Village at Duxbury

The Village at Duxbury is a new senior living community planned for the South Shore—right in historic Duxbury. It is based on service and hospitality, will be self-contained and is for active, independent seniors.

The concept of senior living eases many of life's pressures in an environment that is both caring and exhilarating.

The Village at Duxbury has chosen the pineapple as the symbol most representative of the community because it has long stood for hospitality, friendship and celebration.

The Village at Duxbury is being planned by Welch Healthcare and Retirement Group, a local, family-owned and operated company that has been active in quality senior housing services on the South Shore for over four decades.

Historical society plans events for the summer

The Cohasset Historical Society is planning special events for this coming summer and fall season.

These programs will be hosted and led by Society members, and all relate to the history of this small New England seacoast village.

Sunday, July 9 there will be a special walking tour of the historic Town Common and nearby village center. Cohasset's ancient Town Common dates from the Land Division of the Conyhasset uplands in the year 1670. Three centuries of the town's history are reflected in the story of the Common, and in the architecture of the buildings surrounding it. Cohasset's traditional New England Town Common often is described as one of New England's finest. The small village forming today's business district grew as the town grew, and retains a number of historic buildings dating from the 18th century. The Society's July 9 walking tour will meet at the Common at 3 p.m. and will end at the two historical museums on Elm Street at the center.

Sunday, July 23, the Society will present a walking tour of another of Cohasset's most historic areas, its harbor once known as "Ship Cove." Almost from the town's beginning Ship Cove was the site of shipbuilding and mercantile ventures relating to fishing and trade during America's great "Age of Sail." This was a New England seafaring community, and for two centuries Cohasset's frontier was the Atlantic Ocean. Generations of the town's youth went to sea and in so doing visited all parts of the world. The Society's walking tour will follow the Historical Commission's "Captains' Walk" around the perimeter of the cove, beginning at Veteran's Memorial Park and ending at Government Island, site of the former U.S. Lighthouse Service Shore Station for Minot's Ledge Light. There, visitors will be able to take a side-trip up the slope of "Beacon Rock" for an unusual and striking overview of land and ocean at the Cohasset shore.

Sunday, August 6, the Historical Society will lead "Minot's Light Revisited II", a charter boat trip to and around the famous granite lighthouse some 2½ miles off Cohasset's shore. For the past three summers the 114 foot high ocean lighthouse has been undergoing the first major renovation of its 130 years. Last year's Society boat tour, "Minot's Light Revisited", saw the famous structure with its upper section disassembled, this year sees the work completed with Minot's appearing the same as it did before the renovation began. Once again the charter boat "Seabreeze" will be used for the tour. Seating aboard "Seabreeze" is limited, and additional information regarding reservations will be forthcoming.

Also during August, the Society's museums will be visited by members of His Majesty's 47th Regiment of Foot, on a date to be announced. This authentically re-created British Army unit of the time of the American Revolution recently marched in Cohasset's Memorial Day parade. The 47th Regiment provides a unique look at military science and practice of the latter 18th century, and is authentically uniformed. Sunday, September 17 is the date of another Society walking tour event; this of a third area of historical interest. Cohasset's Central Cemetery is the earliest of the town's ancient "Burying Grounds". Among the old slates of the Burying Ground the oldest dates from 1705. Subsequent 19th century expansions of the cemetery provide a profile of the town's growth and a genealogical record of its early families. Sea Captains, merchants, tradesmen and Clergy of an older time found their resting place in the Burying Ground, and the victims of Cohasset's most tragic shipwreck are honored by a monument atop Central Cemetery's highest hill.

Following the tour of the Burying Ground a bus will offer a tour of Cohasset's first "main street". Today's King Street is one of the town's ancient ways, dating from the Land Division of the Conahasset Uplands in 1670. Along the way are to be seen some of the earliest of Cohasset's homes. King Street itself marks the boundary between two of the sub-divisions of the 1670 Land Division and, in its earliest years was envisioned at the main thoroughfare of the new community.

Streeter is ready for another change . . .

Streeter had earned a master's degree from the University of Vermont in 1962.

One of the reasons Streeter wanted to return to the Cohasset schools was the support he received from the faculty and students.

"I had a tremendous amount of support," he said. "The faculty went to bat for me, and the students walked out when they learned what happened.

"It was a difficult time, but it wasn't souring.

"My contention was with the superintendent and the school committee."

When Streeter returned as high school principal, Gray was no longer superintendent.

"I was apprehensive," said Streeter," but the faculty made everything very nice."

Three years ago, Streeter was offered the position of assistant superintendent.

"I never aspired to the top job," he said. "But I was thinking of retiring in a few years, so it seemed like a good idea to take it.

"If I had 10 or 15 more years to go, I probably would have stayed as principal."

As assistant superintendent, his area of responsibility broadened to include the other two schools in Cohasset."

"I saw the entire educational system," he said. "All my life, I had been associated with high schools."

Streeter said he was careful to give the new high school principal, Meg Gallagher, and assistant principal, Jack DeLorenzo, time to develop their own styles.

"I didn't want them to think I was looking over their shoulders, or being critical," he said.

"Their methods are somewhat different than mine. But if the end result is ok or better, that's fine."

Last year, Streeter and his wife sold their Cohasset home and bought a house in Sandwich.

"We have very good friends who live on Cape Cod," he said. "And we frequently had visited Sandwich."

They moved to the Cape last June 30, and both commuted to their jobs on the South Shore.

Streeter was administrator of Hingham Visiting Nurse before she retired earlier this month.

Both are looking forward to retirement.

"I enjoy home repair," said Streeter."My dad was a carpenter.

"And I like playing golf and bicycling."

Streeter also enjoys sketching in pen and ink.

His favorite subjects include lighthouses.

"I enjoy fine detail work," said Streeter. "I had always been a doodler.

"In the late 1970s, I actually sat down and did some work.

"It might be a tough day at the office. I would sit down and start sketching and forget what was bothering me.

"I'm a detail person," continued Streeter."Even when I was working at school, I enjoyed doing the details.

"It wasn't that I thought I was the only person who could do it."

Streeter and his wife would also like to do some travelling.

They plan to visit St. Croix just before Christmas. And a return trip to Ireland is also on the agenda.

"I have some relatives in Ireland," he said."It's an emerald isle.

"We went over there for a wedding, and stayed on a farm. I'd like to go back ."

Streeter feels the time is right for retirement.

"It is incomprehensible to think about cutting $400,000 from the budget knowing that means people," he said, referring to the town's financial problems.

"It's a terrible time in education; not just in Cohasset."

Streeter said a successor for his job hasn't been selected, since the job may be changed if budget cuts are made.

Over the course of his career in Cohasset, Streeter said he has made some small changes in the system.

"It was a good system when I came here," he said. "I was not about to make changes just for the sake of changes.

"But I'd like to think it was a little better when I left than when I came here."

Smaller override wins, police contract is denied

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Voters in Wednesday's special election decided to override Proposition 2 1/2 by $203,800, softening the blow to budgets that otherwise would have been devastated.

About half of Cohasset's registered voters cast a ballot in the June 28 special election. And although they had the option of approving a $303,800 override, they instead chose the smaller amount, adding about 36 cents to the tax rate.

A proposal to appropriate $64,348 for the police contract was defeated by voters in the special election. But because the contract has been signed and ratified by the police union and selectmen, the town is obligated to pay the amount needed to fund the full three-year, retroactive contract.

According to selectmen chairman Burt Pratt, the money will have to be taken from the town's budget - an amount to be reduced from the various departmental budgets.

"It's my understanding that the police contract is a legal obligation and we must find the money from our budgets. Whether the money will be taken out equally from the town and the school budgets, I don't know. There was nothing equal about the way the override question was divided this time," he said.

Question one, which would have restored an additional $100,000 into the school budget, was defeated by about 300 votes. That override amount had been proposed at the May 31 town meeting by the school committee and was overwhelmingly adopted at that time.

The alternate override, question two on Wednesday's ballot, was approved by a 1,305 to 1,153 margin.

The 9:05 p.m. announcement by Town Clerk Frances Marks that question one had been

(See page 28)

The PSO was well represented during Wednesday's election as they presented information on the override. The PSO members included Martha Equi and Dee Dee Nicyski, and her son, Joseph, who helped blow up balloons to decorate the outdoor information center. (Staff photo/Dave Sullivan)

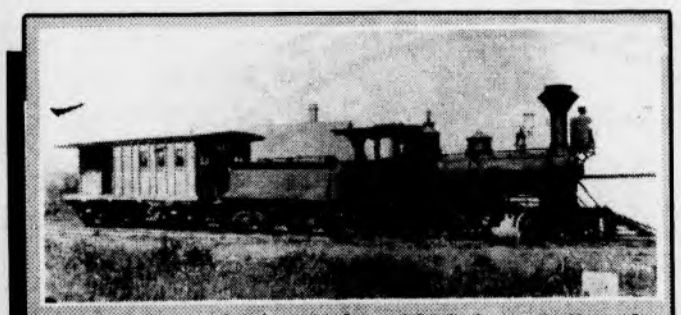
Dismal future for foreign languages

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

If the budget is slashed, the future looks dismal for the school's foreign language department.

According to department chairman Paul Narkiewicz, the loss of a foreign language teacher will mean combined levels of classes for the four remaining teachers. One teacher will be eliminated from that staff if the school department is forced to cut $400,000 from the budget in the event of an override defeat this week.

The multi-level classes require students in the basic level of a foreign language to take the same class as advanced placement students. The teacher will then be forced to instruct the same material at different comprehension levels. Advanced students will require extra work as they continue at a faster pace than the remaining students in the classroom, according to teacher George Fortin.



He explained that it is similar to one teacher teaching two courses at the same time,.which he noted was a violation of the teachers' contract. His experience with a combined class this year meant that he had to develop two class preparations every other day. If more classes are combined this year, he said the remaining teachers will be forced to teach six or seven different foreign language courses.

High school principal Mary Ellen Gallagher warned the committee Monday night that if more reductions are forced within that department, scheduling will become even more difficult, and the number of foreign language classes will be reduced. "We'll be cutting more kids out of their options of a foreign language. That's very sad. We're going to lose kids. This school system is going to lose your best and brightest kids," she said.

Guidance director Jack Leary added, "You can't provide the same quality with four teachers."

"That's what a $400,000 cut means. It's a serious problem. We'll have students that will not continue with a foreign language," warned school committee

Administrative vote is postponed

A recommendation by the school superintendent to consolidate two administrative positions was not met with enthusiastic support by the school committee.

Supt. Stephen Hart suggested Monday night that the two central office positions of assistant superintendent and director of guidance be combined to form a director of pupil services position. His recommendation was made in the event budget cuts become necessary because of an override defeat.

Committee members postponed any decision on the proposal until after the results and the ramifications of the override election are known.

A recent study by Dr. Thomas Whalen, former superintendent in Brockton and Weston, indicated that Cohasset is lacking in what he called a necessary number of central office administrators. Dr. Whalen recommended four options for the school system to follow, noting that the more favorable option included establishing a director of K-12 curriculum, a director of financial services and a director of special education, together with the superintendent of schools. The final alternative includes an assistant superintendent for curriculum and financial services, a director of special education, and a superintendent.

In his proposal to the school committee, Supt. Hart talked about the schoolwide personnel cuts that would be necessary if the Proposition 2 1/2 override is unsuccessful. Calling his recommendation, " a band-aid approach," the superintendent proposed that the numerous responsibilities listed by Dr. Whalen be combined to form one position of director of pupil services. That director would also be responsible for the special education program, the guidance department and testing programs for all grades.

"The big issues is, how do we do all the things we want without all the money," he told the committee

White is no stranger to these busy waters

When Cohasset's new pool director was growing up, she didn't always wait for the summer to take a dip in the ocean.

"I was the kind of kid who would go in the water on Good Friday," said Abbie White, a Charlestown resident.

"I always, always, always have loved the beach and water. I don't know if it is because I am a pisces, but I have always found it very relaxing."

White, who teaches first graders in North Reading during the year, was hired as pool director in May. But she is no stranger to Cohasset or to the swim center.

"I grew up on Sandy Cove," said White. "I

Recycling news update

The Recycling Committee and the Board of Health updates residents on recycling news. The landfill now accepts TIRES and BRUSH from homeowners. Tires cost 75 cents each without rims, $2 each with rims, and $5 for truck tires.

Pay the landfill Supervisor, Joe Laugelle, directly. Checks or cash accepted, but please be certain to pay as Oxford Tire only takes as many tires as paid for.

Brush is accepted by homeowners only. Landscapers must chip their brush first. Brush is stored separately, and must not be put near the compost pile. Wood chips from the brush are available to homeowners at no charge.

Compost is available free to homeowners, and the Board of Health will be testing the compost shortly for pesticides and other contaminants. Until the testing, however, the Board of Health advises use of the compost on flower gardens, etc., but not on vegetable gardens.

The Recycling Committee needs your help, and asks that NO PLASTIC be deposited in the paper bin. All papers should be in brown paper bags or tied.

Appliances are accepted in the metal pile at a cost of $10 for each appliance. Pay Joe Laugelle directly.

Recycling Guides are available from Joe Laugelle at the landfill, from the Board of Health office, and when purchasing new facility stickers at Town Hall.

Remember, the landfill is CLOSED on Mondays, Tuesdays & Thursdays.

Problem with rising rent

A visit to the Government Island duplex was scheduled by selectmen for this week after a complaint by one of the tenants to an increase in rent.

Selectmen voted last month to increase the rent from $350 to $600 a month, plus utilities, at the town-owned property starting July 1.

The board felt the increase was warranted because rents in the area range from $650 to $1,000 a month.

Charlene Gardner, who has lived in one half of the duplex for six and a half years, said she was disappointed that board members did not visit the housing before the rent was raised.

"...I feel that I need to let you know that my side of the duplex is in deteriorating condition and absolutely nothing like the other side which has been occupied by the same family for 21 years. My apartment is simply not worth $600 a month."

Gardner said that her back door is not properly hung, and sometimes in the winter, snow comes inside.

The kitchen floor is rotted, she said, and the faucets leak.

Because windows are not air tight, two rooms cannot be used in the winter, according to Gardner.

She also said that it takes her two hours to do one load of laundry because the water pressure is so low.

Ceilings leak, and pipes freeze during the winter, Gardner said.

"I want this letter read by all so that the towns people will not think I have been living 'high' off the hog or on 'easy street' since I have occupied these premises," said Gardner.

"I want the selectmen to understand that to maintain my side of the duplex between oil and electricity, I already pay an extra $300 per month."

Selectman chairman Burt Pratt declined to visit the property.

"I was in the building years ago, and I can't believe it has improved any," he said.

The structure, built in 1860, was originally the old light keeper's residence.

A great Father's Day gift

Local resident Lee Wilson has written to selectmen to commend the Cohasset police and fire departments for "the most wonderful Father's Day gift a man could possibly receive."

"I guess we all believe in miracles to some degree," said Wilson.

"My son, Lee Wilson, Jr., was involved in an automobile accident on Sunday, June 18th, that was certainly life threatening to him.

"The Cohasset Police Department in the person of Sgt. Robert Jackson, and the Cohasset Fire Department, in the persons of Capt. Robert Lincoln, FF/EMT Paul McGaffigan, FF/EMT Tom Finegan and FF Robert Protulis saved his life thereby giving me the most wonderful Father's Day gift a man could possibly receive.

"I am sure it was their swift response and professional handling of this most serious event that saved Lee's life.

"My family will always be in debt to these brave public servants who receive little or no credit for all their heroic actions."

Possible change to bylaw

The planning board is requesting input from town departments on possible changes to the zoning bylaw.

"At its regular meeting on June 21, the planning board discussed the fact that several departments have commented that the zoning bylaws need to have changes made," said board chairman Al Moore in a memo to departments.

"We request that all input be received, in writing, in this office by September 15, in order that we will have time to go over the suggestions and have them prepared for the annual town meeting."

. . . Cohasset's week

Planners will not appeal

The planning board has authorized town counsel Richard Henderson to put in a stipulated judgement regarding Cohasset Plaza II.

Earlier this month, Superior Court Judge Roger J. Donahue ordered the town to issue a building permit for phase two of Cohasset Plaza.

He clarified an order he made to the planning board March 24 in which he advised the town to issue a building permit for the Route 3A plaza.

The planning board had voted on the site plan in August, 1988. The decision ended in a 2-2 tie, which constituted no action, according to attorney for developer Donald Staszko.

Staszko plans to construct 10-12 stores in the area next to the Super Stop & Shop.

The planning board deleted a section requiring reserved parking spaces to be covered with pervious material.

It also deleted a section prohibiting pedestrian access to Sohier St.

Vehicular access and egress is not allowed.

Church St. plan approved

The planning board voted Wednesday night, June 21, to approve preliminary subdivision plans for land owned by Joseph Carbone on Church St.

The next step will be a hearing on a definitive subdivision plan.

Paul Mirabito of Ross Engineering Co., Norwell, said that a proposed subdivision of five lots is planned on a cul-de-sac.

Mirabito said the lots will range in size from 30,000 to 45,000 square feet.

Two of the lots will be occupied by the Carbone family, according to Mirabito.

"Soil and percolation tests show that they have suitable soil for the septic system," he said.

Underground storm drains to a storm detention basin are proposed, he said.

The development will have a green strip of 11-12 feet, according to Mirabito.

"We would want the opinion of the fire chief regarding space to turn the engine around, and the opinion of the police chief," said board chairman Al Moore.

When the definitive plan is before the board, members will go through a checklist, said Moore.

"But I don't see any real problems," he said.

In other action, the board:

*Invited residents with concerns about zoning bylaws to submit them in writing to the planning board.

Moore said that sometimes bylaw changes are discussed at town meeting.

"But this is the forum for complaints about bylaws," he said.

*Agreed to release for sale three lots at a development on Rocky Lane in exchange for a $12,000 bond from developer Ross Rosano and contract regarding repaving a section of N. Main St.

The development has nine lots.

Rosano said that three more are to sold this month.

*Noted that elevations at Jonathan Livingston Square off Route 3A are according to plan.

Moore said that he has been asked by a number of people to check the elevations.

"(Town engineer) John Modzelewski checked and they are right on the mark," said Moore.

"It's almost an optical illusion," he said.

"But the overall appearance is going to be greatly enhanced."

Dragging feet on duck pond

The duck pond on Cohasset Common will probably not be fixed until after the summer, selectmen said Monday night.

"People think we are dragging our feet," said selectman Diana Kornet.

"The engineers took a long time getting back to us," said Pratt, who noted that bids for the work will be opened July 5.

The work will take five weeks after that.

"We are as embarrassed as anybody, but we want the job done right," he said.

Doyon noted that his parents, who are from Maine, recently visited Cohasset.

"Their first question was why there wasn't water in the pond," he said.

Officials won't pay bills

Selectmen took the following action at their meeting Monday night, June 26, at Town Hall:

*Granted, pending approval by the board of health, a license to Kristen Pompeo and Anne O'Leary for a hot dog cart at Sandy Beach.

*Granted a one-day liquor license for the Cohasset High School Class of 1964's 25th year reunion July 15, 7:30 p.m. to 1 a.m. at One Stagecoach Way.

*Took no action on a bill from Donham & Sweeney Inc. for $17,000 to A.P. Whitaker regarding construction of new town hall.

"I'm against paying anything until town hall is 100 percent complete," said selectmen chairman Burt Pratt.

*Appointed Fire Chief Daniel Brock as the alternate right to know muncipal coordinator.

Executive secretary Greg Doyon said that the right to know coordinator is in charge of monitoring the use of hazardous chemicals.

He said the coordinator is Joseph Godzik, health agent.

*Received information from Pratt regarding the structure of meetings.

"I've been somewhat troubled about the way meetings have been going," he said.

He noted that some subjects are discussed after there has been a vote taken.

"In the future, I won't tolerate that," he said.

Pratt also noted that visitors to meetings will not be allowed to speak until after all selectmen have had the opportunity to talk.

"I hope you will study this, and get a little closer to it," said Pratt.

"I think we will all be a lot happier and the meetings will be shorter."

*Approved a New England Telephone conduit at the corner of Sohier St. and Route 3A.

Revised change for group

Selectmen voted Monday night, June 26, to adopt a revised charge for the Cox Estate Planning Committee.

The commitee, formed to study possible municipal uses of the former waterfront home of Jessie Bancroft Cox, is scheduled to meet July 12 at 8 p.m. at Town Hall.

The property, known as The Oaks, was recently put up for sale again with a price tag of $3.7 million.

The committee's new charge is to study such things as the preservation of open space, use of the shore line, generation of septage or sewerage, traffic and parking impact, and economic benefit.

It is also to present a report to selectmen, and to advise permit granting agencies of the town's concerns regarding any proposed uses of the property by a prospective buyer/developer.

Changes in the committee's charge were suggested by executive secretary Greg Doyon.

"In light of what has happened the last few months, the scope (of the first charge) is too narrow," said Doyon.

The estate was the center of contoversy last year when the owners, MTC Associates III, proposed a marina along the 1,800 feet of water frontage on Cohasset Harbor.

The marina of 90 to 100 boat slips would have been sold as "dockominiums".

In return for town approval, the owners of the property offered to donate the house and grounds to the town of Cohasset to use as it saw fit.

MTC Associates would retain ownership of the waterfront for the marina development.

But the plan was rejected by town voters in a special town meeting in December, 1988.

The property is now being marketed by LandVest, the Boston-based luxury real estate broker, in affiliation with Gallery 360 of Cohasset.

Kornet would spring for paper

Selectman Diana Kornet proposed this week to have voter information in front of town hall on election day, Wednesday, June 28.

But the idea went by the boards after fellow members and others noted the restrictions which would apply to such information.

Kornet proposed Monday night, June 26, that eight easels with poster boards be placed beyond the required 150 feet from the polling place.

The poster boards would contain information on the impact of each question.

"It seems to me there is so much confusion about the questions," she said."I want to be very impartial - this would strictly be informational."

"I have no objection," said selectman chairman Burt Pratt. "But you would have to make the easels pretty fast. Who would pay for this?"

Kornet said she would borrow the easels from the school department, "and I will spring for the poster boards."

"It's a nice concept," said selectman Ned Tebbetts, "but no matter what the wording, some people would think it would be advocacy."

"I agree with the concept, but I agree with Ned," said selectman Martha Gjesteby.

Kornet said she would talk with town counsel Richard Henderson, executive secretary Greg Doyon and town accountant Mary Matthews about the wording.

"It won't make any difference," said selectman Rocco Laugelle. "People will come to the election either voting for, or against, the questions."

Gjesteby noted that the town should have a banner announcing election day.

Advisory committee member Arne Gjesteby said that using Doyon's and Matthew's time is, in effect, using town money, and that is illegal.

"It looks like public money, whether or not it is," said Pratt.

No action was taken on Kornet's proposal.

Henderson is reappointed

Selectmen voted Monday night, June 26, to reappoint Town Counsel Richard Henderson despite a move to the contrary by member Martha Gjesteby.

"I don't question his competence," said Gjesteby,"but he seems to be getting quite busy. I have found that sometimes there is a delay for various reasons."

Gjesteby, who has questioned Henderson's appointment for the last two years, suggested a more comprehensive type of town counsel.

But the other selectmen strongly disagreed.

"I am very wary of going to a different or larger firm," said selectman Diana Kornet.

"We are trying to save legal expenses. Going to someone else will take longer to do things they are not familiar with."

Selectmen Ned Tebbetts asked Gjesteby if Henderson's advise has been unsatisfactory.

"That's not my comment," said Gjesteby. "I feel the burden of his other job has gotten to be too much."

"I fail to see how we could answers any more quickly," said selectman chairman Burt Pratt, who noted that Henderson is paid $75 an hour.

"I honestly think he is giving excellent service at a reasonable rate of money. I object to any move to change town counsel."

Gjesteby reiterated that her suggestion was no reflection on Henderson's legal expertise.

"He is a guy who gives many free hours to us," said selectman Rocco Laugelle, "and not just to selectmen - to other departments too."

Gjesteby made a motion not to approve Henderson's appointment, but it died for lack of a second.

Selectmen also put on hold reappointment of building inspector Donald Robbins.

Members said they would like to know more about an agreement by Robbins to fill in for Hingham's building inspector.

Selectmen voted 4 to 1, with Gjesteby opposed, to appoint the following town officers : William Quigley, dog officer; Lot E. Bates, Jr., sealer of weights & measures, measurer of bark and wood; Stephen F. Wigmore, wire superintendent, assistant shellfish constable; Richard Gallo, assistant wire superintendent; Peter Laugelle, tree, park and cemetery superintendent; David Wadsworth, town archivist; Clifford Dickson, assistant harbormaster; David Marks, Jr., assistant harbormaster; Noel Ripley, keeper of town clock, director of veteran's affairs and burial agent; Maria Plante, constable; Kearin Dunn, fence viewer; Grace Donohue, fence viewer.

Fire chief to outline cuts

Selectmen said they would continue their Monday night meeting to Wednesday evening after the town election if the fire chief had not submitted a more definitive plan for cuts in his department.

All departments were asked to cut their budgets after voters did not approve an override in April.

Two alternative override proposals, of $203,800 and $303,800, were scheduled for the June 28 ballot.

"Regardless of the outcome, the fire chief will have to cut overtime," said advisory committee member Arne Gjesteby.

"It is important that the chief do something," he said.

Executive secretary Greg Doyon said Chief Daniel Brock has submitted a framework for cuts in his department.

"But it is not specific enough," said Doyon.

"We realize what we have to do," selectman Rocco Laugelle told Gjesteby.

"The departments have said they will cooperate. But we also have to worry about protection of the town and its residents."

Doyon said that the matter would be on the agenda for the July 10 meeting.

"We will send the chief a message to come up with a plan," said selectman chairman Burt Pratt. "By no means will we let it go until July 10."

"Even if the higher (override) figure is approved, we still have to change the way the fire department operates," said selectman Diana Kornet.

"We have to have plans A and B," she said. "If he (the chief) doesn't, we will have to come down with a hatchet."

The meeting was scheduled for an unspecified time after the election results are known.

If the fire contract was to be discussed, the meeting would go into executive session.

No negligence agreement

Selectmen voted unanimously Monday night, June 26, to approve an indemnification agreement regarding the Curtis Estate.

The town has been awarded a municipal advance program grant regarding the estate.

The money will be used to conduct a feasibility study to determine whether the lands and building would be appropriate for a facility for the disabled and/or the mentally retarded, as well as other uses within George Curtis' will.

The trustees have granted the town access to the estate for the study.

The agreement states that the town shall not hold the trustees liable for death or personal injuries caused by negligence of the town in the course of conducting the study.

It also states that upon completion of the study, the estate shall be restored to its original condition.

Town counsel Richard Henderson said the trustees have received a copy of the agreement.

Philosopher teaches about nature

By Margie Kelley
Mariner Staff

While Jerry Flaherty talked about the summer interpretive program he teaches at Wompatuck State Park, a hawk appeared and hovered above a patch of woods nearby.

"That's a red-tailed hawk," Flaherty said. "And see that little bird? It's chasing the hawk away from its nest."

Flaherty is from Scituate, where he teaches the fifth grade at Cushing Elementary School. He has been coordinating and leading nature walks, astronomy classes, and bike tours at Wompatuck State Park for the past nine summers.

The "interpretive" program was instituted by the Department of Environmental Management's Division of Forests and Parks in 1980 at 100 sites across the state, with the mission to enhance public appreciation of nature, according to Flaherty.

"Hopefully, the interpretative program will get people to want to save land like this from being developed," Flaherty said.

Flaherty offers about 75 "classes" on at least 20 different subjects every summer. A class is offered every day of the week, except Tuesdays and Thursdays, and all are absolutely free.

The program offers people a fun way to learn about the environment while walking, or riding a bike. The subjects of focus range from botany and geology, to ornithology, entomology, astronomy, and even history. All of the subjects are presented in a fun, interesting manner, and are easy to understand.

"Some of the classes, astronomy and geology, for instance, are real challenges," Flaherty said. "But I can usually get people interested."

If you like birds, you might attend the class entitled "Birds of the Forest" in which participants try to locate and identify thrushes, grosbeaks, and warblers.

The "Fire and Ice" tour offers a glimpse at the geology of eastern Massachusetts as seen in different formations in the park.

One bike tour, called "Wildlife Foray", is a search for fox, raccoons, opossum, hawks and owls.

Still, another class is called "Stop to Smell the Flowers" and offers a botany lesson by bicycle.

And for the really brave there's "Investigating Insects-The World of Six Legs".

Flaherty says he also teaches the history of the park, telling stories about what the park was like at the turn of the century, and how it came to be a state park.

"I try to touch upon all the sciences," Flaherty said. "I focus mainly on life science and earth science, with some physical science in astronomy and geology."

Flaherty's credentials to teach the program came mostly from his amateur curiosity and interest in nature. Aside from teaching, Flaherty holds a degree in philosophy. The rest, he says, he learned by attending workshops and classes, some of which were just like the ones he now teaches.

His philosophy about his role of nature educator centers around the quality of life in less populated places verses the quality of life in urban settings.

"These parks represent what used to be," Flaherty said. "Thank God they've been protected. Hopefully they will always be protected."

"Some people come in here and look around and say, 'What a waste of space'. They just don't understand," he said.

Flaherty said the program aims to give people an understanding of the importance of nature and the preservation of open space so that they may be inspired to try to save it from development.

"We should consider the human population. We're thrusting upon ourselves. The urban situations are so tense," Flaherty said. "This environment is so much more laid back. We have a lot to learn."

"I'm a city boy myself, born near New York City," he said. "But I love it here."

Flaherty said the 5,000-acre park overlaps Hingham, Norwell, Cohasset and Scituate. He said Wompatuck's board of trustees has elected to maintain only one public entrance, in Hingham, to prevent the park from becoming a "shortcut".

"All four towns are represented on the board," Flaherty said. "The park's in good hands."

Wompatuck also features many streams, has four ponds, and is home to the Cohasset Reservoir.

The one major problem with the program, says Flaherty, is that not many people know about it.

"We're certainly under-utilized," Flaherty said. " We usually only get three or four people in each program. It's all free, already paid for through taxes. More people ought to take advantage of it."

The classes usually run for 1 1/2 to 2 hours, and are open to all ages.

Flaherty said that perhaps one of the nicest aspects of his job is the interaction with the participants.

"It's an exchange of wonderful ideas," he said.

Activities for the coming week include;

*"Fire and Ice", an auto-walking tour focusing on the geological record of time etched in rock, followed by "Investigating Insects",1 p.m., June 30.

*"Nesting Birds", a search for birds nesting in and around the park, 8 a.m., July 1.

*"Wildflowers, Nature's Garland", 1 p.m., July 1.

Chiropractic for Health
by Dr. Debra M.Tranberg
Chiropractor
LOWER BACK PAIN CAUSES
Lower back pain usually stems from two general causes. Eighty-five percent of lower back pain cases develop from what are known as "mechanical" problems, ranging from a simple muscle spasm to a small crack in a vertebra. The other fifteen percent of cases are "neurogenic", involving the nerves of the spine. The most common of these is a herniated (often called "slipped") disc. This occurs when some of the disc, the gelatinous, shock-absorbing material between the vertebrae, partially extrudes. In doing so, it may put pressure on the nerves around the spine. The chiropractor evaluates the cause of lower back pain and then treats it with all the knowledge at her disposal.
Much of this type of discomfort that one endures is a needless toleration of pain. Oftentimes the appropriate chiropractic applications provides relief to such distress. SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC urges anyone with such problems to call today. Let us analyze your situation and determine the corrective action needed. Located at 80 Front St., Scituate Harbor. Tel. 545-7388. By appt. Early morning and late evening appts. Workers Comp cases, VISA, M/C and most insurance plans accepted.
HINT: Chronic poor posture and poor muscle tone in the pelvis and torso can initiate or irritate a lower back condition.

Committee delays vote on school administrators

Monday night. He listed the personnel that will be cut from the system if the override fails this week.

"Some people think that somehow we will find the money, but we all know that is not going to happen," he said. "My concern is that we take the money we have and provide the best educational environment for the children of Cohasset. Unfortunately, we are struggling about how to take $100 and buy $200 worth of goods. That's how I developed the administrative reorganization to best meet our needs given the present staff, department chairmen and building principals."

In addition to the combined administrative position, Supt. Hart suggested that a bookkeeping position in the central office be upgraded to bookkeeper/accountant to assist the superintendent in the daily business operation of the school system. He also suggested that the responsibilities of the enrichment program director be expanded to include the supervision of curriculum.

"This is not an ideal approach," he noted, "but it's what we can do in light of a possible $400,000 budget reduction."

But school committee member Nancy Sandell disagreed with the temporary solution, saying the schools should take the initiative, not simply respond to budget reductions. "I really see the need for another administrator for the work that needs to be done. It makes me nervous not to have the people in place to bring this forward," she said.

"If the override fails, we are looking at possible cuts next year and the following years. We are looking at tremendous changes to the school system. If we hope to continue some excellence, we need the people to help."

Committee member Ralph Kidder said they must continue to consider the school's ambitious five-year goal outlined in a report earlier this year. "I hope we can continue to look to what is perceived as long-range goals, and not what is perceived as a one-year override," he said.

Although committee member Christopher Ford shared their concerns, he said it would be difficult bringing in more administrators "in the present (budget) climate.

"I share your desire to go forward, but if it means the reduction of two additional teachers (to employ an administrator), then we should not go forward," he added.

Chairman Barbara Bliss stated at the outset of the discussion that she would be unwilling to vote on the matter until after the override was settled. "I am not totally happy with Steve's recommendation. But depending on how much money we end up with, it may be the only way we can go," she said, emphasizing that she was not being critical of the superintendent's proposal. "If we are successful Wednesday (June 28), then we have a different picture to look at."

Although she admitted there was "some urgency" in making a decision, she suggested the committee postpone a vote until after the June 28 override election.

Kidder also suggested that the superintendent propose "a better case scenario" which addresses more of the concerns expressed in the consultant's report, in the event the override succeeds.

Future could be dismal

chairman Barbara Bliss.

Narkiewicz told the committee that if a teacher is cut from the staff, there will be more than 90 foreign language students to divide among the four teachers. Currently, 72 percent of Cohasset's junior/senior high school students study a foreign language.

But those students, Narkiewicz warned, "will definitely not be getting the same quality of class."

The French 3 class will combine advanced placement and honors students, and the French 2 class will combine honors and basic level students. "My biggest fear," he told the committee, "is that the (basic) students will become so intimidated they will drop foreign language."

Principal Gallagher said if the teaching position is eliminated, the staff has talked about dropping foreign language from the seventh and eighth grades and replacing it with a classics program. "But we do not want to make a hasty recommendation to the school committee," she said. "We have made a commitment to each student who has started a foreign language.

"These are the ramifications of losing a foreign language teacher," according to Supt. Stephen Hart. "They are extensive. But it's unfortunate that people may not understand the ramifications of this budget."

The school committee has authorized one early release day per month for the 1989-90 school year, although the dates have not been specified.

The release days are required by the junior/senior high school staff so that teachers may participate in a two-year self-study which will culminate in an independent evaluation and accreditation of the school. Each teacher will participate in several areas of the study, and will meet on those early release dates to discuss specific areas within the self-study, according to principal Mary Ellen Gallagher.

Deer Hill School Principal Ken Ekberg once again requested that early release dates for the elementary schools be alternated so that students do not miss the same classes eight to ten times through the year.

The committee members agreed when the dates are established, they will be the same for the high school and elementary grades to accommodate students who will be supervised by older siblings.

New swim center director is no stranger started taking swimming lessons when I was four or five years old at the Cox Estate. But I don't really remember them.

"When I was 15, my father said I needed a job for the summer, so I became a swim instructor at a private pool in Cohasset."

Then she came to the swim center as head instructor of Red Cross lessons for three years, followed by three more years as swim team coach.

Her mother, Jane White, still lives in Cohasset. Her father, William White, lives in Charlestown.

"My three brothers got into sailing,and my sister and I got into swimming," she said.

She was delighted when she was offered the job of Cohasset's pool director this spring.

"I can't imagine summer without teaching swimming," said White.

Cohasset's six-lane pool, with depths from five to 13 feet, opened June 17. There is also a "baby pool" which is three feet deep.

But a clean-up by 40 volunteers was needed before opening day.

"We got the leaves out of the pool," said White,"and volunteers cleaned the parking lot. They cut down sumac trees. Now it looks decent. It doesn't look like a forgotten place."

She noted the efforts of such people as Dr. Steve Golden, Diane Karcher, and her son, Eric; Peter and Joe Laugelle and Mike Jones.

"We wouldn't be open today if it wasn't for them," she said."They spent a lot of time here."

But the pool did open, and it will remain so until the Friday before Labor Day, according to White.

Hours are 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.. Monday to Friday, and 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, rain or shine, unless there is a thunder and lightning storm.

A family membership for Cohasset residents is $125, and an individual membership, $75. A membership for senior citizens is $45, and for an individual junior, $50.

White has a staff of eight. Her assistant is Sarah Trask of Cohasset.

"Sarah started swimming for me when I was coach 14 years ago," said White."She is one of the only people who is registered to teach lifeguarding."

There are also six guards, five full-time and one part-time.

White's responsibilities range from scheduling her staff to policing the pool to giving lessons.

"I do a little bit of everything," she said. "That's why it is fun."

One of the hardest parts of the job can be dealing with parents who don't back up the instructions their children are given, according to both White and Trask.

"Parents don't always give you a lot of support," said Trask.

Then there are the parents who consider the staff babysitters, said White.

"Children who are under 11 are not supposed to be in the pool area by themselves. But you wouldn't believe the number of latch key kids who are dropped off," she said.

"It's very risky. This isn't a one-on-one situation.

"We are not a babysitting service, and a lot of people look at us as though we were. We can't do that for 200 people. There are only six of us on at one time.

"It just takes 20-60 seconds for someone to drown."

The majority of parents, though, are terrific, they both said.

"Most parents are supportive- unbelievably so," said White. "There are a lot of wonderful people in town.

White said she would like to build up the adult programs "so that people can swim laps comfortably."

She also feels that the water babies classes for 3 and 4 year olds is more successful without parents.

"The children will do something for someone else that they wouldn't do if their mom and dad were there. The child has to develop a relationship with the instructor," she explained.

There are also swimming lessons for all levels.

In addition, new programs this year include water aerobics.

"It's lower than low impact," said Trask, "and much better for you. It's very good for the joints."

Family cook-outs with barbecues on the lawn at supper time are also planned.

This fall, funds may be raised for a retractable roof for the pool.

But for now, White is enjoying the summer.

"I love this kind of job," she said. "I love to see children release energy in a positive way. If you don't know how to swim, you are really on the outs. It should be as important as walking."

□ Kasey Smith of Cohasset, a student at Cohasset High School, was selected to attend the second annual Massachusetts Art All-State Festival held at the Worcester Art Museum, June 9 and 10. Kasey was one of the artistically talented high school juniors nominated by their respective schools and selected to attend the festival.

Drawing 150 participants from Massachusetts high schools, Art All-State provides recognition and encouragement to promising young artists. Students in the 1989 Art All-State Festival were selected by panels of prominent state art educators who interviewed nominess and reviewed samples of their work. The festival was co-sponsored by the Massachusetts Director of Art Education, Massachusetts Art Education Association, Massachusetts Alliance for the Arts in Education, and Worcester Art Museum.

□ Three Cohasset residents recently graduated from Curry College.

Susan M. Brown of Aaron River Road graduated magna cum laude with a bachelor of arts degree in fine and applied arts. She also received the College's Fine and Applied Arts Award and was designated a U.S. Achievement Academy All-American Scholar for Fine and Applied Arts.

John C. Casey, Jr. of Fairoaks Lane received a bachelor of Arts degree.

Kimberly Ann Winchester of Brewster Road received a bachelor of arts degree in business management.

□ Victoria Lynn Spooner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander D. Spooner of Cohasset, received a Bachelor of Arts degree on May 29 from Brown University in Providence, R.I.

By long-standing tradition, the graduates were addressed by two of their colleagues. Paul Reed McCracken, Jr., spoke on the topic, "What Will We Remember?" Amanda Biers spoke on the topic, "Envisioning Our Tomorrow and Fighting for Change Today: The Challenge of Achieving Peace and Social Justice."

□ Deborah Anderson received a richly deserved award recently and she is one happy lady! She was nominated by her fellow teachers to receive a certificate of service for her work as a teacher in Norwell. Deborah has been teaching for 14 years, and her certificate was one of 11 awarded in all of Plymouth County! The certificate was for outstanding service to the community, the children and the teaching profession. Keep up the good work. Deborah, that certainly is an inspiration to do so! Congratulations.

□ Jessica Hamilton graduated May 20 from Wheaton College, Norton, where she majored in Political Science.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Hamilton III of Cohasset.

□ Carla Lucas graduated Cum Laude May 20 from Wheaton College, where she majored in mathematics.

She is the daughter of Thomas J. Lucas of Cohasset.

□ Elaine S. Coyne of 237 Forest Avenue, received a Master of Science in Taxation from Bentley College. She received her degree with distinction in November, 1988.

□ Jean Garvey of 3 Bayberry Lane, a junior at Stonehill College, was named to the dean's list with honors for the last semester.

□ Hearty congratulations go to Robert and Alyson Silvia on the birth of their son. He was born on June 3 at South Shore Hospital. Wonder if he was born with a football in his hand? If not, you can bet there is one in his crib as we speak! You all know that Dad is the assistant football coach who dedicates numerous hours to the players and the game. Here's to the next generation of Silvias to play.

□ John J. Dockray of Cohasset was named to the Dean's List for the spring semester at Massasoit Community College.

□ Christine Ann Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Moore Jr. of 10 Fair Oaks Lane, graduated on May 28 from Wesleyan University in Middletown, Connecticut. Christine received a Bachelor of Arts with a major in American Studies in English. She will be working for the Traveler's Insurance, located in Connecticut.

□ Happy belated 75th birthday to Ann Leonard!! Yes folks that is the same Ann Leonard that you read about with all of the Sports Prowess . . . an inspiration to all of us, we surely wish you many more happy healthy birthdays.

□ Lauri Doherty made the Dean's List at Franklin Pierce College in New Hampshire last semester, and that's not all!! Lauri is working for the college, for Project Soar. It is a camp for gifted children, and Lauri is teaching dramatic art. The camp is on the college campus.

□ We hope that Ray Chase is feeling much stronger as he reads this!

□ Don't forget that there is a way to cool down this summer, and it is right in your back yard. The Cohasset Swim Center would love to have you join!! Its leaders are an enthusiastic bunch, and they promise you a summer full of fun that you won't soon forget.

□ Chairman Al Odermatt and Co-ordinator Corinne Cahill wish to thank the 94 potential donors who presented themselves at the Cohasset Community Bloodmobile held on Tuesday, June 20 at the First Parish House. 88 pints of blood were donated. A special thanks is due to the volunteers involved, not only those who promoted the donors in their respective groups, but also those who helped publicize the event; and the Red Cross Staff. A higher turnout was planned, but many people were unable to keep their appointments. 82 prior donors and 22 drop-ins constituted the 94 donors. VIP donor pins were presented to the 30 people that had donated more than two gallons of blood. These included Blanche Buckley (64 pints), Ronald Tye (80 pints) and Louis Eaton (99 pints). The next Bloodmobile will be held on Sept. 26, 1989.

□ Another fine group of volunteers received special recognition recently, the volunteer drivers who made 20 or more trips to area hospitals with cancer patients who need treatments. First time award went to David Chittim, and a repeat award went to Ray Remick. Other Cohasset drivers include Al Livingston, Doug Peck, Marty and Sumner Smith, Sarah Anderson, John Campbell, Murray Campbell and Ozzie Ingram. Hats off to you all!!

□ The "Jail and Bail" caper, in which many Cohasset people were prominent, raised a total of $25,488.42, which is more than 2 1/2 times the goal of $10,000. You remember that people were arrested, then had to raise money to bail themselves out. Among Cohasset "jailbirds" were Bert Pratt, Martha Gjesteby, Diana Kornet, Mary Jeannette Murray, Donald Staszko and Wigmore Pierson. Sharon Becker was very active enlisting participants and with Arthur Johnson, took the people to "jail" at the South Shore Plaza.

□ Air Force Airman Garrett A. Hunt has arrived for duty at Barksdale Air Force Base, La. Garrett is an apprentice communication and navigation systems specialist with the 2nd Aonics Maintenance Squadron. He is the son of Jacqueiline M. Noonan and stepson of Brian W. Noonan of 26 Ash Street. Garrett is a 1988 CHS graduate.

□ Imagine being in Priscilla or Ned Tebbetts shoes! They actually witnessed history being made while on their recent trip to China. One thing is for certain, the selectmen's meetings will be calm by comparison.

□ Speaking of China, this year's summer reading program at the Library will be all about stories of China, India, Japan and their neighboring countries. The summer reading program will be for grades 1-6, and there will be awards at the end of the season (grades 7-up, 10 books; grades 5-4, 15 books; grades 1-3 20 books). At the end of the summer there will be a field trip to the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, a true reward in itself. So, there's a worthy project for the summer, get your student involved!!

□ Leanne Ward of Cohasset graduated with honors from Bay State Junior College on May 19, 1989. Earning an Associate Degree of Applied Science in Travel and Tourism, Leanne was on the Dean's List for two semesters at Bay State. While attending Bay State she completed an internship at Walt Disney World.

Editorial

The highest honor

It is ironic that, on the eve of the 213th Fourth of July, our own U. S. Supreme Court should give us blanket permission to desecrate the American flag.

The court ruled that Gregory "Joey" Johnson, who claims membership in something called the Revolutionary Communist Youth Brigade, was within his rights as an American when he applied a match to Old Glory to protest Ronald Reagan's nomination at the Republican National Convention in 1984.

"We do not consecrate the flag by punishing its desecration," wrote Justice William J. Brennan in the 5-4 majority opinion, "for in doing so we dilute the freedom that this cherished emblem represents."

The Supreme Court decision has raised a storm of protest, much like its recent rulings on affirmative action and its older judgements on abortion, desgregation and civil rights.

There is even a move afoot for a constitutional amendment that would raise around the flag a legal bulwark against those unhappy folks who would defile it, ironically in the name of the same justice and equality that it strives, not always successfully, to provide.

Granted, some evil things have been done under the Stars and Stripes.

It flew from the masts of slave ships in the early days of the Republic. It was carried by soldiers who massacred Indian women and children at Wounded Knee. Recent memory is still sharp of the flag and its staff used as a lance to attack a black lawyer on the streets of Boston.

But some pretty good – and more lasting – things have been accomplished in the name of the American flag, too. The search for justice and equality, for which the flag-burners ululate so loudly, probably has taken more and longer strides under it than any other national banner.

It was borne by Union troops in the war that saw an end to slavery. It flew over army units that ended the horrors in death camps at Buchenwald and Bergen-Belsen. The best known picture of World War II showed Marines raising the flag on Mount Surabachi so it could inspire their embattled comrades all over the island of Iwo Jima.

The flag was present, in spirit if not in body, when the first planes airlifted supplies to beleaguered West Berlin in 1948, and when President Lyndon B. Johnson signed the Civil Rights Act of 1964, and when Congress undid an old wrong by voting reparations for innocent Japanese-Americans unjustly jailed during World War II.

But, whatever personal feelings of outrage we may entertain, we also believe that the Supreme Court acted correctly in its decision to free the flag-burners.

Far from aiding and abetting and giving comfort to those who would defile the flag, the judgement, however repugnant, may well be the highest honor that could be paid to it.

Ironically – there's that word again – we are sure that the flag-burners, as they celebrate their "victory" over their "oppressors," are not aware of it but, were it not for those who loved their flag enough to fight and die for it, they would not even be able to light the match.

Think about it.

School cuts will be irretrievable

Letters

To the Editor:

Recently leading educators in the state, recipients of Lucretia Crocker fellowships, have gone on record in opposition to state and local tax cuts in education. They are extremely concerned about the devastating effects these cuts will have on the quality of education in Massachusetts.

They have predicted that services to students will be reduced. Due to layoffs of specialists, less instruction will be offered in the areas of art, music, science, health, enrichment and gifted programs. Computer hardware and software purchases will halt and teacher and student training will be frozen at a behind the time level.

The Massachusetts Teachers Association has warned that teacher's working conditions have deteriorated as class sizes increase to as many as forty students in some cities and towns. Teachers are losing their positions and morale among the remaining staff is declining. Students in colleges and universities are avoiding the field of education, therefore depriving our children of bright, innovative and enthusiastic teaching.

Cuts in the state budget will further affect the availability of funds for teacher training, program development, building maintenance and new building.

Existing space problems within many schools are likely to worsen. Libraries have been displaced for classroom conversions. Many school systems including Cohasset face operating libraries without a certified librarian, thus jeopardizing school certifications.

As concerned, educated citizens it would be naive of us to believe that this could never happen in Cohasset, a town whose school system ranks in the top five percent in the state, and in a state that ranks in the top ten in the country. These changes have all taken place during the ten years of Proposition Thirteen in California. And as you might have assumed California, once ranked number seven in the country, is now among the lowest one third in regards to the quality of education.

These alterations and severe cuts are being made now in our schools due to the limitations of a two and one half percent tax increase. Over time these cuts become irretrievable.

The Fishing Line

By Bill Bowers

Bluefish have arrived

Most of us can only dream of fishing like this.

John Novak of Marshfield caught three bragging-size striped bass of 30, 20 and 19 pounds in a single trip to the Cape Cod Canal, reported J & B's Tackle in Green Harbor.

The bass, which were 42, 39 and 37 inches long, all fell for live bait fish.

Mark Amorello of Pembroke took first place in the Green Harbor Tuna Club Masters' Tournament with a top combined weight of 45 pounds, 10 ounces.

Eligible species were cod, pollock, haddock, wolf fish and cusk. Mark weighed in the largest fish he caught of each species to make his winning total.

William Boulter of Pembroke won second prize with a combined weight of 20 pounds, 14 ounces.

And Gene Gaumond of Scituate came in third, with a weight of 17 pounds, 1 ounce.

Captain Tom DePersia of Marshfield, skipper of Big Fish II, had the top weight among the charter boats at 43 pounds, 2 ounces.

Jane Duffy at Mary's Boat Livery in Marshfield reported excellent flounder fishing just inside the mouth of the North River.

Anglers fishing the incoming tide with seaworms or squid cleaned up on flatfish over the weekend, when heavy seas kept most boaters inside.

Some schoolie striped bass have been taken lately near Damon's Point on trolled seaworms.

And there are unconfirmed reports of a keeper being taken off Humarock.

Murdoch Johnson of Cohasset weighed in the first bluefish of the season, a nice catch of 11 pounds, 15 ounces, according to Peter Trask at Trask Tackle in North Scituate.

The chopper took a blue Bomber plug near Minot's Light.

And Scott Lyons of Cohasset had a nice catch of cod he took a few miles out of Scituate.

Jay Hubbard of Marshfield took a trophy striper of 42 pounds, 2 ounces that fell for a live eel fished from a boat off Duxbury.

The fish was weighed in at Adams Tackle in Pembroke.

Bill Smith at Adams also reported a 41-pound cod taken at Stellwagen Bank by Diane Barry of Green Harbor.

Some anglers have taken big pollock to 30 pounds at Stellwagen on trolled umbrella rigs with plastic tubes. Very early morning is the best time.

Some bluefish hit Duxbury and Plymouth beaches sporadically over the weekend. Gibbs, Big O and Sure Strike swimming plugs seem to be the most effective lures, perhaps because they resemble menhaden (pogies).

Speaking of pogies, the state Division of Marine Fisheries has denied permits to three large corporate fish processors who applied for permission to harvest more than 40 metric tons each of the oily bait fish in local waters.

Only smaller local operators will be catching pogies commercially this year, reported Pat Newcomb at Fore River Bait in Quincy.

The recent DMF action means plenty of bait should keep stripers and bluefish around in good numbers this year, she said.

Schoolie striped bass and small bluefish of less than 5 pounds are delighting anglers in the Mystic, Neponset, Fore, Back and Weir rivers.

Boaters are taking good catches of flounder from the triangle between Georges, Gallups and Lovells islands in Boston Harbor.

Cod have mostly moved offshore into colder water, but a few have been caught recently near Black Rock and Hypocrite Channel.

Billington Sea in Plymouth yielded up a trophy 3-pound, 13-ounce pickerel for Chris Ready of Weymouth, reported Bra-Wey Sport Shop in Braintree.

And a secret Carver pond proved productive for Arthur Princiotta of Quincy, who caught a large-mouth bass of 5 pounds, 14 ounces.

Arthur's friend Mark Gianunzio of Mansfield caught a 5-pound, 5-ounce largemouth on the same trip.

Many customers had excellent catches of flounder around the Bug Light over the weekend, according to Evelyn Sarson at Mike's Bait in Kingston.

And a lady angler lost a striper in the 30-pound class that took a piece of cut mackerel at the mouth of the Jones River in Kingston Bay.

Too bad, but at least we know it's still out there.

There are plenty of smaller bass in the Kingston and Plymouth areas, but the mackerel have made themselves scarce.

This is another sign the bluefish have arrived.

Keep those lines in the water.

It was a quiet end for the Old Colony Railroad

By Mila Bates Dixon
Mariner staff

June 30 marks the 30th anniversary of the abandonment of railroad service on the South Shore — the Greenbush, Plymouth and Middleboro lines — by the New Haven Railroad.

The end came without much fanfare.

At South Station in Boston, a laurel funeral wreath was hung on the Atlantic Avenue entrance.

The black-draped wreath with gold lettering read, "Thank you, Governor Furcolo," put up by the Committee for the Retention of Passenger Service, a relatively new organization of railroad employees and commuters, in obvious distress that the governor did not support subsidizing these Old Colony lines.

This wreath was later taped to the last car of a four-car train making a final round trip between South Station and Brockton.

Clarence Lidden of Holbrook was the engineer, and John Hobart Jr. of Braintree was fireman.

Normally, the last round trip was a single Budd car, but the New Haven had put on four coaches to accommodate any "sentimental" riders.

There were about 100 persons aboard, mostly rail buffs. Chalked on the side of one of the cars was written, "Thanks for nothing, Governor Furcolo, Senator Powers and Mayor Hynes and the whole legislators."

(Senator Powers was Senate President John E. Powers and Mayor Hynes was the late Boston Mayor John B. Hynes for whom Hynes Auditorium is named.)

Also chalked on the side of one of the cars was a sign, "If the people wake up, we'll be back."

The last train from Greenbush left at 11:17 p.m.

Known as the South Shore Music Circus train, it had been laying over at Greenbush to wait for the time to return to Cohasset to pick up music circus patrons and actors and actresses to go back to Boston.

When it passed through North Scituate Village, a small group of passengers and fans showed up with a sign bidding farewell.

A trumpeter played taps. People lit flares set up on both sides of the track. Others tooted horns, and more shot off firecrackers.

The last trains out of Greenbush and from Brockton arrived at South Station within five minutes of each other, shortly after midnight July 1, 1959.

Engineer on one of the last day's trains was John C. Hubbard of Marshfield, father of Anna Doherty, a local attorney.

As engineer, Hubbard took the final 8:59 morning train out of Quincy.

An engineer or fireman for the New Haven for 40 years, he said at the time he didn't know what he was going to do, but added, "I may go back to the farm."

Dolly Litchfield, who lives in the former gatehouse of the Thomas W. Lawson estate in Scituate, recalled that her late husband, Frank, had been station master at Cohasset station since 1928 and was on the job the day the last passenger trains ran.

A 40-year veteran with the New Haven Railroad, he was station master for the nine previous years at North Bridgewater, Egypt, Scituate, Cape stations and, finally, Cohasset.

A former Cohasset resident, Mrs. Litchfield didn't recall anything special being done to mark the end of service.

"We all just felt sad it was gone," she said.

In the post-World War I days, she said she worked in Boston and took the 8 a.m. train to work.

From Cohasset, it went to Hingham, and then was express to Boston. The locals' last stop was at Norfolk Downs station in Quincy.

"It was sad to see the trains go, but there was no special farewell at the Egypt station," recalled Marie D. Merritt, now of Scituate's Wheeler Park, whose husband, the late Malcolm Merritt, sold train tickets at the Egypt store he owned.

St. Stephen's Church which overlooks Cohasset Common was one of the first sights passengers saw when they debarked from the train on the Greenbush line.

On the last day scores of school children boarded the late afternoon train at the Scituate railroad station for a free trip to Greenbush.

Their mothers watched them board the train, then drove to Greenbush to meet them.

Margaret Cole Bonney of Scituate, author of My Scituate, recalled that the Old Colony service was a "far cry from what we had when steam trains operated from 1915 to 1925.

"I hadn't bothered to ride on any of the trains that last day," she said.

"It didn't seem worthwhile. Nobody wanted to ride them, they were so dirty, and you couldn't see out the windows," she said.

The South Shore News' Scituate edition carried an editorial, "Goodbye, Old Colony . . . inevitable for a long time."

The following week, the Scituate edition's lead story carried the lengthy headline: "Public Indifference Is Seen Blocking Solution to Shore's Acute Transportation Problem." This had an overline that said, "A Monumental Jam?"

Indicative of the lack of interest in rail service of any kind was the March 1959 town meeting vote "to oppose any further subsidy of the New Haven Railroad's Old Colony lines (Greenbush, Plymouth and Middleboro/Cape Cod) or the Metropolitan Transit Authority or any other electrified system between Scituate and Boston."

On July 1, 1959, the rails were silent.

Photos were loaned by Nathaniel Baker of Marshfield, grandson of the late Nathaniel Tilden of Scituate who served on the first special legislative commission in 1948 "to investigate and study transportation in southeastern Massachusetts."

When the Old Colony arrived

The Old Colony Railroad opened Dec. 10, 1845, between Plymouth and a temporary station in South Boston.

A special excursion train carried many notable passengers, including Daniel Webster and John Quincy Adams.

In May 1847, the line was extended to a new station on Kneeland Street, Boston.

The South Shore Railroad opened in 1849 from the Plymouth line's Braintree station to Cohasset.

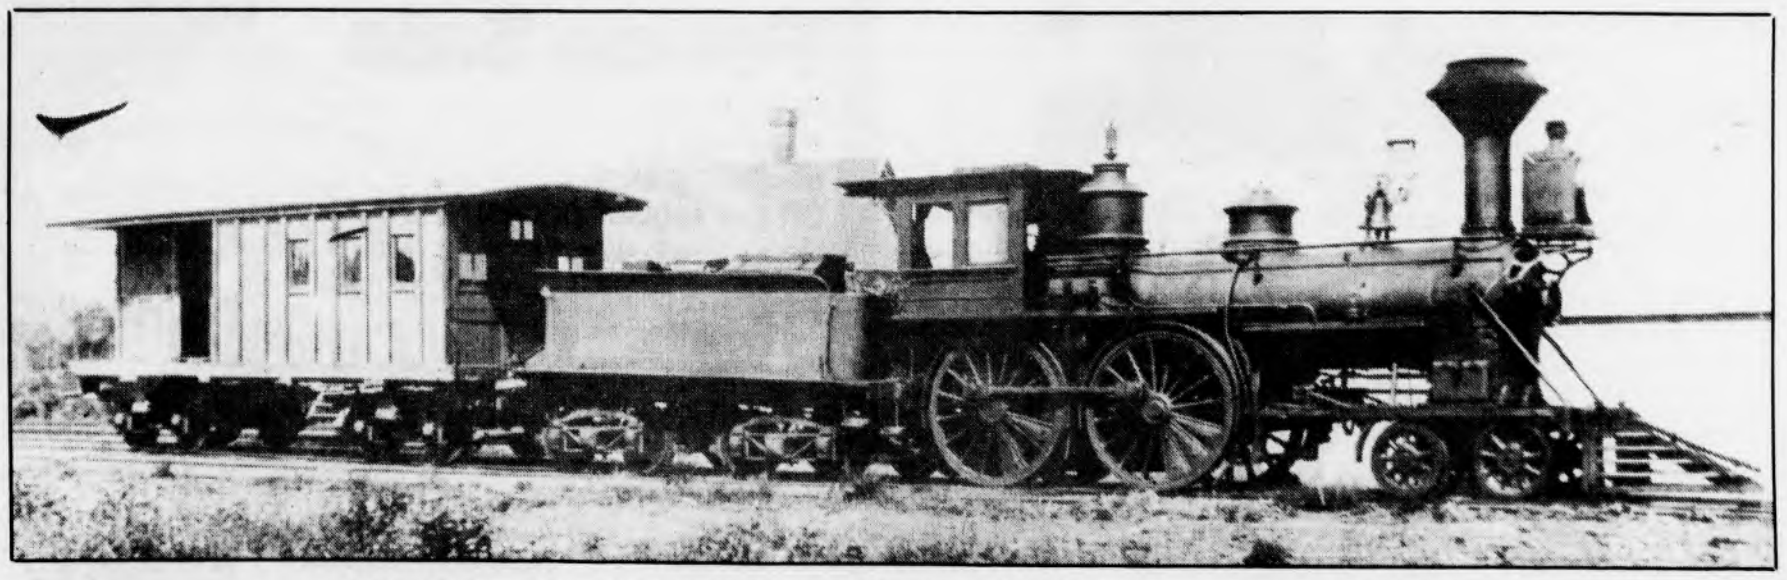
It was leased to and operated by the Old Colony Railroad from 1854 to 1877 when it was sold to the Old Colony.

The 17-1/2-mile Duxbury and Cohasset Railroad was built at a cost of $384,819.06.

Starting at Cohasset, work began Dec. 7, 1870.

The line opened to South Scituate (Greenbush) June 19, 1871; to Marshfield, July 31 and to South Duxbury, Aug. 21.

A three-and-a-half-mile extension to the Plymouth line at Kingston, built for an additional $70,000, opened in the spring of 1874. It was bought by the Old Colony in 1878.



In 1872 the Old Colony took over the Cape Cod Railroad Company that ran from Boston to Provincetown. The only stops were at Brockton, Middleboro, Buzzards Bay and Sandwich.

Scituate was the turnback from about 1880 to 1911 when a new Greenbush terminal opened.

East Marshfield was also a turnback point from about 1880 to 1898. Trains stopped operating to Marshfield in 1939.

In 1893, the Old Colony Railroad, a 600-mile network of rail lines throughout Massachusetts, was absorbed into the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad.

Steam locomotives similar to this model ran on the Old Colony Railroad about 1855.

Cohasset Chamber of Commerce news...

Once upon a time, in a small New England seaside town, a group of Town business people got together to form a group called the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce.

It was a good organization, dedicated to fostering and promoting those things that would help not only their business community, but the community of the Town as a whole. They gave donations to charities and groups within the Town; offered yearly scholarships to High School seniors, underwrote the High School graduation tea, and donated to many Town funds and projects. But most of the townspeople didn't know this. They thought that the Chamber was for business interest only. They never knew about the yearly candidates' nights, the programs run each month as meetings that were open to the public, the efforts to get people to vote in Town elections, no matter what their political views. The Chamber felt badly about this. They felt that the people were missing out on some very good programs and opportunities, simply because they did not know what was offered to them. And so. . . .this column was born.

The Mariner has offered us space to bring you a weekly or bi-weekly column in this space, and we have gratefully accepted. We will try to keep you up to date on what is happening not only in the Chamber of Commerce; but in Cohasset itself. For this week, we have only two things to mention:

1. In September we will be hosting a forum on where our schools are going in the next five years. School Committee members Barbara Bliss and Chris Ford have graciously agreed to join School Superintendent Stephen Hart in answering questions on all of our concerns and needs. We will be submitting the questions to them beforehand, so that they can have all of the facts and figures that they will need with them that night. And we will be soliciting all questions from you, the general public.

2. On July 12, a Wednesday night, from 6 - 9:30 p.m., the chamber will be hosting a "Constitution Picnic on the Common." Everyone is invited to pack a lunch, bring the family and enjoy a great night of speeches, awards, and rousing music performed by the same band that enthralls thousands at Plymouth on the Fourth of July.

For more information on these events, just call the Chamber of Commerce number at 383-1010. Or watch this column next week. We'll tell you a little more then.

Historical Society to sponsor walking tour

Cohasset Historical Society will present two historical walking tours in Cohasset during July.

Sunday, July 9: Walking tour of historic Cohasset Town Common and the nearby village. One of the best examples of an original New England Town Common, Cohasset's Common dates from the year 1670 and embodies three centuries of the history of a small New England seacoast community.

The Colonial Meeting House on the Common will be visited, and a walk around the Common will feature various architectural styles and historical buildings, representing colonial, classical revival and Victorian architecture. Sea Captains' homes, a 19th century town hall, a traditional "frog pond" of glacial origin, and the "ancient way" of North Main Street will be seen. From there the walk will proceed to Cohasset's village center to view numerous early residences and business buildings dating from the 18th and 19th century. Here, the colonial inn, an old blacksmith's shop, and the site of the first railroad will be seen.

Tour ends at the Historical Society's museums at the center, with refreshments. Meet for the walking tour at the First Parish Meeting House on the Common at 3 p.m. Tour guides include Rev. Edward Atkinson who will speak in the 1747 Meeting House, and the Society's Curator who leads the walk at the Common and center village.

Sunday, July 23: Walking tour of historic "Ship Cove" or Cohasset Harbor. Once the center of Cohasset's Cove" extensive seafaring community, Ship Cove was the site of shipyards, fishing wharves, small manufacturing enterprises and mercantile ventures during the two centuries of America's great "Age of Sail". This was a codfish and mackerel port, and home of numerous "Deep Sea Captains". The town's mackerel industry once ranked high among Massachusetts seacoast communities and its economy was based upon its fishing ventures.

The walking tour of Ship Cove will visit many of the sites associated with Cohasset's maritime past, and will follow the town's "Captains' Walk" along the edge of the harbor. Also included will be a stop at historic Government Island, once the Shore Station Facility for the offshore lighthouse at Minot's Ledge, where the unusual history of that famous lighthouse will be explored.

This walking tour meets at 3 p.m. at Veterans' Park, located at the head of the Cove (near the motel). Tour guides include Charles Fink, President of the Historical Society, and the Society's Curator. Both historical walking tours are free of admission charge, and donations will be accepted by the Society.

For further information the Historical Society may be contacted at 383-6930.

Society to hold boat tour

"Minot's Light Revisited II," a trip to and around the historic offshore lighthouse 2 1/2 miles off the Cohasset shore, will be presented by the Cohasset Historical Society Sunday, August 6.

The world-famous 114' high granite light, completed in 1860, recently has been undergoing its first major renovation, with the reconstruction of its topmost granite-walled section, the Watch Room.

The project to replace broken stone blocks of the Watch Room led to a complete disassembly of Minot's top section. New stone was carefully cut to reconstruct the original Watch Room, and original bronze parts of the Lantern Room, dome, globe, railing and spire were saved to be used again in the reconstruction.

Last year's Society tour "Minot's Light Revisited" saw the lighthouse with its entire top missing, awaiting reassembly. This summer's boat tour to the immediate vicinity of the imposing granite structure will see the reconstruction work completed, and Minot's once again appearing as it has for over a century and a quarter.

As in last summer's Historical Society boat tour a charter boat, the "Seabreeze," will come to Cohasset Harbor for the tour. "Seabreeze" is one of the regular Boston Harbor charter vessels, of small enough size and light enough draft to utilize Cohasset's Government Island pier to take aboard and discharge tour passengers. Passenger capacity aboard "Seabreeze" is strictly limited, so advance reservations will be a must.

Because of limited seating, there will be four separate sections signing up for the tour; "Seabreeze" will leave Government Island on the hour at 1 p.m., 2 p.m., 3 p.m. and 4 p.m. Those wishing to make reservations should specify which hour they are reserving for their tour.

Parking for the tour will be at St. Anthony's Church parking lot, with a shuttle going to and from the harbor. Additionally, there will be an exhibit of lighthouse-related materials at the Society's Caleb Lothrop House, adjacent to St. Anthony's parking lot, and refreshments will be available at the house, following the tour.

Reservations may be made by contacting the Cohasset Historical Society, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset, 02025. The Society's telephone is (617) 383-6930. On the tour and ashore, commentary will be supplied by Society members. Details of reservation cost will be announced soon.

August 6 is being celebrated nationwide as "National Lighthouse Day", marking the Bicentennial of American lighthouses as well as the 200th Anniversary of the United States Coast Guard.

UP-COMING PROGRAMS

Hingham Visiting Nurse & Community Services, Inc. will be hosting a Cholesterol Screening on Thursday, July 6 from 3 to 6 p.m. at 10 Downers Ave., Hingham, across from the police station.

This screening is performed with a very small amount of blood taken via finger prick. Results are available in 3 minutes. No need to fast prior to the screening.

The American Heart Association recommends that every adult over 30 know his or her blood level, since high cholesterol is one of the three main causes of heart disease, still the number one (1) killer in this country.

Hingham Visiting Nurses will provide information on cholesterol, and will discuss the ways to help control it through your diet, lifestyle, exercise and medications. Cost is $6 per person.

Summer reading program for children

The Paul Pratt Library announces the following summer programs:

For children ages 3 1/2 to 5, there will be a summer story hour on Friday mornings at 10 a .m., from July 7 through August 11. This consists of 45 minutes of stories, songs, fingerplays, and projects. No registration required.

A new story program will also be held for toddlers, ages 18 months to 3 years. This is a program for children accompanied by a parent. It will be held on Thursday mornings at 10 a.m., July 6 through August 10. No registration required.

Older children of elementary school age are invited to participate in the summer reading program, "An Asian Adventure." Ask the librarians for details.

Students completing grade 6 are invited to join the children's librarians and Mrs. Murphy, Deer Hill School librarian, for "Rad Reads," a reading discussion group to meet at the library on Monday or Tuesday evenings throughout the summer. Ask for details at the library.

In addition to these regularly scheduled activities, the Library is pleased to offer a series of three delightful family programs by guest storyteller Karen Wesoloski. "Bedtime Stories" will be on Tuesday evenings, July 11, July 25, and August 8, beginning at 7 p.m.

Also, take a moment to check out the on-going display of Reading Rainbow books in the Children's Room and the new Parenting shelf. Cohasset residents are reminded that they may borrow a free family pass to the Children's Museum, the Museum of Science, the New England Aquarium, the Museum of Fine Arts, and Plimoth Plantation.These library memberships are a gift of the Friends of the Cohasset Library.

Call the library, 383-1348.

CHS student of the month Scott Molinari

Student of the month

Scott Molinari, an 11th grader at Cohasset High School, was selected as student of the month for May.

Molinari was nominated by teacher Florence Kealey.

"Since Scott arrived at Cohasset High School, he has made outstanding progress in all sports played in physical education classes," said Kealey.

"His hard work has paid off in his improvement in skill level in softball, badminton, tennis and soccer.

"Scott has always been available to help Mr. Chatterton and Mr. Fallon with various jobs in the athletic department - whether it be cleaning supply closets or lugging equipment from field to field."

Kealey said the most outstanding aspect of Molinari's achievements are in the area of teamwork and good humor toward his teammates.

"His dependability and dedication to whatever activities he participates in should be an inspiration to other C.H.S. students," she said.

"Scott is a legend when it comes to wrestling knowledge and can be found raving about the latest Wrestlemania event, etc. with 'the guys' or flying through town at top speed on his bike."

These are the Cohasset High students named to the division All Star soccer team; (front row, l to r) Jen Reidy, Dan Baird, Mike Reynolds; (back) Bill Baird, Jen Plante, Catie Beggan and Sophie Redfield. Jim Reidy was named to the state All Star team. Also named to the divisional team, but not shown in photo: Erin Murphy, Corey DeSantis, Katie Lord, Charlie Endris, Chris Kondrat, Matt Beggan and Jay Staunton. (Staff photo/Buzz Wadsworth)

CHS graduate Amy Hobbs was presented with a $1,000 scholarship from (l) Edward Taylor and (r) Woodrow P. Swancutt, Major General USAF (ret.) of the Pilgrim Arena Skating Arena in Hingham.

Kate Carroll was named to the state soccer All Star team. Also named to the state team were Travis Coley and Jimmy and Joel Reidy.

Weddings/engagements

Mrs. Leo Meehan

Meehan/Godwin

Sara V. Godwin recently became the bride of Leo J. Meehan III during a wedding ceremony at First Parish in Cohasset.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Edward T. Atkinson, First Parish minister, and Fr. Henry Nurre of Glastonbury Abbey, Hingham.

The bride is the daughter of Phyllis P. Godwin of Marina Bay, formerly of Hingham, and Joseph F. Godwin of Brookline.

A 1982 graduate of Hingham High School, she was also graduated from Ethel Walker School, Simsbury, Conn., in 1983.

She has returned to Wheaton College, Norton, to complete her bachelor of arts degree.

The bridegroom is the son of Leo J. Meehan, Jr., of Squantum.

A 1971 graduate of Boston College High School, and 1975 graduate of Stonehill College, he is vice president of W.B. Mason Co., Brockton.

Maid of honor was Valia Godwin of Quincy. Bridesmaids were Gail Meehan of Watertown, Gioia Danesi of Boston and Loren Berard of West Bridgewater.

Flower girl was Zoe Meehan Murray of Newton.

Ring bearer was Nicholas V. Palmer of Dubuque, Iowa.

Best man was Christopher Meehan of Squantum. Ushers were Robert L. Palmer, Jr., and Thomas Behena, both of Boston, Kevin O'Connor of Hermosa Beach, Calif., Brian Gaffney of Dallas, Texas; Walter Keeley and Robert Kustka, both of Norwell.

A reception was held at the Cohasset Golf Club.

After a wedding trip to Hawaii and Pebble Beach, Calif., the newlyweds are living in Cohasset.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Karski

Karski/Plante

Anna M. Plante and Mark A. Karski were married recently during a wedding ceremony at St. Anthony's Church.

The Rev. Edward D. McCabe officiated.

A Papal blessing was bestowed on the couple from the Vatican in Rome.

The bride, who wore her mother's wedding gown, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Plante of Jerusalem Road, Cohasset.

A graduate of Cohasset High School and Southeastern Massachusetts University with a BA degree, she was formerly employed at BayBanks, Boston.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Karski of Mentor, Ohio.

A graduate of Perdue University with a BS degree, he is employed as a chemical engineer with Industrial Risk Insurers of Ohio.

Maid of honor was Jacqueline M. Plante of Cohasset. Bridesmaid was Jennifer M. Plante.

Best man was Scott McCollister of Mentor, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. James M. Brown Jr.

Ushers were Donald Merrill of Mentor, and Patrick A. Plante, Jr., of Cohasset.

A reception was held at the Golden Rooster, North Scituate.

After a wedding trip to Pebble Beach, Calif., the newlyweds are living in Willoughby, Ohio.

Brown/Ingemi

Karen L. Ingemi recently became the bride of James M. Brown, Jr., during a wedding ceremony at St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset.

The Rev. John J. Keohane officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony F. Ingemi of Cohasset.

A graduate of Cohasset High School and Endicott College, she is employed as a travel consultant at Ask Mr. Foster Travel.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Brown of Dartmouth.

A graduate of Cohasset High School and the University of New Haven, he is employed as a sales representative for Johnson Corrugated.

Maid of honor was Lynn Ingemi of Cohasset. Bridesmaids were Donna Vivado of Dartmouth, Kimberly Smith of Randolph, Ruthann Turner of Scituate and Heidi Brown-Silverstein of Oak Park, Il.

Best man was Mark Brown of Cohasset. Ushers were David Murphy and Charles Coe, both of Cohasset; and Mark Silverstein of Oak Park, Il.

A reception was held at the Holiday Inn, Rockland.

After a Caribbean cruise, the newlyweds are living in Hingham.

SUMMER CHURCH SCHOOL -

A Summer session of church school, one class for all ages, will begin in July and continue through August. The children will meet in the Watermelon Room at 10 a.m. on Sundays and join the worship in church at communion.

Taught by men of the parish, the curriculum is a take-off on Star Trek. It is called Joy Trek, a journey with Jesus in space and time, and includes Bible study and crafts.

STEWARDSHIP COMMITTEE

Under the leadership of Senior Warden Dave Pottenger, a year-round stewardship committee has formed including Beth Jordan, Ron Blain, Dick Cook, Bob Dick, and Billie Berents. Because the stewardship program is year-round, it will have more integrity and broaden beyond the fall's pledging of money to emphasize the giving of time and talent as well.

THANKS TO TEACHERS

Our thanks to all the teachers who made this church school year so special. They gave of their time and energy to pass along the greatest gift of faith to our young people. Thanks to Ron and Mim Miller in the Nursery; to Sarah Pease and Wendy Lanoue in Kindergarten; to Julia Drybanski, Betty Madden, Judy Simons, Elaine Smoot, Helen Hooper, and Alix White in the Primary Class; and Wallace and Nancy St. John and Mary Margaret Senechal in the Intermediate Class.

CHECK STATEMENTS OF GIVING

Statements of what you give to the church are sent our quarterly. We ask that you check these and do not hesitate to call our Assistant Treasurer, Ron Blain, (383-1089) if you have any questions. Some pledge envelopes were printed with indistinct numbering and we need your help to be sure all gifts are credited properly.

MARK YOUR CALENDARS

The parish picnic, which is always a highlight of the year, will take place on Sunday, September 24, at Fran Wakeman's after church.

A look at the arts during the summer festival

Little Kelly Marshall found this marble maize an interesting craft at the art center festival held on the common last weekend.

Jane Avery and Diane and Lindsay High admire the artwork on display last weekend on Cohasset Common.

Art center board of directors member Chris Rifkin presents a watercolor by M. Lizotte to happy raffle winner Julie Guild of Cohasset.

Brian Fair and Matt Stone admire the Best of Show awards in the high school category at the summer festival. The work was done by Rockland student Brian McKenna.

Women of the First Parish performed a morning song during the arts center festival on the common Sunday morning.

There was quite a crowd attracted to the art and craft exhibits which lined the common throughout last weekend.

Picnic on the common

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will host a "Constitution Picnic on the Common" Wednesday night, July 12, from 6 to 9:30 p.m. on Cohasset Common.

A Boy Scout color guard and a proclamation by Selectman and Cohasset Historian Bert Pratt will begin the night. The winners of the Osgood School third grade "Bill of Rights" art contest will be presented with $25. Savings Bonds; and their work will be on display for everyone to enjoy.

The Chamber invites everyone to sit back and enjoy a band concert presented by the South Concert Band which will conclude with a rousing medley of John Philip Sousa's Patriotic marches. Everyone is invited to bring a picnic, the family, and their favorite blanket or lawn chairs, and join in this old fashioned patriotic family affair.

Summer art courses for kids

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, is sponsoring a series of summer courses for the young artist.

T-Shirt and Sneaker Painting Workshop — taught by Janet Amiri, a one day workshop for grades 2 to 6 will meet Saturday, July 8 from 1 to 4 p.m. Decorate sneakers or T-shirts with Tulip Paints in this just-for-fun workshop.

Wheel for Kids — taught by George Dalton, a four week course for grades 5 to 9 will meet Fridays from 4 to 5:30 p.m. Learn the skills and techniques of how a real potter throws clay.

New to the course schedule this year is a summer art week for Kindergarteners. Discovering Dinosaurs, taught by Linda Stevens will meet 10 to 11 a.m. daily for the week of July 10 to 14. Take a trip far back in time and meet the gentle giants that roamed the earth! Create dinosaurs with murals, clay and mixed media. For grades 1 to 3, there are two courses. Outdoor Drawing & Painting, taught by Lis Wyman will meet 3:30 to 5 p.m. for the week of July 10 to 14. Be a real artist working outdoors doing drawing, painting and mixed media projects. Blastoff to Outer Space, taught by Linda Stevens will meet 3:30 to 5 p.m. at the sattelite location in Weymouth the week of July 10 to 14. Create creatures and space craft of your own design by painting, drawing, collage and 3-D assemblage. For grades 4 to 6, there are also two courses for the same week of July 10 to 14.

Fantastic Sculptures in Clay — taught by Nancy Connolly will meet daily 3:30 to 5 p.m. Studying natural and fantastic forms and working from their own original sketches, students will construct sculptures using clay, wire forms and armatures. Cartooning, taught by Serena Brundige will meet 3:30 to 5 p.m. for the week of July 10 to 14. Students will have the opportunity to create and design their own flip books and comic strips in pen and ink.

In addition to the course schedule, The South Shore Art Center and the Cohasset Community Center offers two, two-week sessions (July 17-28 and July 31-August 11) of SUMMER ARTS CAMP 1989 — CHINA. The camp meets daily from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Discover the cultural heritage of China through the arts. Hands-on camp projects and activities for all ages 6 to 12 will focus on China's rich cultural traditions and inspired imagination and creativity. August courses including photography are also available! Registration is open and encouraged to hold a place for your young artist.

For more information or to register, call the South Shore Arts Center daily 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 383-9548.

Taverna celebrating July 1-4

The Panagia Greek Orthodox Church will be celebrating its eighth annual Taverna, a festival of Greek food and entertainment, on the July 4 weekend.

The hours are Saturday July 1, Sunday July 2 and Monday July 3 from 11:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. and Tuesday July 4 from 11:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. rain or shine.

A wide assortment of Greek food and pastries will be served continuously, including souvlakia, moussaka, spankopita, roast lamb and gyros. For that sweet tooth, there's baklava, diples, loukoumades (honey puffs) or galactobouriko (custard in filo pastry) and other traditional Greek pastries. A cookbook of "Treasured Recipes" will be on sale.

Live entertainment featuring The Olympians will be performed on Saturday and Tuesday.

Sunday, the music of Costas Taslis & Company will fill the air and on Monday, Jim Skourides will perform. There will also be an exhibition of ethnic dancing at Taverna '89.

The boutique will offer many Greek products, and there will be raffle drawings on Tuesday.

The Panagia Church grounds are located at 817 Jerusalem Road near Route 228. Admission is free. For more information call 383-6380.

Openings in nursery school

There are openings in the following Cohasset Community Center Nursery School classrooms: Nursery, two-day class, Tues. & Thurs. 9 - 11:30 a.m.; Pre-K, three-day class, Tues. - Thurs. 12:30 - 3 p.m.; Pre-K, four-day class, Mon. - Thurs. 12:30 - 3 p.m. The school day incorporates physical, social, emotional, and cognitive well-being through activities and play situations which allow for the development and strengthening of these skills within a peer grouping.

The two-day nursery class is for children who will be three years old by September 30. The classroom has a maximum of 13 children with two teachers.

It evolves in a loosely-structured environment which includes free play, music and role playing, stories, art experiences and outdoor play. Cognitive skills are introduced as well as fine and gross motor co-ordination, all of which are brought forth in children's exploration of their environment. The main goal of the Nursery program is to provide an environment in which the children will feel safe, comfortable and trusting; able to express themselves, and build healthy relationships and attitudes towards adults and their peers.

The Pre-Kindergarten programs are for four year-olds. These programs continue and expand on the format of the Nursery program with the same philosophy as stated above.

The four-day program offers a nice transition between nursery and kindergarten as the number of sessions increases and there is special attention focused on the development of fine and gross motor skills, language and creative expression, and the enhancement of visual perception in readiness for kindergarten.

Velma Begley will be teaching this class once again, which will have a total enrollment of 10 children. Mrs. Begley is an extremely creative teacher with a strong background in nature, science and the arts.

The three-day program will have a maximum of 15 children with two teachers. The talented team of Weezee Wells and Cissie Cullivan will be returning to teach this class again.

Questions regarding placement may be answered by the C.C.C.N.S. Director, Lynne Sheridan or the C.C.C. Program Director, Judy Volungis. Please call 383-0036 or 383-0088.

The Cohasset Community Center Nursery School is licensed by The Office for Children.

Taverna to be televised

Hull Community Television will provide live coverage of the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church's annual Taverna. The special will be presented on Continental Cablevision Channel 53 in Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate Saturday, July 1 at 5 p.m.

This year's Taverna is being billed as a Greek celebration of American independence. The community television coverage is being organized by producer Henry Daily, a long-time volunteer at HC-TV, and will be hosted by Sherry Campbell of "In the Wings" and Leslie Ashfield Moore of "Newsbeat 53."

Several cable television volunteers will be involved in the telecast of this year's festival, which will also be held Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday at the Church in Cohasset.

Music circus registrations

The second Music Circus registration will be held Thursday, July 6, from 9 a.m. to 12 noon and again from 6 to 7:30 p.m.

This registration is for "Jack and the Beanstalk" to be held Thursday, July 20. Consult the summer flier for all details.

All tickets are $3.75 and registrations will be held at the recreation office during the above hours each Thursday, for the next five Thursdays always registering for shows two weeks ahead of the show date.

Checks for payment must be made payable to: "Town of Cohasset."

The summer flier and the playground special event flier contains essential information necessary for registration data. Should you need that information, please see Ted at the playground or stop by the office at Town Hall.

Swim center open for season

The Cohasset Swim Center opened Saturday, June 17 with a schedule of programs under director Abbie White and her staff.

The programs include: Red Cross Swimming, Swim Team, Adult Lessons, Adapted Aquatics Cookouts, Water Babies, Family Outings and more.

Membership fees are as follows: family $25; adult single $75; jr. single $50; sr. citizens, $45.

Smaller override wins, police contract is denied

defeated, was met with an ominous silence from a crowd of about 50 residents who waited anxiously at the town hall. When she told the audience that question two was successful, there was a round of thunderous applause and gleeful shouts by many school committee members, teachers, and PSO representatives waiting for the election results.

Following the reading of the override results, school committee chairman Barbara Bliss said she was pleased that at least one general budget override was successful. "I think it shows that this town cares about its schools. Cutting $250,000 from our budget will be difficult, but not as difficult as $400,000," she said.

The $5 million school budget was slated to be cut by $400,000 if the two general override questions were defeated this week. That reduction translated into some 13 teachers and school staff members, and deep cuts in the athletic, transportation and supply accounts.

Bliss said it was too early to say exactly how many teachers will be eliminated from the staff with the $250,000 budget reduction.

The only other successful override question on Wednesday's ballot was a debt exclusion for a $7,500 defibrillator for the fire department ambulance. That question passed by a 1,334 to 1,109 margin.

Every other question on the ballot, including debt exclusions for the design of a town cemetery, engineering of Milliken/Lillard fields, and the replacement of the old town hall roof, were defeated. Voters also said no to the removal of an underground storage tank at the fire department for a cost of $10,000.

Selectman Burt Pratt said the defeated articles will have to be reconsidered once again at a town meeting, but he noted there was no urgency.

How the override will effect municipal services

Town hall to close one day per week

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Town hall will be closed to the public one day a week as a result of budget cuts necessitated by last week's election.

And the fire department will probably have to cut back on the number of people it has on duty at one time.

Those are some of the ramifications of the June 28 special election in which about half of Cohasset's registered voters cast a ballot.

Residents voted to override Proposition 2 1/2 by $203,800, softening the blow to budgets that would otherwise have been devastated.

They had the option of approving a $303,800 override, but instead chose the smaller amount, adding about 36 cents to the tax rate.

The $203,800 override had been recommended by the advisory committee, and budgets were adjusted to reflect that amount.

But it appears that at least $64,348 more in cuts will have to be made to fund the police contract which has been signed and ratified by the police union and selectmen.

The only other ballot question which passed was for a $7,500 defibrillator for the fire department ambulance.

A special town meeting will have to be held to rescind the bond issues for the defeated articles.

Town clerk Frances Marks said that a special town meeting can be called by selectmen on their own motion, or by a petition of 200 voters or 20 percent of the registered voters.

The meeting would take place within 45 days of the date it is called.

Selectman chairman Burt Pratt said that he was "mildly surprised" that the lower override amount passed.

Milliken repairs far from dead

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

It appears that plans to renovate the town's athletic fields may forge ahead, despite a rejection by voters last week to finance the project.

At the June 28 special override election, voters overwhelmingly defeated a $280,000 renovation project for the Milliken/Lillard athletic fields. But that has yet to deter the committee which has labored over the plans for the past two years.

According to committee chairman Wayne Sawchuk, there still may be some life left in the plans that have twice met with town meeting approval. "The question that remains now is, what did the voters of this town actually mean when they defeated the capital override question last week. I believe they are opposed to exempting the project from the two and a-half percent tax increase. By their two town meeting approvals, I believe they are saying they still want the project, but they want to take the money from the town budget."

He noted, "If that's the wish of the town, then I say, let's go forward with this project." That is his personal feeling, and does not necessarily reflect the sentiment of the entire study committee, he added.

The Milliken/Lillard field study committee is planning to meet Thursday, July 13. At that time, the members will decide whether to proceed with the renovations. The next step will be finalizing the engineering reports and putting separate phases of the project out to bid.

Those bids will be forwarded to selectmen who will then award contracts to the low bidders.

Sawchuk estimated that the 10-acre site will be cleared this fall, with renovations to begin sometime in the winter. If construction proceeds

Police are confident pay raises will be there this week

A fatter paycheck is expected this week by Cohasset's police officers, despite a denial by voters to finance that salary hike.

"The town has to honor the signed contract," Cohasset Police Association President Richard Abbadessa said last week following the defeat of the $65,000 override necessary to fund their six percent payraise. That increase is retroactive from July 1, 1988 . "Whether this town wanted it or not, we are getting our payraise this week. It will be in our checks, no doubt about it."

Town officials agree the contract must be honored, but they are in a quandry trying to locate an extra $65,000 within the town's sparse budget.

Selectmen are expected to decide at their July 10 meeting where the $65,000 will be taken from the town's budget.

Union president Abbadessa, who celebrates his 18th year on the force this week, said he was surprised by last week's override defeat.

"I know a lot of people in this town. I like to think I have a lot of friends. But I can't understand why this was defeated. It wasn't even a close vote - that's what hurts so much," he said.

Sgt. Brian Noonan, another veteran of the department, said many residents may not have understood the legality of that particular override. The contract, he explained, is a legal document agreed to and ratified by the town and the police association. The town is legally obligated to fund the entire amount.

He noted that the contract passed without objection or question at the May 31 special town meeting.

"It's too bad, but Proposition 2 1/2 is alienating department against department in this town. We're being pitted against the fire department and the school department and everyone else.

"I heard some people say they were going to defeat every override. They didn't even take each question into consideration - they voted against everything," he said.

Sgt. Abbadessa, a gas station owner for 24 years until he sold the business, said it is impossible to

Schools deciding how to cut budget

The School Committee is scheduled to vote Monday night, July 10, on $250,000 worth of cuts in the school budget of $5,576,783.

And though the cuts won't be easy to make, they will be less difficult than if voters had not passed a $203,800 override last month.

A higher override figure of $303,800, proposed by the school committee, was defeated by voters.

The $203,800 override means that 4.4 teaching positions will be cut, instead of 9.9 which would have been cut with no override, according to School Supt. Stephen Hart.

"We hope to retain five and a half teaching positions as a result of the override," he said.

In addition, plans call for the elimination of two aides and a custodian throughout the system, he said.

Hart said that the proposed cuts will be made on the basis of such things as seniority and needs in the system.

Teachers who may be let go have been notified, he said.

"It's been hard for the people on staff," he said."They don't know whether they will be coming back."

Other proposed cuts include $40,000 from the transportation budget.

"We have had six bus routes," explained Hart, "we will have four in the fall.

"We will have to try to redo some of the routes, and some kids will have to walk. Others will go to a central pick-up."

The athletics department is scheduled for a $50,000 cut, according to Hart.

"We are going to try to raise some money from user fees," he said. "We haven't decided on the cost.

"We also hope to have a fundraiser by the booster groups."

There will also be reductions in certain sports, according to Hart.

They will include assistant coaches, he said.

Handicapped spaces found

Safety officer Clifton B. Jones has written to selectmen about what he feels are two suitable locations for consideration as handicapped parking areas.

The first area is South Main St. at the intersection of Depot Court, in front of the old South Shore National Bank.

"The handicapped parking spot would be the first 1 and 1/2 parking spots south of the pedestrian crosswalk on South Main St., at Depot Court," said Jones.

The second area would be in front of Watson's Hardware Store.

It would be the first 1 and 1/2 parking spots south of the pedestrian crosswalk on South Main at Elm St., according to Jones.

He said that Massachusetts General Law specifies the layout of the handicapped parking areas.

The areas, he said, must be "12 feet in width, identified by a sign with white letters against a blue background and which bears the words Handicapped Parking and the curb should be removed and a berm placed making it accessible to wheelchairs, etc. Also, the handicapped parking spot should bear the handicapped logo painted or stamped on the street surface."

Jones said that, at the request of selectmen,he met on numerous occasions with selectmen Rocco Laugelle and Highway Supt. Harold Litchfield to discuss handicapped parking in the square.

"We have, in our opinion, found two suitable locations to be considered to be designated as handicapped parking areas," Jones said.

Repairs needed at polls

Cohasset's voting booths are in deplorable condition, according to Town Clerk Frances Marks, who has asked selectmen if the town will pay to repair them.

She said there is no money in her budget for such repairs.

"During the last two elections, one of the booths fell apart and dropped the voting machine on the floor," said Marks.

"I would like to know if it is possible if M.C.I. could repair the machines after this election and have them back by the first of next year.

"When these machines were bought in 1978-1979, we had to have a certain percentage of machines compared to the number of registered voters.

"We presently lack 12 booths which means we are unable to use 12 machines.Also, since that time we have increased in the number of registered voters.

"We need to have these booths, as well as the ones we are now using, repaired," she said.

"As you are aware, there is no money in the budget (especially after the 9 percent cut) to have them repaired."

Delay in record-keeping

Cohasset residents will no longer be able to obtain a birth, marriage or death certificate while they wait in the town clerk's office at town hall.

The change is a consequence of budget cuts, according to town clerk Frances Marks.

"Due to a decrease in office staff, we will have forms available and we will fill the requests at our first convenience," said Marks.

The certificates will be mailed out or residents may pick them up, she said.

"We will be as obliging as we can",said Marks,"but we won't be able to do them in a day.

"It will take a couple of days now."

Sanchez offers resignation

Israel M. Sanchez, Jr., has resigned as a member of the Cohasset Housing Partnership.

In a letter to selectmen and to the housing partnership chairman, Sanchez said he was resigning because of "increased demands, both professionally and personally, upon my time."

"My involvement over the past year in the local housing partnership has been gratifying and not without excitement," said Sanchez.

"I have enjoyed working with my fellow members on the local housing partnership, and the opportunity to meet with, and work with, other town boards and committees including,of course, the board of selectmen."

Revolving fund created

The Massachusetts House and Senate have passed an act authorizing Cohasset to establish a revolving fund for monies received by the town from septage haulers permit fees.

The funds, and interest accrued, will be expended under the direction of the board of health for charges by the Upper Black Water Pollution Abatement District for the disposal of septage from Cohasset.

The information was sent to the town by Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray.

. . . Cohasset's week

New chairman elected

F. Roy Fitzsimmons of Doane St. was recently elected chairman of the town government structure committee.

Wilson H. Pile of Elm St. was elected secretary.

Recycling center news

The Cedar Street Recycling Transfer Facility has new days of operation. Trash can be disposed on Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. only.

Our special brush disposal program will end Friday, June 30. No brush will be accepted thereafter. Please plan accordingly. Only homeowners are allowed to bring their brush to the site.

Facility stickers are now being sold at the town hall. Permits are valid from July 1 to June 30. They can be purchased on the first floor of the new addition of the town hall Monday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Thursday from 6 to 8 p.m., Friday from 9 a.m. to noon and Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon. Proof of residency is required.

A new sticker will be required to gain admittance to the landfill as of July 1. The landfill supervisor plans to check stickers.

Chamber art contest winners

There were eight winners of the Chamber of Commerce's "Bill of Rights" art contest held recently at the Joseph Osgood School.

All members of the third grade classes were eligible to enter, and the winners will be presented with $25 Savings Bonds at the "Constitution Picnic" to be held July 12 from 6 to 9:30 p.m., on Cohasset Common.

The winners are: Ted Reardon, Patrick Hurley, Geneva McPhail, Katie Buckley, Paul Sheerin, Greg Bilton, Megan Conley, Adam Sheerin.

The Chamber of Commerce would like to thank Osgood School principal Jack Creamer and all of his staff and teachers for their effort and support of this contest. All the entries were marvelous, and we hope that we can make this an annual event.

The winning pictures will be on display on the common during the picnic July 12 from 6 to 9:30 p.m., and many of the other entries will be on display in the windows of the area stores from July 6 to July 12.

Local volunteers are honored

Local volunteer drivers who made 20 or more trips in the past year for cancer patients needing treatment, were singled out for special awards ceremony sponsored by the Service Committee of the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society.

These drivers regularly provide transportation for patients in several South Shore towns. Drivers are assigned by a staff of the Cancer Hotline on request by social workers, health agencies or patients' families.

Carolyn Housman of Hingham, chairman of the Service Committee, presented the awards. A first time award went to David Chittim of Cohasset. A repeat award was given to Ray Remick of Cohasset.

The Service Committee welcomes new recruits to its corps of drivers and can explain workings of the program through a call to 749-2535.

Marsac makes All Star

Linc Marsac, 16, son of Lucille and Tim Marsac of Cohasset, is a member of the Eastern Massachusetts Junior Olympics boy's basketball team which will be competing for the national championship July 9 to 15 at the University of Kentucky.

Marsac, who plays quick forward and guard, will be a junior at Cohasset High School in the fall.

He was captain of the basketball team last year.

Cohasset High School's varsity basketball coach Arnie Reppucci will be coaching the team.

"It's an all star team of boys from all over Eastern Massachusetts," said Reppucci.

"Tryouts were held in April, and there were 200 entrants. Fifteen of them will be going to the national championship."

Summer programs in peril

Regional school committee members are worried that the state's deficit will result in the end of four summer programs geared towards developing work experience for handicapped and disadvantaged youths. The committee is reluctant to open the doors to the programs in fear that they will not be able to make the budget commitments.

The programs were reimbursed through the Job Training Partnership and the state in previous years.

Interior LifeStyles® DECORATING

America Decorates

Today, the majority (61%) of wives work outside the home. Our hetic lifesyle is reflected in lively combinations of color, pattern and texture.

When asked what aspects of decorating offer the most impact for the dollar, I offer these three hopefully helpful hints:

Carpeting, often the last consideration, should be among the first as it provides the largest expanse of color and texture in a room.

Prints deliver the "designer look" that makes any room a hit. Although many high-risk business people are positively frightened of prints, they are road maps to decorating.

Finally, window treatments, often the key focal point, aren't purely decorative. They offer energy conservation, light control and privacy.

Draperies unify a room's walls, ceiling and floors with its furnishings. No other article of home furnishing permits the latitude for drama and the possibilities for color and beauty.

One overriding consideration is that family budget. Some fundamental planning, a little imagination and a lot of discussion can avoid costly mistakes and hours wasted on those tiny swatches in all those stores.

Town hall to close one day per week . . .

"I thought perhaps both overrides would have gone," said Pratt. "In that case, the higher dollar value would have gone into effect.

"But I had also been hearing a lot of negative talk about the overrides.

"I am absolutely not disappointed that we are getting something to work with," he added.

Cuts in the budgets of departments under the control of selectmen will be made in overtime and hours of employees, according to Pratt.

For example, overtime will be cut from the wire department and tree and park department, according to Pratt.

He said he didn't think the cuts in the tree and park department would be that evident to residents who drive past town grounds.

"He (the superintendent) will just have to plan his time a little better," said Pratt.

"I don't think there will be a big difference in the way the lawns look."

Selectmen will discuss at their July 10 meeting which day of the week town hall should be closed to the public.

At earlier selectmen meetings, Wednesday was mentioned as the slowest day of the week.

"There will be employees here five days a week," explained Pratt. "But they won't be answering the phones or dealing with the public for one day.

"With the cut back in staff (hours), they will use that day to catch up on work.

"I'm sorry to see any of these things happen," he said. "We won't be able to give taxpayers what they are used to getting.

"But apparently by the vote (at the special election) they don't care about those services."

Pratt added that he was "mystified" that residents voted against funds for design of a new town cemetery.

"I don't see the reasoning on that," he said. "We won't have any place to bury people."

Due to cut backs in employee hours, birth, marriage or death certificates will no longer be available while residents wait in the town clerk's office.

"We will mail out the certificates, or people can pick them up," said Marks. "We will be as obliging as we can, but it won't be done in a day anymore. It will probably take a couple of days now."

Selectmen were scheduled to continue budget cutting talks with Fire Chief Daniel Brock Wednesday evening, July 5, in executive session.

The two parties talked for about an hour an a half in executive session after last week's election.

"That's the only budget still up in the air," said Pratt."We haven't quite decided on the mechanics. The chief will come back with some hard facts."

Some $56,000 must be cut from the fire department budget. It had earlier been suggested that the fire department could cut back on the number of hydrants it uses, and pays the water department to use.

But that proposal is no longer being discussed.

Chief Brock said the matter of possible cuts is still under discussion between himself and the board of selectmen.

But he said it looks like the department will have to cut the number of people it has on duty at one time.

"The majority of the budget is personal services," said Brock, fire chief for three and a half years. "But it doesn't appear that anyone will have to be laid off.

"This isn't the first year we have had to look at a tight budget," noted Brock.

He said that in 1981 when Proposition 2 1/2 went into effect, two fire stations were closed.

But Brock acknowledged that other communities are facing the same problems.

"As I speak to other chiefs around the area, no one is getting an easy ride ," he said.

Several firefighters are being laid off in Hingham, according to Brock, and four are being let go in Marshfield.

When asked whether the $56,000 cut would cause serious impacts, the chief responded,"The key word is serious.

"It's a gamble we are taking," he said. "If it's a busy year, with a lot of runs...We won't know until the end of the year."

Brock said that firefighters are frustrated by the funding situation with the town.

"Most of the firefighters are here because they want to be," he said. "They aren't here to make a lot of money. They depend on the town's support to do a good job. "

Brock said he was pleased that the town voted to go ahead with the purchase of a defibrillator, a lifesaving piece of equipment, for the ambulance.

He said that EMTs will be trained to use the equipment in a program at South Shore Hospital "probably on a volunteer basis."

The program probably won't be scheduled for a few months anyway, he said, because the hospital wants to teach EMTs on the South Shore as a group effort.

Brock said that at this point, he is reasonably optimistic that the budget discussions can be concluded relatively quickly.

"Selectmen have to make some decisions to keep in line with the last vote.

"At this point, I am optimistic.

"It's a matter of proper procedure. In a couple of weeks, we should know at least what we are doing."

School officials decide where to cut

And some junior high school sports will be intramural rather than competing with other schools.

Other cuts will include eliminating an automation project at the Deerhill School library, according to Hart.

"The project is partially done," he said. "The library is being computerized. Maybe we can get some volunteers to work on it."

Another probable cut will be $27,000 for supplies and capital equipment throughout the system, and classroom furniture for the Deerhill School.

In all there are 17 areas scheduled to be cut, he said.

"We are still talking about administrative reorganizaton as well," noted Hart.

"The school committee has to vote on the final recommendation as to what the cuts will be.

"There may be some minor changes at Monday's meetings. But we have discussed everything before at other meetings."

Hart said that the teacher cutbacks may mean that there will be fewer sections of a certain course available at the high school.

"It may be more difficult for students to schedule their classes," he said. "There may be fewer classes and some will be competing for the same time."

He noted that one of the reinstatements will be an elementary teaching position.

"That will allow us to maintain grades one to six, with four sections of each level. We hope to have four teachers at each level. Class size will be in the lower 20s."

If the override hadn't passed, the school department would have had to seriously consider having three grade levels at each class, he said.

The end of school budget deliberations appears to be in sight.

But, as Hart noted, "We are going to face the same problems next year."

Counselors serve insurance needs

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

For many seniors, the complicated process of comprehending complex medical payments and reimbursements is somewhat akin to launching a rocket into space.

But through the efforts of the state Executive Office of Elder Affairs, a program was established to provided needed assistance to seniors throughout the South Shore. SHINE - Serving Health Information Needs of Elders - is now in place with a staff of trained volunteers ready to interpret and untangle the insurance problems confronting many elderly residents.

Their services are provided free, and they are available by contacting the local senior centers. The counselors, who attended a rigorous training seminar and were required to pass a thorough written examination, will meet at the home of the person requesting the help, or they will attempt to answer questions over the telephone. The counselors will also be available to serve senior residents at the local senior centers.

Cohasset has three SHINE counselors - Joe Buckley, a retired CEO, Eleanor Smith, a retired librarian, and Helen Cody, a retired nurse. Peg Smart, another SHINE-trained counselor from Cohasset, will assist the seniors in Norwell. In Hingham, Joanne Powers will be available to help elderly residents there. And in Scituate, there are three graduates of the recent SHINE counselor training program, Joe Nevulis, a retired personnel director, Bill Quigley, and Yvonne Twomey, a retired Scituate teacher.

A total of ten South Shore towns are now staffed by SHINE counselors, including Duxbury, Marshfield, Hull, Weymouth, Braintree and Milton.

Pat Ryan is the coordinator of the South Shore program, which is funded by a state grant obtained by Cohasset's Council on Aging Director Kathy Bryanton. According to Ryan, problems with insurance can range from a simple question about a doctor's bill, to confusion about the state's Catastrophic Care

The counselors are able to compare insurance programs for the elderly, and explain options on their coverage. But their responsibility is to impart advise, not to offer recommendations.

"They won't tell you what to do," Ryan said. "But they can point things out, explain and advise. That's their function.

"The SHINE counselors also deal with people who have changed their insurance from Medex to an HMO," Ryan said. "We got a call recently from a woman whose husband died in February and she had yet to open a bill.

"These are the people we can help," the coordinator explained. "A lot of people are unfamiliar with complicated insurance procedures, especially in the event of a spouse's death. They let the bills pile up and they worry and worry, and it gets to be overwhelming for them. That's when a SHINE counselor can really help. They are trained to take the confusion out of the situation."

Ryan said the local counselors represent a specialized group of volunteers who are committed to completing a difficult task. "I admire the people who went through this two-week training seminar. For the most part, our counselors are retired professionals who just want to keep their hand in the business and keep their knowledge up to date. Although they are retired from their professions, they still want to make a contribution to their community."

The coordinator recalled the two-week training and final exam a strenuous experience for all participants. But she is confident they are fully prepared to tackle any insurance-related questions. The counselors are well-versed on local, state and federal insurance regulations. They were also familiarized with the latest information on the various programs including Medicaid and Blue Cross/Blue Shield.

Currently, Ryan is attempting to spread the word about the local SHINE program and the availability of the counselors at the senior centers. She is contacting local physicians' offices, making them aware of the free informational service provided in the communities. She is hopeful that the information will soon be available at the local hospitals. What Ryan envisions is that when an elderly resident enters the hopsital, he or she will be given a packet of information about SHINE including the names of counselors available to serve area residents.

"It's such a wonderful program," Ryan said, "and it could be so helpful to many people. We just need to let people know that we are here and we're ready to help."

Milliken Field project may not be dead . . .

according to plan, the five playing fields may be ready to use by the fall of 1990.

The field behind and across from the high school will be expanded from six to 10 acres. That extra land is already under the control of the town and includes land donated by the Bancroft Estate, school property, and a small section of water department land.

The money will be used to install proper drainage and grading so that neighbors will not be affected by the land. The project will need approval by the conservation commission, he said.

The additional acres will allow the number of playing fields to be increased from two and a-half to five football-sized fields. They will be used by the schools, recreation department and other community groups. He recalled that more than 600 youngsters registered for spring soccer this year, but there weren't enough playing fields to accommodate them.

He explained that the borrowing note for the $280,000 project will not begin until the next fiscal year. On a ten-year loan, the entire project will cost about 14 cents per year on the tax rate.

He also expects that as soon as the project begins, there may be contributions from private sources that will further reduce the total cost. "We certainly don't want to spend the full $280,000 on this, but that's our estimate. We may spend less than we hoped in certain phases," he added.

Sawchuk explained that the yearly payments could be taken from the town's capital expense budget, with the first principal and interest payment not due until the 1990-91 fiscal year.

He noted that the total cost of the field project may have scared more than a few voters at last week's election. He believes they defeated most of the override questions because of the pervading sentiment that people don't want higher taxes.

But Sawchuk noted that residents must also realize the town is allowed to raise its budget two and a-half percent plus any tax revenue generated by new businesses. He cited the new Rte. 3A shopping malls recently approved by the town and already under construction. Those projects, he noted, will add considerably to next year's tax rolls.

"Right now," Sawchuk said, "it's a tough question for me to figure out. The Milliken and Lillard field project has been overwhelmingly approved at two town meetings. Then it was defeated twice at the election. Does it mean that people do not want the expansion of the athletic fields, or do they not want to raise their taxes more than they are allowed? Therefore they're saying take the money out of the budget. It's a tough call."

Sawchuk urged residents to contact himself, selectmen or the local newspaper to signal their support or opposition to the renovation pro

Thursday is Mariner Day

Police expect their pay raise this week

expect a municipal business such as Cohasset to operate under a two and a-half percent annual increase. "I know what it's like running a business. Everything goes up more than two and a-half percent, things like insurance. It's impossible to keep the town operating under such tight restrictions," he said.

As a longtime police officer, the union president said the officers are "hurt" by the defeat of the override which would have funded their payraise. "It leaves a bad feeling in you," he noted. "You're doing what is sometimes a thankless job. You have to make arrests that hurt some families in this town, but you try to be a decent guy. I'd like to think I've always been a decent guy, giving kids a break when they deserve it. And sometimes there's a happy ending. But to be shot down like this by people in this town really hurts inside."

The sergeant said he voted for both general overrides, despite the fact he no longer has children in the local school system. "But I know what a good school system it is, and I want it to stay that way for the new kids in town. I don't want the schools to be affected by all of this.

"I don't know," he stated. "Maybe people just didn't understand that they had to fund this increase, but I tell you, it really hurts. I'm very surprised by the results."

What bothers the police union president is that nearly sixty percent of the voters in the June 28 election voted against the pay raise override.

"Personally, I didn't think it should have been on the ballot in the first place. It was unanimously approved by selectmen and town meeting, and I think it should have been included in the town's budget," Sgt. Abbadessa said. "But to find so many people voting against the police department is really hard to accept."

The attorney representing the police association has assured the officers that the town must issue the salary raises beginning this week. If not, the attorney said they take the matter directly to the courts.

"They have to honor the contract - it's that simple," the union president said.

He added, "This isn't helping the morale of the department. We're working here to protect and serve the public. And then to find out these people don't care enough to give you the salary they said they would, it really hurts.

Under the terms of the contract which was ratified moments before the start of the May 31 special town meeting, the police officers will get a six percent annual raise for three years, retroactive to July 1, 1988. According to Sgt. Abbadessa, that amount now brings Cohasset's police salaries in line with surrounding towns.

Music Circus schedule change

Because of a change in their production schedule, the stars of television's "Full House" will not be appearing at the South Shore Music Circus Sunday, July 9, as previously scheduled.

The announcement was made by executive producer Edward R. Kasses who added that the performance by Dave Coulier.

Patrons will receive a refund at the point of purchase. For further information, call 617-383-1400.

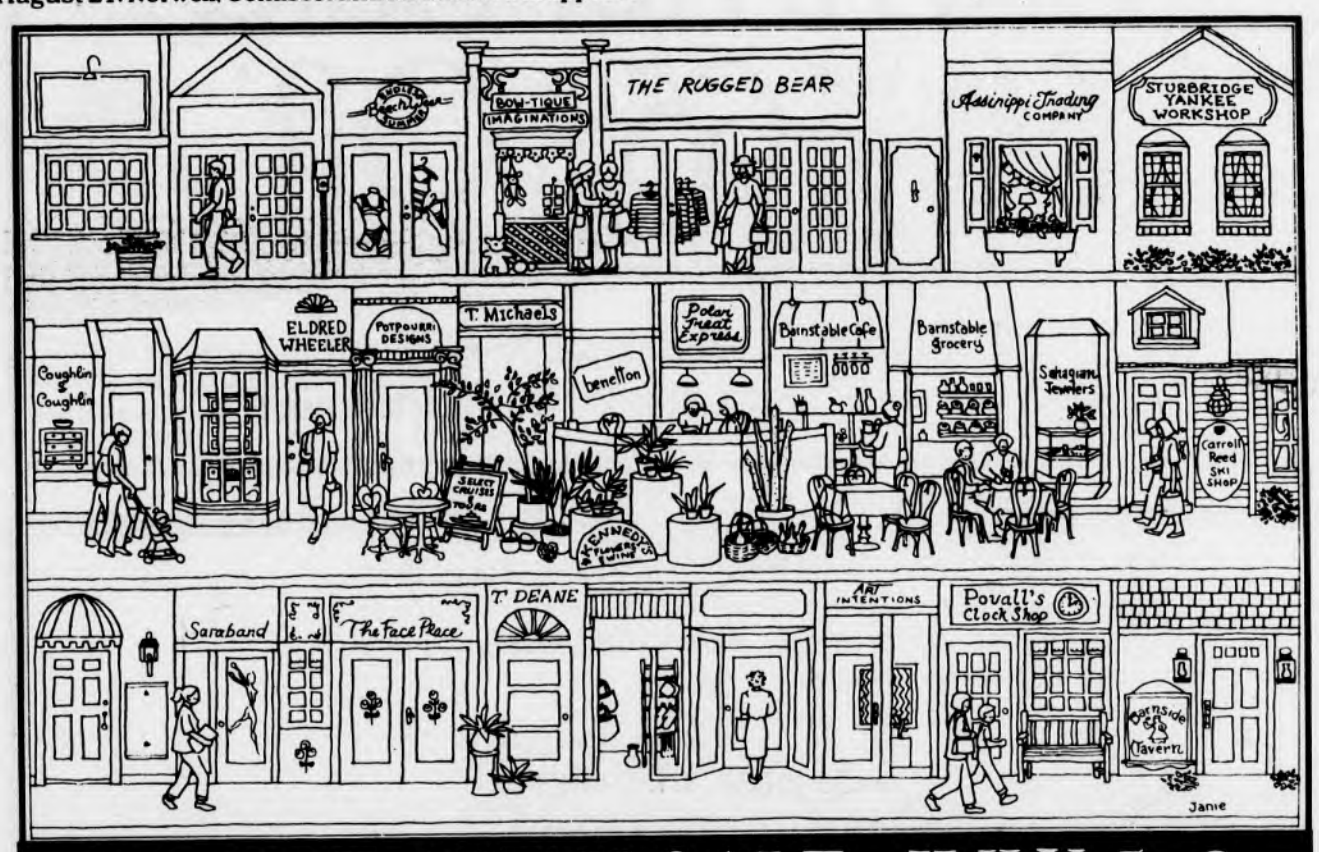
Regional school budget to be cut



Regional school committee members agreed on a 5.98-percent-increase budget last Wednesday, but on July 13 they will come to a consensus on specific cuts from their $4.1 million budget.

The new budget, cut two percent from the original budget presented to towns, was recertified by school committee members, allowing the eight member towns 30 days for approval or to hold a special town meeting to vote it down.

Whitman has called a special town meeting for July 11. Hanson has called a special town meeting for July 10 even though they have a town meeting scheduled for August 21. Norwell, Cohasset and Rockland will approve the recertified budget without a special town meeting.

The architect for the addition/expansion is under obligation to cut the budget for the plans from $14 million to $12.5 million. At least two towns have voiced their disapproval of the construction.

"If we are able to move forward even a little bit, let's do it," said David Chittim, committee member from Cohasset. "We have looming over us the state's displeasure at our facilities and the lease at Abington. I see signs afloat that we may have a new source of revenue in the state. Let's go ahead until we actually hit a wall.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter O'Connor, 15 Woodland Dr.

□ The Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a wonderful event on Wednesday, July 12, on the Common. It will begin from 6 p.m. to 7 with picnicing, and distribution of balloons. At 7 p.m., the program will begin with the color guard, provided by the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, marches to the podium followed by the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag (led by Chamber of Commerce President Don Staszko); then Maryanne Bailey-Hanson will sing the National Anthem; that will be followed by a proclamation from the Selectmen, read by Burt Pratt, Chairman; there will be an invocation by the town clergyman; Mr. Gerard Keating will read the Preamble of the Constitution; there will be a reading of the Osgood School student compositions and awards presentation to the winners by the Chamber of Commerce President; there will be a reading of a State House Proclamation by our State Representative, Mary Jeannette Murray; closing prayer by the town clergyman; then, at approximately 7:45 p.m. the Band Concert of Patriotic and Popular songs will begin. A Constitution Picnic on the Common, what a wonderful idea!! Hats off to the Chamber of Commerce. By the way the rain date is Tuesday, July 18, should July 12 get rained out. Sure sounds like an event that kiddos and adults will like.

□ I received a nice note from Hugh McEwan last week, who is now a resident of Mission Viejo, California. Hugh wrote that he was in Cohasset during the Memorial Day week, and his visit in January he was so happy to meet again such good old friends as Fred Howe, Al Odermatt, Ralph Perroncello, Ira Stoughton Jr., Mort Rose and many others. Their granddaughter Susan graduated from the College of Business at the University of Indiana on May 6th. She earned her Bachelors degree, and is now contemplating job offers. Their other granddaughter, Kimberly, who was a four year honor student graduated with High Distinction from her high school in Lexington Kentucky on May 31st. She received the math and science awards and a certificate of achievement from President George Bush. She will be a freshman at Indiana University in the fall. Susan and Kimberly are the daughters of Dr. Sharon McEwan Brennan (CHS 1962) and Dr. Jim Brennan (CHS 1957) who each hold a faculty position at the University of Kentucky (Sharon in education and Jim in Math). Jim's mother was also there for Kimberly's graduation. She and Jim's sister live on Bancroft Road.

Mary Filion and Debbie Casey, president of the Greek Philoptochos, the lady's guild of the Panagia Church, prepared pastries for last weekend's Taverna. (Staff photo/Dave Sullivan)

□ It's that time again folks, Clark Chatterton is holding his benefit for the Fred Troy Scholarship fund. This year the event is the Willie Nelson Show, and he has tickets for three nights. The dates are July 18, 19 and 20. Clark has raised about $16,000 for the scholarship, and every year it goes to a deserving Senior. As most of you know, the scholarship is in honor of my Dad, and Clark does an admirable job of keeping his memory alive with this scholarship. Call him today for your tickets at 383-0560.

□ Hey Mom, if you hate to pack that picnic lunch for the beach, don't despair . . . Krissy and Anne are there!! They have the hot dog stand right outside of Sandy Beach, and they would be delighted to feed your kiddo for you. What tastes better than a hot dog outdoors, right? And, the price is reasonable. So, what are you waiting for?

□ Speaking of Krissie, Happy Birthday (belated, but better late than never!!!).

□ And, don't think that I forgot you, a special birthday greeting goes to Anita Bernstein, a gal loved and admired by all who know her. Many more to you Anita. . . .

No end in sight

There were mixed reactions to the mixed results of last week's special election.

Although the town did not choose to override Proposition 2 1/2 by the highest amount, it did approve an alternative override. That decision will restore $150,000 to a school budget which was threatened with a $400,000 reduction. It will also return a few more dollars to the other town departments - about $54,000 to be divided among the various town departments, including police and fire.

The higher override, question one on last week's ballot, did not succeed. Although some residents viewed it as an unfair question which would have only benefitted the school department, the extra $100,000 would have meant the layoff of only one teacher this year. We can only believe that many people saw it as an unfair advantage for only one town department, and thus they defeated the entire proposal.

The fire department was the fortunate recipient of a positive vote which will allow the purchase of a defibrillator for the ambulance. The town decided to allow a $7,500 override for that purpose.

But other departments were not so fortunate.

There will be no new town cemetery, something that is viewed as a necessity by many town officials. And there will be no renovations to the town's athletic fields. And that has left another group of dedicated residents angered and bewildered.

The standout in this category of the deprived is the police department. Why voters denied the money for the police association's contract is beyond our ability to comprehend. The $65,000 needed to fund that contract was supported by voters at the special town meeting. There were no questions asked, and no apparent opposition to the appropriation.

But once voters saw that number in black and white on an override ballot, they reneged on a promise made on May 31. A lot of people said they went into the polls last week with the intention of defeating every override article. Despite those promises made at the special town meeting, many people felt that in the secrecy of a voting booth they could cast a ballot that more closely resembled their true sentiment.

And although the police contract would have added only 13 cents to the tax rate, many people oppose any rate hike.

But we wonder if people failed to realize that this money was really not an option for the town to defeat. That contract has been ratified by our town officials and the police union. It is the legal obligation of the taxpayers of this town to pay its police officers the amount specified in that negotiated contract.

And when those police officers receive their paychecks this week, it will include a retroactive raise - even without the override.

Town officials believe they can find that $65,000 from the town's free cash account. That is very good news for town departments, especially the school department, whose budgets would have been further reduced in an effort to locate the money. The school department might have been forced to cut its budget by another $48,000 if that deficit was to be evenly divided among town departments.

It appears that another special town meeting will be necessary in order to approve the transfer of that money. And so, our town's budget dilemma continues with no finality in sight.

To whom does Minot's Light belong?

Letters

To the Editor:

On Sunday evening we watched a show on Cable T.V. about Light Houses of America and "Minots Light" was featured. It brought back many fond memories of my childhood. Although my family left Scituate when I finished the 6th grade at Hatherly School (1943), I still remember the 1-4-3 (I love you) timing at Minots.

They interviewed several people from Cohasset and Scituate. Of course — both factions claimed the light house. We all know the Light House belongs to Scituate!

(Doesn't it?)

Sincerely,

The Fishing Line

By Bill Bowers

Stripers have arrived

Big striped bass love to eat eels.

John Tedeschi of Scituate fished a live anguilliform at night to fool a trophy striper that tipped the scales at 48 pounds, 4 ounces.

Tedeschi caught the 50-inch bass from shore at a secret Scituate location, according to Mark and Harry Trask at Trask Tackle in North Scituate.

Northeast winds have pushed bluefish close inshore. Bernie Hamill of Cohasset took dozens of blues on a recent expedition to Hull Gut.

The largest weighed 13 pounds, 4 ounces.

Dave Lynch of Scituate weighed in another bluefish of 11 pounds, 4 ounces.

Those fish were two of the first entries in the fourth annual Trask Tackle Bigfish Bluefish Tournament, which got under way June 30 and will run through Labor Day.

Prizes will be awarded both on a weekly and an overall basis for the largest bluefish taken from a boat or from shore.

The entry fee is $10 and contestants must register at the shop in advance of weigh-in. Everyone who registers receives a complimentary tournament T-shirt.

Bob McKay of Hingham tagged two stripers of 22 and 28 inches before releasing them back into Hingham Bay.

Trask has information about the American Littoral Society tagging program and how local anglers can tag fish to help scientists learn about their breeding and migratory habits. Call 545-4228 to find out more.

Peter Whitman and Sheldon Sladen, both of Cohasset, have again won the Scituate Harbor Marina July 4th weekend bluefish tournament.

Their winning entry, caught from Whitman's boat Seven Buoys, tipped the scales at 12.38 pounds and won the $400 first prize.

Whitman and Sladen have won the Elizabeth O'Neil-sponsored tournament three years out of four, according to marina officials.

Jay Graham and Donald and Jeff O'Neil, all of Cohasset, took the $300 quantity prize by landing 80 bluefish.

Don McLeod of Norwell caught a 23-pound, 38-inch bass aboard the Lady Luck at the mouth of the North River, reported Jane Duffy at Mary's Boat Livery in Marshfield.

Warming water has driven the cod far offshore, but also brought in bluefish, which are hitting sporadically near the river mouth and off Humarock.

Flounder fishing in the river has been excellent, especially near Damon's Point. Try fishing seaworms or pieces of squid on the incoming tide.

Schoolie stripers in the river are falling for Bomber plugs on the outgoing tide, according to Bill Bois at Adams Tackle in Pembroke.

Remember you must release all stripers smaller than 38 inches.

Bluefin tuna have arrived in Cape Cod Bay, where spotter planes and stick boats have been chasing them recently. None has been brought in yet, though.

Boaters are taking bluefish at the southwest corner of Stellwagen Bank, where cod and pollock are also still going strong.

There are stripers on the Bank as well. Trollers have been taking them at the southeast corner in 80 feet of water. Whales at Stellwagen are putting on a show.

Keep those lines in the water, and good luck.

Maintenance dredging funds

A key House committee has rejected the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers budget proposal which would have ended funding of dredging projects in 21 southeastern Massachusetts communities.

Those communities include Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Kingston, Marshfield, Plymouth and Scituate.

Earlier this year, according to U.S. Rep. Gerry E. Studds, D-Cohasset, the Army Corps asked the House Appropriations Committee to adopt its plan to stop maintaining navigation projects in bodies of water handling less than 25,000 tons of commerce annually.

"Harbormasters, selectmen, finance committees and residents of 21 towns in the Tenth Congressional District can now breathe a sigh of relief," said Studds.

The Army Corps appropriation bill will come before the full House of Representatives in the near future, he said.

Have you ever made a "caterpillar" necklace? Had a popcorn shower? Or painted with your feet?

Pre-schoolers in the Cohasset Community Center's Nature Day Camp have!

The camp, held from Monday to Friday, 9 a.m. to noon, is led by Irene Volpe, a Cohasset resident with 12 years teaching experience.

Volpe works with youngsters ages 3 to 5, and possibly 6, in the seven-week program. There are usually no more than eight children in the class.

Parents can register their children for one week, or for the whole summer. Cost is $65 a week.

The only prerequisite is that children be potty-trained.

"I love doing this," said Volpe. "The kids are a pleasure and the day sort of flows."

Each week in the program, which started June 19, is based on a different theme. Upcoming themes will be "by the seashore", "seasons", "moon and stars", "animals" and "growing things."

"Every day, we have projects revolving around the theme," said Volpe. "We have an art project, and a science or cooking project."

The children also spend as much time as possible out of doors, she said.

"Once a week, we go to the Osgood Play Park, and to the library for a story hour," said Volpe.

"We are also going to go to special recreation programs, including a storyteller, juggler, clown, zoomobile, magician and theatre group."

"We walk every place we go," she added.

The children also spend time at the playground behind the community center.

"We have water play, sand play and bubbles," she said.

Days also include stories, free play, bike riding, music and a snack.

"We try to keep them hopping," said Volpe.

Madeline Terry, 3 1/2, of Hingham, said she liked the popcorn shower.

"We had a hot air popper, and we took off the top," explained Volpe. "Everyone sat on a blanket and we had a popcorn shower."

"I like to put on cowboy boots like on 'Bonanza'," said Jimmy French, 4 1/2, of Cohasset, who was walking around in the prized footwear, included among the "dress up" clothes.

Shawna Eyster, 4, of Scituate, said she likes to look at birds when the group goes for walks, while Anna Jane Murphy, 4, of Cohasset, said she enjoyed making "caterpillar" necklaces, which were actually spaghetti shells.

Last week's group also included Shaun O'Connell, 4, of Cohasset, who participated in last year's camp, Douglas Sibor, 3, of Hingham, and Volpe's daughter, Marisa Mello, 3.

"That's been especially nice for me," said Volpe. "This is Marisa's first camp experience, and one of her only school experiences.

"It is really nice for kids who haven't gone to school yet. There is just enough structure so the kids learn a little school sense. And it's a short day."

Discipline usually isn't a problem, according to Volpe, who is called Irene by the children.

"Because it is such a small group, the management issue is a very small one. It is mostly around sharing, which is very age-appropriate."

The small group also helps youngsters be more cooperative, said Volpe.

"There is less competition, and you can talk about things with them," she said. "It is an excellent (teacher-student) ratio so you can give kids the kind of time they need. They don't get impatient for attention."

Volpe noted that the program accepts special needs children.

"It's appropriate for that kind of ratio," she said. "We have had enrollments of children with special needs, and it has worked out fine."

Volpe said she has seen some friendships forming among the children.

"Most of them get along," she said. "There is not a lot of competition.

"They like being here."

It was time for some solitude as two friends (l to r) Madeline Terry and Marisa Mello share a book at camp.

Cohasset recreation news . . .

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone reservations for adult, evening tennis lessons to be held in five-week sessions beginning during the week of July 17.

Frank Willshire will instruct both the beginner and intermediate classes on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Classes are one hour long and a sesion is five weeks.

Beginner classes meet Wednesday from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., starting Wednesday, July 19. Intermediate classes will meet Thursdays 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., starting Thursday, July 20. Both classes meet at the Recreation Commission Tennis courts at the top of Norfolk Road, next to Milliken Field.

To register, call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791. The fee for the five-week program is $25 per person, payable by check to the "Town of Cohasset." Classes are limited in size and non-residents will be accepted on a space-available basis. Each participant will need their own racquet. Classes do not meet if weather is inclement.

GOLF LESSONS

The Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor golf lessons for beginner and intermediate levels starting Monday, July 10, from 6:15 to 7:05 p.m. for beginner level class, and intermediate class from 7:10 to 8 p.m.

Patrick McNamara, assistant pro at the Cohasset Golf Club will be teaching the five-week sessions.

To register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office, at 383-6791. The fee for the program will be $30 per person, payable by check, to "Town of Cohasset." Participants will need a couple of irons, putter and a driver for lessons. If you do not have access to clubs, indicate this at registration.

Classes will be held for the most part, on the Town Common in front of town hall, off Highland Avenue. Classes will not meet if weather is inclement.

McNamara has been assistant golf pro and Cohasset Recreation Department golf instructor for the past four years. Classes will be limited in size to afford more individual attention.

Cohasset Chamber of Commerce news . . .

In New England, July 4th weekend is a gem. Lawns are mowed, volleyball and badminton nets raised, lawn furniture sparkles, barbecue grills rolled out, flags hung...Everyone smiles, family picnics, fireworks and band concerts, parades. A few days of summer euphoria...and then it's over. Work, shopping, kids, sand, mosquitos, earwigs, heat....business as usual.

But this year, the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is giving us all a chance to extend that Fourth of July feeling a little longer. From July 6 to July 12, the windows of Chamber businesses downtown and at the Rte. 3A malls will be decorated with posters from the Joseph Osgood School third grade entries in the "Bill of Rights" art contest."

We urge you to make a special effort to visit the stores to see these great posters. They present a dramatic picture of the Bill of Rights as seen through the eyes of our own nine year old children. Please remember to look at them with an open mind, and try to get a sense of what these Rights, as depicted, mean in the lives of our children today. You may be in for a surprise.

July 12th (raindate — July 18), join us for a "Constitution picnic on the Common." Bring the kids, lawn chairs, blanket, a picnic supper, and your favorite can of "bug spray," and settle back to enjoy an old fashioned community picnic.

The Boy Scout Color Guard, the National Anthem sung by our own Maryanne Hanson, a proclamation by Selectman and Town historian Bertram Pratt, and balloons for all the kids should put you in the perfect mood. Now cheer and applaud the proud winners of the Bill of Rights art contest as they receive their awards. Then settle back and keep that terrific feeling going while you enjoy a great band concert by the South Concert Band — the same band that performed on the Fourth in Plymouth Harbor. After the rousing finale of patriotic songs and John Phillip Sousa Marches, pack up the chairs, gently carry the drowsy little ones home to their beds, and enjoy the feeling of the Fourth just a little longer than usual.

Join us on the Common July 12 from 6 to 9:30 p.m. You deserve it. Enjoy!

New England Track & Field Camp registration

Joe Donahue, Northeastern University Track & Field Coach and Director of New England Track & Field Camp, announces that registration for this summer's track and field development camp will be on July 17 at N.U.'s new championship track and field facility in Dedham.

The facility will host college and international instruction for two sessions per day for five days. The track, featuring an eight lane "action track 200" surface, with top field facilities as well, is the host of the Metro West twilight meets which have received national acclaim.

Donahue, a former staff member at the Colorado Springs Olympic training site for track and field, will lead the program for boys and girls 12 and up. This years instruction will be $90 for five days. For information, call 545-6172 or write Donahue at PO Box 359 Scituate 02066.

AND, IN THIS CORNER...

When two walls of cabinets meet in the corner of a kitchen, it sets the stage for a battle between cost and utility. Because corners require special treatment, an initial decision is needed that will affect cabinet layout on each side. The least expensive solution involves the creation of a "dead corner", to which ordinary cabinets are butted. However, this solution is grossly inefficient. A better compromise between expense and utility calls for the extension of a blind cabinet into the corner space. The cost of extending an ordinary cabinet is low, but accessibility into the corner is low as well. The best (but most expensive) solution lies with a corner cabinet. These usually come with rotating lazy Susan shelving that brings all stored items into reach. Their high utility value warrants their extra cost.

When you go to the expense of remodeling you may want to cut corners in some spots, but it should never be in the corners. The added storage you obtain in lazy Susans will more than pay for itself immediately. You need expert kitchen planners to aid you in making the right decisions for your type of kitchen and your particular lifestyle. Come to KITCHEN DESIGN ASSSOCIATES at 962 Washington St. Rt. 53, Hanover to see beautiful cabinets by Poggenpohl and Millbrook. We believe in quality and pass this on to you through our work. Let us show you how beautiful a ktichen can be.Tel. 826-4121.

HINT: Only 20 percent of new-home buyers would sacrifice kitchen storage space to get more windows.

Summer art courses for kids

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, is sponsoring several summer programs for children.

SummerArts Camp 1989 — China meeting 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily for two, two-week sessions (July 17-28 and July 31-August 11) is for ages 6 to 12.

Join the South Shore Art Center and the Cohasset Community Center and discover the cultural heritage of China through the arts. Hands-on camp projects and activities will focus on China's rich cultural traditions and inspire imagination and creativity.

The week of August 21-25 is Summer Art Week. Courses meet daily from 3:30 to 5 p.m. Outdoor Drawing & Painting taught by Lisa Wyman for grades 1 to 3 will entice the young artist to observe nature and use the imagination to create original art works each day. Be a real artist working outdoors doing drawing, painting and mixed media projects.

New this year is Creative Photography taught by Julie Hawkins for grades 4 to 6. Explore and create with taking pictures, nature walks and special effects in the darkroom. Have fun and learn to use a 35 mm camera.

In Hingham, Blastoff To Outer Space will be taught by Linda Stevens for grades 1 to 3. Create creatures and space craft of your own design through painting, drawing, collage and 3-D assemblage.

In Scituate, Cartooning will be taught by Serena Brundige for grades 4 to 6. Students will have the opportunity to create and design their own flip books and comic strips in pen & ink. Early registration is encouraged. Pre-registration is required.

For more information and to register, call the South Shore Art Center weekdays 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 383-9548.

August workshop at art center

The South Shore Art Center in Cohasset is sponsoring a series of workshops in August.

Watercolor Workshop taught by Edward Minchin is a three-day workshop meeting Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday August 22, 23 & 24 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Learn to focus on spontaneous and confident painting as well as how to break "painter's block" and return to the original inspiration.

Monoprint Workshop taught by Berj Kailian is a two-day workshop meeting Tuesday and Wednesday August 29 & 30 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Students will be encouraged to pursue their own creative development through hands-on work making prints using water soluble inks.

Monoprint, a four-week course is also taught by Berj Kailian beginning on August 7 meeting Mondays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Explore printmaking and experiment with the unlimited possibilities. Life-drawing taught by Rosaling Farbush will meet Saturdays from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. beginning August 5. Drawing from the model, this course is concerned with the basic understanding of the surface structure and form of the human figure.

Enjoy the outdoors with Virginia Avery for Outdoor Watercolor a four-week course meeting Wednesdays and Fridays from 9:30 to noon beginning August 2. Paint beautiful scenes by the sea and salt marshes. Individual instruction will be given as well as teacher demonstrations. Handbuilding & Wheel In Clay, taught by George Dalton will meet Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. beginning August 5. Basic hand building techniques (slab, coil and pinch) and basic wheel throwing techniques will be introduced to create both functional and decorative pottery. Pre-registration is required.

For more information and to register, call the South Shore Art Center at 383-9548 weekdays 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Summer adult art courses

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, is offering a variety of workshops, one-week intensives and four and eight week courses throughout the summer.

CLAY: COIL BUILDING — a two day workshop, taught by Judy Rossman, will meet July 5 & 6 from 9 a.m. to noon. Using coil technique, students will build two to four vessel forms which will be sculptural as well as functional.

WORKING WITH WHITE & COLORED CLAY — a one-week intensive course, also taught by Judy Rossman will meet July 10-14 from 9:30 a.m. to noon. Marblizing, inlaying and laminating colored clays with white clay as well as glazing techniques will be introduced.

INTRODUCTION DRAWING AND PAINTING — a four week course, taught by David Tandy will meet Tuesdays and Fridays from 7:15 to 10:15 p.m. beginning July 7. This course starts with mind-to-eye-to-hand coordination of motor skills and progresses to relationships of line, space and depth.

OUTDOOR WATERCOLOR — a four week course taught by Virginia Avery will meet Wednesdays and Fridays from 9:30 a.m. to noon starting July 5. Paint scenes by the sea and salt marshes.

HANDBUILDING & WHEEL IN CLAY — a four week course, taught by George Dalton will meet Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. starting July 8. Basic hand building techniques (slab, coil and pinch) and basic wheel throwing techniques will be introduced to create both functional and decorative clay pottery.

Eight-week courses include both portraiture and photography.

PORTRAITURE — taught by Clement Micarelli will meet Thursdays from 7:30 to 10 p.m. starting July 6. This course will have a model each week and will emphasize composition, color relationships between light and shade and values.

BEGINNING PHOTOGRAPHY — taught by Tom Hannon will meet Mondays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. beginning July 10. For the beginning photographer in color or black and white, this lecture course covers all the basics including F stops, shutter speeds, film filters, composition, lighting and subjects. Emphasis will be on recogizing elements of a good photograph and how to apply it to the work.

Pre-registration is required for all courses. For more information and to register, please call the South Shore Art Center at 617-383-9548.

Summer reading programs

This year's summer reading program at the Paul Pratt Library will focus on an "Asian Adventure."

With folktales and stories of China, India, Japan, and their neighboring countries, participants will be exploring the continent and culture of Asia. The program will end in late August with a field trip to the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, and a special guided tour of the Asiatic collection: colossal Buddha statues, beautiful kimonoes, samurai armor and ceremonial swords, fantastic deities in stone, screens and scrolls that tell stories. A celebration will conclude with refreshments in the outdoor courtyard of the museum.

The summer reading club is open to all children who have completed grades 1-6. Reading cards for recording the titles read on each person's own reading level may be picked up at the library. Participants in grades 1-3 who read 20 books will be awarded a paperback book of their choice from the Friends of the Library. Participants in grades 4-5 will read 15 books for their paperback gift, and those in grade 7 and up need to read 10 books.

A new feature this year will be a program for "Almost Readers," those younger children who enjoy being read to or are just beginning to read themselves with help. These children will receive stickers for each book read, and the library will chart their progress.

Historical walking tour

The Cohasset Historical Society's walking tour of Cohasset Common and the Village Center will be held Sunday, July 9.

The historic Common with its Colonial Meeting House, its 19th century New England Town Hall, its two other church buildings of distinction, and its traditional houses of different architectural styles, will be the subject of a walking tour conducted by Society members, with explanatory commentary provided.

The walking tour meets at the 1747 Meeting House on the Common, and will enter the colonial building to hear Rev. Edward Atkinson of the First Parish talk of the history and importance of this unique structure in the history of Cohasset. Then, the Historical Society's Curator will lead a walk around the Common itself and the various sites of historical significance will be viewed by tour participants. From the Town Common the walk will travel to Cohasset's center village, long an amalgm of early homes and small shops located in historic buildings.

Cohasset's center still remains an example of a small New England village, despite the inroads of the 20th century, and a number of its original buildings still exist. Some of its early structures have vanished, but, as of the current time, enough remain to provide a glimpse of the town as it was a century or more ago.

The Society's walking tour will end at its Maritime Museum on Elm Street, itself once a ship chandlery now containing collections of artifacts, pictures, documents and models relating to Cohasset's history. Additional pictures showing the early Common and village will be on view, and a documentary exhibit relating to the origin of the famous Jessie M. Barron carillon at St. Stephen's Church remains on view.

Sunday, July 23, another Society walking tour will follow the "Captains' Walk" at historic Cohasset Harbor; meeting at Veteran's Memorial Park at 3 p.m. and walking to Government Island. The walking tours are free, and all are invited.

Social service directors named

Four new Directors have recently been elected to the Board of the Social Service League of Cohasset. They are: Meryl Graham, Debbie Martin, Martha Equi, and Joan Chittick.

The League has four video films that may be borrowed, free of charge. They are suitable for viewing by and with adolescent children as a starting point for family discussion. They are: "Drug Free Kids" (Paul Newman Foundation); "Drugs, Sex and AIDS" from "Ask Beth"; "Everything's Fine", (Blue Cross/Blue Shield — Adult Children of Alcoholics); and "Channel 4 Panel Discussion on AIDS". These films may be borrowed by calling Ann Hublitz, Family Service Chairman, 383-0519 or the League office, 383-0771.

For those who are housebound, the League's New Friends program matches volunteer visitors and those who would like to be visited. For those who need some assistance with shopping, housekeeping, or other tasks, the League keeps a file of persons to provide paid assistance or companionship.

Flea market July 22

The First Baptist Church on Country Way in North Scituate, will hold a "Flea Market" Saturday, July 22, at 9:00 a.m. If interested in renting a space, call 545-1986. Hot dogs, hamburgers, coffee and cold drinks will be available at the snack bar.

THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
NORFOLK DIVISION
DOCKET NO. 89P1293E1

Estate of VIRGINIA ENGLISH SHERBROOKE late of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that ROSS ENGLISH SHERBROOKE of DEDHAM in the County of NORFOLK be appointed executor named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on July 19, 1989.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16A.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the 28th day of June, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighty nine.

Profile on the Cohasset LIttle League Athletics

The Brewer & Lord Athletics began the year with seven returning players from last year and added six rookies to fill out the thirteen player roster.

The team started the year off with a strong first game in a losing cause against the Red Sox. Strong pitching by Pat Reynolds helped keep the score close until late in the game. Two wins against the Cardinals followed to help the players' confidence due to strong offense at the plate by Nate Caldwell, and Tom Greco. A hard fought victory later against the Braves was the result of a well-rounded effort. Strong hitting, including a grand-slam by Emily Spencer, agressive base running, and strong pitching and defense boosted Brewer & Lord's Athletics record to a .500 through ten games. The A's finished on the short end of five exciting one run games in the second half of the season, all decided in the last inning.

Over the course of the season, the majority of catching duties were handled by veteran player Nevin Bunstein who performed consistently well at this critical position. Matt Rossi and Brian Sasso also saw duty behind the plate. Pat Reynolds and Jonathan Hislop provided reliable pitching support, each with strong individual performances. Jon Hislop improved his pitching strength and stamina dramatically toward the end of the season. Nate Caldwell, Brian Sasso, Matt Rossi, and Nevin Bunstein also performed in starting and relief roles.

Ryan Sawchuk and Nate Caldwell divided play at first base this season. Nate batted often at the top of the lineup because of his ability to get on base. On offense, Ryan's speed and hustle helped him beat out a number of infield hits to be safe on first. Both will be moving on to Pony League play next season and will not be easily replaced.

Emily Spencer played a powerful second base for the A's until having to leave the team at mid-season when her family relocated to Brookline. Both her offensive and defensive play were missed. Greg Schultz filled the vacancy at second base and proved to be a stubborn bat at the plate. Speed and quick thinking on the base path made him a tough out to get. Short stop belonged to Tom Greco who was a consistent top defensive performer contributing to the team's double-play combination, always anticipating where the next play had to be made. Brian Sasso provided half of the A's tough third base coverage with his big glove and continually improved his hitting as the year progressed. Matt Rossi helped anchor third base often this season with a hot glove as well.

The outfield was well covered with speed, good gloves, and strong arms by rookies Sean Norris, Matt O'Connor, and Schuyler Doten. Sean Norris was versatile and hustling, playing a tight left field often as well as seeing a lot of playing time at short stop and second base. His hitting helped a lot in the tough early season. Matt O'Connor played a solid outfield, thrilling spectators with a number of dramatic catches in center field, as well as providing reliable hitting in clutch situations. Schuyler Dotencaused runners to think twice before looking for extra bases. He put out runners at the plate in back-to-back games from his right field spot. His speed also made him an added offensive threat when on base. Veterans Pat Reynolds, Jon Hislop, Nate Caldwell, and Emily Spencer provided additional stability in the outfield.

Important to the team was the leadership roles played by veterans Bunstein, Reynolds, Greco and the rookie Brian Sasso. Their teammates selected Tom Greco, Nevin Bunstein, Pat Reynolds, Brian Sasso and Matt Rossi to play in the League's All-Star game. Greco, Bunstein, and Reynolds were selected by coaches for post-season play in the 11-12 year age group, and Sean Norris and Matt O'Connor were selected for the 9-10 year old group.

The Athletics were sponsored this year by the Cohasset office of the Brewer & Lord Insurance Company. The first year coaching staff consisted of Kevin O'Connor, John Norris, and Brian Rossi.

Cardinals improved through season

The major league expansion team, Cohasset Cardinals, newly added to the program this season, have steadily battled for improved league standing and team respect all season.

The Cards under coach Rick Kondrat, have also steadily improved with each game. The Cards were early winners in the interleague play with their Scituate rivals and appear to be peaking once again.

Four 12 year-old players have helped to stabilize the Card's rookies. First baseman and pitcher Jason Crossman has contributed as have third baseman Ed Taylor, outfielder Toby Horn and outfielder, shortstop Ben Manning.

The 'battling' Cards will have to be reckoned with next year as they will have 10 returning veterans. The Cards future success may be based on the pitching ability of Jamie Kondrat and Grant Emde both of whom have exhibited fine arms.

Aaron Coon has sparked the team from the catcher's position. Burke Davis has provided excellent defense in the outfield as have Rob Stansell, Dave Marr, J.P. Lacks and Matt Belson. Heavy hitting is expected from Justin Buckley when the Cards resume their quest for the league title next year.

The Cards have excellent team speed and all the boys have exhibited a winning spirit. The Cards should challenge for the title next season.

The Cards were sponsored this year by the Mass 4X4 Truck Association. The Association has been active in other community efforts including the Toys for Tots Christmas Appeal. The coordinator for the Association in Cohasset is Cohasset Police Patrolman, John Small.

COSTLY HEALTH CARE: Most Americans have felt the pinch of uncontrolled health care costs, which continue to rise well above the general rate of inflation.

Th elderly, whose medical needs are greater and who generally live on fixed income, have been hit the hardest.

This fact is documented in a recent study by the House Select Committee on Aging. Titled "Elderly Out-of-Pocket Health Care Cost." The study is based on information supplied by the Health Care Financing Administration, which oversees the Medicare and Medicaid program. The study found: Out-of-pocket care cost, those not covered by Federal or private health insurance programs, averaged $2,394.00 for elderly persons in 1988, or 18 percent of his or her income.

In the 1977-1980 period, by contrast, the elderly's medical costs consumed less than 13 percent of their income. Out-of-pocket costs were $712 in 1977 and $966 in 1980.

In 1966, the year Congress enacted Medicare to protect senior citizens from being bankrupt by medical bills, the elderly spent about 15 percent of their income on health care. That percentage, of course, is less than today's.

What went wrong? The main culprits, the study concludes, have been unbridled health cost inflation and Medicare and Medicaid cuts during the Reagan-Bush Administration. The Medicaid program for the needy serves many elderly persons who are poor.

Rep. Edward R. Roybal (D-Calif.) chairman of the select committee on Aging, commented, "America's elderly have lost billions of dollars in purchasing power during the years of the Reagan-Bush Administration. With respect to health care, the nation's elderly would be spending $21.9 billion less, or $718 per person, in 1989 if they were spending the same percentage of their income for health care as they were in 1980," Roybal said.

Roybal criticized the "insensitivity" of an Administration official who commented in the automatic 4 percent Social Security cost-of-living increase effective in January 1988. "This benefit increase ensures that America's elderly and disabled are able to maintain their purchasing power," the official said.

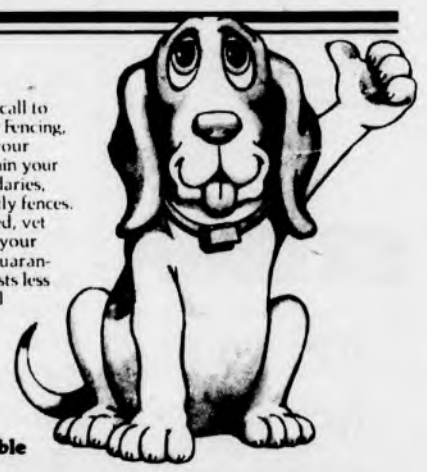
"Not so," said Royball, "when it comes to health care and not so during the Reagan-Bush years." He pointed to the committee study showing that elderly out-of-pocket health care costs have risen at an annual rate of 12 percent since 1980. Their income during that period increased 7 percent a year, the study found.

Leon Kaplan, 75, and past president of California Seniors in Los Angeles County, told USA Today in front page story on the House Committee Study, "These increases are gouging in the pockets of senior citizens across the country. We are getting to the critical stage in health care because these cuts are bleeding us."

Unfortunately, many people still believe that health care costs paid by the elderly are not excessive. Over the past eight years, there were proposals to severely cut benefits. The budget deficit may make "entitlement" programs like Social Security and Medicare tempting targets for budget cutters next year.

The study concludes that "proposals that shift cost to Medicare and Medicaid beneficiaries must be rejected. Instead, we must take steps which constrain rising health cost for all payers, the states, the employer, the poor, the elderly — not just for the federal portion of Medicare and Medicaid."

Eugenia Geinbas was in the kitchen cooking delectable pastries for last weekend's Taverna at the Greek Panagia Church.



A national health care system could restrain costs and provide access to the millions of Americans who lack any kind of health insurance. In Canada, which has had such a system for many years, health care costs consume a much smaller share of the gross national product than in the United States.

Curbing health care costs and broadening access to all is an urgent priority for the current Congress and the Bush Administration.

The Alliances for Aging Research recently released a survey showing widespread support for more federal spending on research into health problems associated with old age. It found that what the elderly want most, and what their children want for them, is increased research to improve the health of the elderly to ensure their independence.

The survey concluded that three out of every four Americans — 76 percent — favor a major government research project on the scale of the NASA space program, to shrink the period of time during which the elderly must rely on the help of others.

Schools cut teachers, transportation

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The school committee this week reduced its $5 million budget by $280,000, cutting out supplies, new equipment, and reducing transportation and the teaching staff.

The budget cuts were required after voters approved the low override option in the special election two weeks ago. And although the schools were set to cut the budget by $250,000, an additional $32,000 was tacked on in order to fund the police contract.

At that special election, voters failed to approve an override for $64,000 to fund the police contract.

Since it is a legally-binding agreement, the town is required to fund that document. At a meeting between town and school officials last week, it was decided that the most equitable manner of obtaining the needed money would be to take it out of all the town budgets. Since the schools represent fifty percent of the total budget, the schools were asked to fund fifty percent of the deficit, or $32,000.

Committee Chairman Barbara Bliss said it was necessary to come to an agreement about funding the contract deficit, because all town departments had to start planning for the current fiscal year.

Among the biggest reductions in the school budget will be $50,000 from the athletic budget, and $40,000 from the transportation account. "There will be fewer buses running, some students will walk and there will be fewer bus stops," Supt. Stephen Hart explained. The five buses and one mini-van will be stored at the high school to save money, and because there will be fewer buses, it is expected that maintenance costs will go down.

Among the staff reductions are a physical education teacher, a home economics teacher, a special needs teacher at the high school, an Individual Math Study aide, a math lab aide, a custodian, reduction of the special needs teacher at Osgood to half-time, reduction of a science teacher by two-fifths, an enrichment teacher who will now serve as a reading specialist, curriculum coordinator and enrichment teacher, and reduction of an elementary art teacher to sixty percent.

Other budget cuts include the elimination of the automation plan for the Deer Hill Library, reduction of new equipment purchases by $5,000, and the loss of $10,000 in supply purchases.

School committee member Ralph Kidder warned that when the committee is asked next year to level fund the next budget, it will reflect this $280,000 budget reduction.

Committee wants to go on with cemetery plan

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Plans for a new town cemetery aren't dead, despite a recent defeat at the polls.

Cemetery study committee chairman Glenn Pratt said he will talk to selectmen Monday night, July 24, about going forward with the 5,000-grave project.

Residents recently voted against a $50,000 debt exclusion for the engineering, plans and specifications for the cemetery after two town meetings had approved the plans.

But Pratt feels that was more a statement about where the money would come from, than about support for the project.

"We feel strongly about giving one more pitch," said Pratt, who with his committee has been working on the plans since fall, 1986.

He said he will ask that the town go ahead and borrow the $50,000.

Pratt said he will ask selectmen to find $13,000 in the town's 1991 budget to pay back the first portion of the $50,000 loan plus interest.

Then in 1992 the cemetery will become self-funding when the sale of graves begins.

"It will become an accounting exercise," he said.

Pratt said the committee feels there is support for the project.

Developer to appeal ZBA verdict

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

The developer of Crystal Woods said he will appeal restrictions placed on the comprehensive permit granted to him by the Cohasset Zoning Board of Appeals last week.

The 32 restrictions include reducing the number of Cohasset units from 28 to 21, and opening a second access road in Scituate.

Developer Jack Hurley of Crystal Land Development, Quincy, said the restrictions make the project proposed for land on Route 3A uneconomical.

It would be located on 23 acres of land at the Cohasset/Scituate line.

Hurley told housing partnership members from Scituate and Cohasset Monday night, July 10, that he will appeal.

According to state law, Hurley has 20 days to file such an appeal.

The chairman of the Scituate housing partnership, Mary O'Connor, said Hurley might want to appeal her town's comprehensive permit decision when it is made later this summer.

Scituate officials were not happy with the latest plans for the development, she said.

The Scituate ZBA is scheduled to consider the application Thursday, July 20, at 7:30 p.m. at the town library, Branch St.

The project had earlier been supported by Scituate's housing partnership and board of selectmen.

But it met with more opposition in Cohasset from such town boards as selectmen, and from groups

Fundraiser to rescue athletics

About $26,000 will have to be raised from private donations in order to keep the current sports programs intact.

The school committee this week endorsed a proposal by Supt. Stephen Hart to cut $50,000 from this year's athletic budget. But in order to keep the present sports programs intact, students will be charged a $35 user fee per sport. That will add about $14,000 in revenues to the sports program. In addition, several assistant coaches will not be rehired, saving the schools about $10,000.

But in order to stave off further reductions, Athletic Director Clark Chatterton and Supt. Hart suggested that all the sports boosters clubs organize a major fundraiser. About $26,000 will have to be raised through one or two events, they told the committee.

"If the fundraiser does not succeed, we will have to cut the budget further," the superintendent said Monday night.

According to Chatterton, even if the schools were forced to eliminate the hockey, wrestling and gymnastics programs, it would only amount to a $22,000 budget reduction. "We'd be getting rid of almost the entire winter sports program, and we still haven't reached $50,000," he said.

But several committee members warned the administrators that fundraising should not be considered a permanent budget funding mechanism. "I do not want to see fundraising become the way in which we fund athletics in Cohasset," committee member Ralph Kidder said. "It deserves to be funded as part of the school budget, although it is clear that this is a necessity now to maintain the program."

Dog officer is praised

Janet and Norman Brown of Cohasset have written to selectmen commending dog officer William Quigley.

The Browns credited Quigley, and his associate from Hingham, with "turning a nasty dog situation into a normal task."

"I hope they are appreciated," wrote the Browns."A job well done."

Transfer station costs up

Engineers for the new transfer station at the Cedar St. Landfill have found more ledge at the site than they originally anticipated.

And selectmen say they should be the ones to pay for the $60,500 miscalculation.

Anson Whealler, chairman of the transfer station building committee, told selectmen about the situation Monday night, July 10.

Whealler was at the meeting to request payment towards the construction.

The board eventually voted to pay $34,390 towards the work.

Selectman chairman Burt Pratt was opposed until the situation is further clarified.

Another selectman, Ned Tebbetts, asked whether SEA Consultants did borings for the ledge.

Whealler said they were done, but not at the exact site where the transfer station will be located.

He said the committee, health board and engineers would meet to discuss the discrepancy, and possible modifications to the design to make up some of the $60,000.

Selectman Diana Kornet called it "an extraordinary error in estimation."

Regional plan presented

The town government structure committee has submitted to selectmen the draft of a letter to surrounding towns on the possibility of regionalizing services.

"Cohasset, like many towns in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, finds itself caught between increasing expenses, demands and responsibilities, and the constraints of both Proposition 2 1/2 and a fiscally concerned citizenry," states the letter.

"One possible way to ameliorate this conflict is the increased regionalization of services.

"Our town government structure committee has indicated its willingness and readiness to look into areas of possible regionalization."

The letter invites interested towns to contact Cohasset.

Government structure committee chairman F. Roy Fitzsimmons suggested that the letter be sent to Hingham, Hull, Scituate and Norwell.

N. Main St. to be repaved

Repaving of North Main St. from Sohier St. to Rocky Lane is scheduled for this month, according to the highway surveyor.

Harold Litchfield notified the planning board that the work will be done by the highway department.

From that point, Rosano Davis Corp. will repave to the intersection of Forest Ave. and North Main St., Litchfield said.

Rosano had agreed to repair a portion of the street which had been damaged when his Rocky Lane development was constructed.

Door to door flag sale

Cohasset residents who would like to do a little flag waving won't have to leave their homes to make such a purchase.

Selectmen granted Benjamin Bateman of Scituate a license Monday night, July 10, to sell American flags door-to-door in Cohasset.

"These aren't for burning, are they?" asked selectman Ned Tebbetts, referring to the recent constitutional rights issue.

"They're non-flammable," answered Bateman.

Selectmen's action

Selectmen took the following action at their meeting Monday, July 10, at town hall:

*Granted a request from Cohasset Savings Bank to use the upper parking lot at Government Island July 23 for its annual picnic.

*Signed a $2,763 formula grant application for the Council on Aging.

*Authorized selectmen to negotiate with Northeast Gunnite for work on the common pond.

*Agreed to pay a $10,000 retainage on the town hall contract.

School budget cuts

"There is no such animal as a level-funded budget unless you have zero percent inflation and no salary raises," he said. "We're suffering now, but next year's budget really means we're starting off with a quarter million cut."

Committee member Nancy Sandell noted that despite the budget problems, they should not forget the long range plan developed last year for the schools.

"I don't want to lose sight of what we really want for this school system. I want to present two budgets next year," she said, one that would include components of the long range plan, and another that will reflect the need to continually sever the school budget.

New harbor rules approved

A new set of harbor regulations is now in effect.

Selectmen voted Monday night, July 10, to approve 20 items included in the new regulations.

The regulations, drafted by the harbor committee and harbor master, are effective immediately, according to executive secretary Greg Doyon.

They range from limiting the overall length of boats in moorings to 45 feet, to charging $25 for any dinghy tied to town floats, awash and left unattended for 72 hours or more.

Harbor committee chairman Fritz Pfaffmann said that the regulations are an update of those from the early 1970s.

"There are some very extensive changes," said Pfaffmann, who explained that the changes are a result of several meetings as well as review by town counel.

He noted that a "no wake" policy governs the speed limit in Cohasset Harbor, as well as the Gulf and Little Harbor.

There had been a four knot limit.

The regulation states that "operation of boats in these Cohasset waters shall not cause a disturbing wake in close proximity to other boats, docks, piers, and floats that may cause them to ship water, lose equipment or endanger life, limb and/or property."

Also included is a state regulation prohibiting operation of a motor boat or personal water craft within 150 feet of any designated swim area in Cohasset Harbor.

The committee had originally proposed a $25 a day fine for a dinghy tied to town floats and left unattended for more than 72 hours. But that was changed to a $25 overall fine by selectmen who found the original suggestion "too steep."

Selectman Ned Tebbetts suggested that the town look at mooring fees to see whether they approximate the cost of operating the harbor.

"We'll be looking into all fees for next year, including boats," said selectmen chairman Burt Pratt.

"We need to review the whole issue," agreed Pfaffmann.

Some of the other regulations are:

*Mooring fees are due and payable by April 1 each year.

*Mooring location permits may not be sold, transferred, swapped, bartered or rented.

*No individual may be assigned more than one mooring location.

*Boat liveries, boat yards, boat clubs, and boat sales organizations which abut Cohasset Harbor must apply to the harbor master for extra guest mooring locations.

*No dinghy in excess of 12 feet in length shall be tied to town docks.

Budgets cut once again

Selectmen made additional operating budget cuts of $64,755 during their meeting Monday night, July 10.

The cuts are necessary to fund the police contract which has been signed and ratified by the police union and selectmen.

At the recent election, residents voted against funding a $65,000 override necessary to fund the contract.

About half the cut, $32,000, was assigned to the school department, according to executive secretary Greg Doyon.

The remainder of the cuts included $12,500 for a police cruiser, $5,000 from the tree and park department, and $15,335 for another police cruiser, the money for which was to have come from the stabilization fund, said Doyon.

The cuts, he said, were suggested during a meeting last week attended by Doyon, the school superintendent, school committee chairman, town accountant and advisory committee chairman.

"It makes sense to take the money out of departments which had money restored (by a $203,800 override approved by voters)," he said.

The cuts must be approved at a special town meeting to be held sometime in September, said Doyon.

Doyon said the special town meeting probably won't be held until September "to make sure we have all the key financial information available."

Fundraiser needed to keep athletic program

Committee member Barbara Bliss added, "But it is our intention to fund athletics next year."

Bliss also warned that if the fundraiser comes up short of the $26,000 total, there is a possibility that user fees may have to be increased to absorb the shortfall. "I'm worried there may be enough money to fund the fall sports (after a fundraiser), but there won't be enough for winter and spring sports," she said.

But Chatterton also noted that the higher the user fee, there is the increased possibility that fewer students will participate in the programs.

It was Supt. Hart's recommendation to the school committee that baseball and soccer continue at the junior high level on an intramural basis. The current junior varsity teams, comprised mainly of eighth grade students, will be discontinued in favor of the intramural teams. No students will be cut from these teams, he noted, and they will continue to serve as "feeder" teams into the varsity program.

A baseball coaching position will be consolidated, according to the superintendent. At this point it is not known whether there will be no varsity or no junior varsity baseball team next year when the position is consolidated, he said. That will depend on the number of students participating on those teams.

There is a proposal to cut one of the varsity football coaches. But that position will be reinstated with funds provided by the Cohasset Gridiron Club. According to Chatterton, there will be four coaches next year for about 40 students in the freshmen and varsity teams.

"I hate to see this as a precedent - that private organizations are funding the coaching that should be funded by the schools," committee member Russ Reidy noted.

An assistant hockey coaching position will be eliminated next year. Although the number of students participating in this sport are down now, Booster member Peter Whitman told the committee there are 36 youngsters from Cohasset currently in the Seahawks youth hockey program.

An assistant girls track coach will also be eliminated from the 1989-90 budget.

Chatterton warned that all the Cohasset boosters clubs must work together to make the fundraising event successful. Although there are no specific ideas on what that event will be, committee member Reidy suggested it be scheduled before the start of the school year. All money raised from the event will be spread evenly among the 17 school sports programs, Chatterton said.

such as neighbors of the proposed development.

Hurley had proposed a 60-unit residential condominium on 23 acres of land on Route 3A at the Cohasset/Scituate line. Twenty-eight units had been proposed for eight acres of land in Cohasset.

As part of its decision last Thursday, July 6, Cohasset's ZBA reduced that amount to 21 units.

Concerns about density had been raised by neighbors of the proposed development.The group, represented by an attorney, was also concerned about such things as additional traffic, location of units, drainage and sewerage.

However, the ZBA concluded that those and other issues raised are not "so insurmountable that they pose a risk to health, safety or welfare to a degree sufficent to overcome the obvious need for housing at all economic levels within the town."

The ZBA, in its written decision, ruled that no more than six buildings are to be constructed in the Cohasset portion of the project, and no building shall contain more than four units.

All structures in the Cohasset section are to be set back a minimum of 80 feet.

In addition, the board regulated the number of bedrooms in the Cohasset portion. Members had expressed concerns that the only planned three-bedroom units would be in the affordable category.

The ZBA specified that the affordable units include four, three-bedroom and four, two-bedroom units. In the market rate units, there are to be four, three-bedroom and nine, two-bedroom units.

The affordable units are to be evenly disbursed throughout all buildings in the Cohasset project, with at least one affordable unit per building, and the affordable units are to be indistinguishable from the market units of the same type.

The board also agreed that the housing partnerships in both towns develop a system of shared local preference in the project's affordable units.

Another requirement is that Hurley construct a one-way, exit only, paved connector road connecting the project's private access drive with Gannet Pasture Lane.

"This connector road will serve as a point of exit for Scituate-bound exiting traffic, thus avoiding the need for double left turns by such vehicles from the private access drive to Route 3A and from Route 3A onto Henry Turner Bailey Road," said the board.

Neighbors had opposed a proposed tie-in with Ledgewood Drive in Cohasset.The board said that proposal fulfilled no valid traffic flow objective.

In addition, the ZBA specified that no garages shall be constructed in the Cohasset project unless one is provided to each unit without separate charge.

The project's surface water drainage system is to comply with Cohasset requirements, and be designed in such a way that there is no increase in runoff from the site to adjacent parcels or to Route 3A.

In addition, it is to reduce the existing pre-development run off rate downstream beneath Route 3A and to Bound Brook by 10 percent.

The landscape design is to incorporate a generous, evergreen planted, bermed buffer along the property line separating the Cohasset project from adjacent properties in Ledgewood Estates.The buffer is to be planted with two staggered rows of trees with a minimum height of eight feet when planted.

The ZBA also designated that the Cohasset septic system be equipped with full standby auxiliary electical power provided by a gas powered generator of sufficient size to continue the uninterrupted efficient operation of the septic system.

In addition, a $100,000 escrow account is to be established for maintenance and repair of the septic system.

Another condition of the permit is that the applicant obtain a hydrogeological study of the project site and its relationship to Ledgewood Estates.Conducted by a licensed professional engineer specializing in hydrology, it is to be submitted to the board within 90 days of the permit.

Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. Debra M.Tranberg

MAINTAINING HEALTH

Since the mid-nineteenth century, the medical profession has maintained that most illness is caused by germs, harmful bacteria, and viruses transmitted to people through food, "catching" a cold, "coming down with a bug", or "it's been going around." Although it may be true that many of us are susceptible to various strains of bacteria and virus, many doctors of chiropractic maintain that germs do not always open the door to disease. Instead of blaming illness on germs, chiropractic helps the patient take control by insuring a strong nerve supply to every part of the body. This energy flow helps maintain all tissue cells in good health, denying fertile grounds in which germs can sustain themselves.

Utilize your energy in the "right direction" and call SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC today. Learn how to achieve and maintain a total state of well being so that each day may be more healthy and enjoyable. Located at 80 Front St., Scituate Harbor. Tel. 545-7388. By appt. around town

□ Remember a few weeks ago when I wrote what a beautiful job Mrs. Railsback and Mrs. Leggat had done with the Memorial Garden in the watering trough at the end of Beach Street? If you have been by recently, you will note that all their work was destroyed for no apparent reason. Why? The Cohasset Garden Club and those two wonderful women put money, time and effort into the Memorial to make our town more beautiful, and someone comes along and rips it apart!! Whoever you are, why not replant something pretty? Granted, you may not be able to create the pretty effect those women did, but you will restore their faith in human nature!

□ Cohasset welcomes little Ryan Joseph Barrow, son of Sheila and Joseph Barrow. Ryan was born on June 27 at 9:38 p.m. and weighed in at a hefty 7 pounds, 11 ounces. All is well at the Barrow house, Ryan is doing wonderfully well. How about Grandpa, Sgt. Barrow? We hope he is enjoying his grandson!

□ On June 13, 1989,Patricia Munroe (of Hull Street) and Linda Snowdale (of Mill Lane) were inducted into the Alpha Zeta Chapter of the Delta Kappa Gamma Society International. This is an honorary educational professional society. Membership in the society is based upon success in teaching, qualities of leadership and professionalism. Linda and Pat teach at the L.M. Jacobs School in Hull. Congratulations to you both, you should be very proud indeed of your honor!

□ We hear that the CHS Class of 1964 is having their 25th Class Reunion this weekend, so you are sure to spot familiar faces in and around town. It is said that a large group will be attending the actitivies. You know it will be fun. Jim Gallagher and Ed Brennock are heading the festivities. If you are part of that group, give me a call or drop me a line and let me tell everyone all about it!

□ In case you haven't heard, be sure to plan extra time if you need your birth, marriage, or death certificates. We have been spoiled for so long, able to walk right in and wait for it to be typed and sealed. The good old budget cuts will affect the paperwork involved, so you may have to wait a day or two longer than you plan.

□ The Cohasset Consignment Shop is having its summer clearance sale, pop in and help support this worthy outfit. They will be open until July 29, then they will close through Sept. 5. Help these hard working ladies of the Social Service League, and help yourself as well.

□ You can bet there are some excited 3rd graders, they announced the winners of the Bill of Rights art contest held by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce. We congratulate Patrick Hurley, Ted Reardon, Katie Buckley, Geneva McPhail, Paul Sheerin, Greg Bilton, Adam Sheerin and Megan Conley. They won $25 Savings Bonds. Good work, hope you got a chance to see it.

□ Don't forget, this is the last week to get your tickets to the benefit for the Fred S. Troy Scholarship Fund. The tickets are for the Willie Nelson show, the dates are July 18, 19 and 20. Call Clark Chatterton at 383-0560 for more details.

□ Some may wonder why Bill Ripley hasn't been seen "around town" lately. He is now living at the Cardigan Nursing Home, located at 59 Country Way in Scituate. Pop in for a visit, he would love to see you.

□ Congratulations to Roy Fitzsimmons who was recently elected chairman of the town government structure committee. Once again it's a case of ask a busy person....where does he find time to do all that he does, and do it so well?!!

□ For you Flea Market enthusiast's, set aside July 22. The First Baptist Church on Country Way in North Scituate will be holding theirs then. It begins at 9 a.m., refreshments will be served. If you want to rent a space, call 545-1986.

Swimmers get set to dive during the season's first swim meet last week.

□ Congratulations go to Meryl Graham, Deggie Martin, Martha Equi and Joan Chittick, four new directors that were recently elected to the Social Service League of Cohasset.

□ Congratulations to Robert Jackson on his selection for promotion to the rank of Commander US Naval Reserve. Robert Jackson, a Sergeant on the Cohasset Police Force is presently serving as Commanding Officer of Naval Reserve Mobile Mine Assembly Group 101.

□ There is a wonderful tribute to Bill Figueiredo, who left us last summer.

His wife, Diane, has hand carved a beautiful sign with his name and boat, which hangs over the ramp to his landing, at the end of Parker Avenue.

□ John M. Rattenbury of 1 Briarwood Lane, earned a bachelor of science in aeronautical engineering from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in New York.

□ Jeffrey Paul Crowell of 26 Plymouth River Rd., earned a master of business administration in management degree from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute.

□ We applaud Ann Senechal, who was recently honored by Johns Hopkins University for displaying high academic potential in a talent search conducted by the Center of the Advancement of Academically Talented Youth.

That's the news for this week...as Perry Como used to sing,'keep those cards and letters coming" (or call.) Your news is our news, after all!!

Waiting for the fall

The full effect of Proposition 2 1/2 probably won't be felt until the fall.

That is when some teachers won't return to the classroom, and classroom aides will be conspicuous by their absence. Until then, the report of school personnel cuts will simply be names on a page.

Parents will feel the true effect of Proposition 2 1/2 when their children are forced to walk to school rather than ride the familiar yellow bus. As soon as the revised and reduced bus routes are published, parents will surely register their complaints with the appropriate school administrators.

We were all warned that these cuts would occur if the larger override did not succeed, but it's difficult to envision the results until it actually happens. And it will. The school committee announced this week that $40,000 will be cut from the transportation budget. There's no way that will not be noticed.

The athletic department will be decimated without some extra money poured into that program. Right now, it looks as if the only thing that will save the current sports program is a major fundraiser.

When Proposition 2 1/2 first greeted us in 1981, the school sponsored a fundraiser to assist the injured athletic program. It was a successful event and kept the department intact for yet another year.

Once again, the public will be called upon to revive a program that will be seriously damaged without our financial help. School committee members went along with the fundraiser idea - the only solution to this year's emergency. But they warned that in the future, fundraising should not be used as a substitute for public funding of the public school system.

Even with the fundraiser, students and parents will feel the effect of the override when they are forced to pay user fees for team participation. This concept is not new, but many students will feel for the first time the effect of a tight budget when they are unable to participate in several sports.

Throughout the town, the effect of Proposition 2 1/2 may not be as visible, although town employees will certainly feel the consequences. Town hall will be closed to the public one day a week, departments will lose their overtime payrolls and municipal projects and purchases will be delayed.

We might as well enjoy the summer, because the forecast for this fall is not bright.

The Fishing Line

By Bill Bowers

The deep blue sea

The bluefish have arrived in force in Cape Cod Bay.

Reports are coming in from all quarters of anglers hitting choppers from Plymouth to Boston.

Wesley Holmes of Plymouth had several nice blues he caught off Gurnet Point, according to The Tackle Shop in Plymouth.

Evelyn Sarson at Mike's Bait in Kingston said bait fishermen using cut mackerel and live eels are hitting schoolie striped bass in Kingston Bay and off the Plymouth breakwater.

Remember, you must release all bass smaller than 36 inches long.

Incidentally, last week's column reported incorrectly that you must release all striped bass smaller than 38 inches long.

That was jumping the gun.

Although the limit is expected to rise to 38 inches Jan. 1, 1990, for the remainder of this year the legal minimum is still 36 inches.

Blues have been smashing a variety of artificial lures near the bell buoy at the mouth of the North River, reported Jerry Duffy at Mary's Boat Livery in Marshfield.

Hank Kucinski of Cohasset and Don McLeod of Norwell both had nice catches of bluefish from seven to 10 pounds.

Richard Krause of Marshfield took 15 stripers on seaworms just outside Cohasset Harbor. He brought home a 38-inch keeper and released the rest.

Jerry Wilkensen of Plymouth caught a trophy bass of 40 pounds, 9 ounces that hit a live menhaden drifted from a boat off Plymouth Beach, reported Bill Smith at Adams Tackle in Pembroke.

Paul Kelly of Marshfield weighed in another striper that tipped the scales at 31 pounds, 9 ounces.

Fluke are still a bit slow in Duxbury Bay, but boaters are taking a few by drifting cut baits of squid or mackerel. Don't anchor up, but let the boat drift to cover as much ground as possible.

There are giant bluefin tuna in Cape Cod Bay, where the stick boats already have harpooned quite a few. Trollers hauling squid daisy chains on Stellwagen Bank have raised some fish as well.

Roland Valentine of Duxbury fished a spinnerbait in a Duxbury pond and fooled a 7-pound, 10-ounce trophy largemouth bass. Valentine will get a state pin for his catch.

Bob Baggs of Scituate used a red-and-white Rapala Magnum to catch a 13-pound, 9-1/2-ounce bluefish at the northwest corner of Stellwagen, reported Mark Trask at Trask Tackle in Scituate. The fish was a lean 38-1/2 inches.

Charlie Rubino of Scituate trolled a rubber squid off Provincetown and came up with another blue of 11 pounds, 8 ounces.

Don Giacomozzi of Scituate caught a nice mess of 9-pound bluefish near the B-buoy due east of Boston Harbor.

Nick Dinardo of Scituate caught a 4-pound, 5-ounce largemouth bass in Lily Pond in Cohasset to take first place in the Trask Firecracker Bass Tournament. He won a trophy and a $50 gift certificate.

Alfred Rogers of Scituate took second prize with a 4-pound, 4-ounce bass from the Aaron River in Cohasset; Scott Elliot of Hull won third place with a largemouth of 4 pounds even from Cordage Pond in Plymouth.

Bluefish are hitting well in the Boston and Quincy areas, according to Pat Newcomb at Fore River Tackle in Quincy.

Todd McAdams of Hull caught a 13-pound, 8-ounce bluefish in the Weymouth Back River.

Other good spots for shore-bound anglers are the Fore, Neponset and Weir rivers and Wollaston Beach, especially two hours either side of high tide.

Boaters will find blues of 10 to 15 pounds in the triangle formed by Graves Light, Boston Light and the B-buoy.

Good fishing.

Point Allerton station celebrates centennial

By Marilyn Jackson
Mariner staff

As the Coast Guard celebrates its bicentennial this year, Massachusetts can take pride in its beginnings.

The first lighthouse in the country was built in Boston Harbor in 1716, and a year later, when a cannon was placed on the island to be fired during storms or fog, the site became the first fog signal in the country.

The first revenue cutter, the Massachusetts, was built in Newburyport in 1791.

And, the Massachusetts Humane Society spearheaded the first volunteer lifesaving service to assist shipwrecked mariners in the mid-1800s, establishing its first lifeboat station in Cohasset.

A station built by the federal government in 1889, the Point Allerton Life Saving and Coast Guard Station in Hull, will mark its 100th anniversary this weekend.

Special recognition will be given to Hull's most famous lifesavers, Capt. Joshua James, who joined a humane society boat crew at the age of 15 in 1842.

Legend repeats a story that as a lad of 10 he vowed to become a lifesaver after his mother and baby sister died in a shipwreck at Hull Gut.

During James' lifetime, he rescued more than 600.

He earned his first bronze medal for heroism at the age of 23.

During the famous Blizzard of 1888, James directed the rescue of five boats off Nantasket Beach.

His crew worked around the clock without food or rest to save 29 persons trapped on boats which were grounded by the storm.

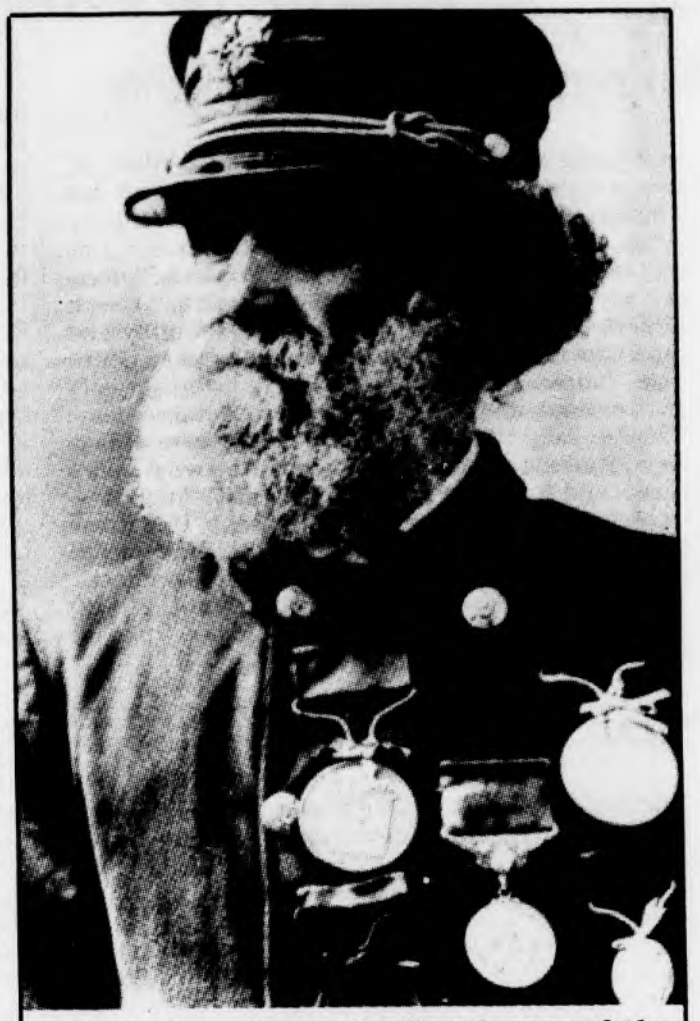
For those efforts the humane society and the federal government presented the captain with gold medals.

James spent most of his life working for the humane society, but in 1889 he joined the Life Saving Service and was appointed the first keeper of the new Point Allerton Life Saving Station in Hull. He was 62.

By that time, there were strict requirements to be a keeper of a Life Saving District or crew member.

Keepers had to be of good character and habits, able bodied, able to read and write, be under 45 years of age and be a master at handling boats, especially in rough weather.

James was well qualified and easily passed the physical examination. Twelve years later, he passed muster again.



At age 75, he died while he was drilling his crew in poor weather March 19, 1902.

He had steered his surfboat through the seas for more than an hour. When the boat was brought ashore, he jumped onto the beach and dropped dead.

"The tide is ebbing" were his last words.

A surfboat served as his coffin, and a funeral cortege of family and crew rode in a horse-drawn lifeboat.

Information about Capt. Joshua James was provided by Dr. Dennis Noble in A Legacy, the United States Life Saving Service, and Dr. Noble and PA3 Kenneth Arbogast in The Coast Guard along the North Atlantic Coast.

Lifesaver Joshua James, first keeper, to be honored

A weekend-long celebration of the 100th anniversary of the Point Allerton Life Saving and Coast Guard Station and its first keeper, Joshua James, begins Friday, July 14, in Hull Village.

The centennial is sponsored by the Hull Lifesaving Museum, in cooperation with the Coast Guard.

From 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. Friday, folksinger Ben Tousely will give a concert of Irish and French folk songs and sea chanties at the Hull Public Library.

From 8:30 to 10 p.m. the library and Village Fire Barn will be open for an art show by local artists of local scenes of Hull and the sea. The show will continue Saturday and Sunday from noon to 5 p.m.

Preceding the heritage parade at 10:30 a.m. Saturday will be a 9 a.m. ecumenical service honoring descendants of the station's lifesavers at the Hull United Methodist Church on Spring Street.

The parade, which will include Colonial Pipers bagpipe band, the Coast Guard, the Hull Marching Pirates and Gold Guard alumni, floats, antique vehicles, clowns and others will assemble at Kenberma Playground, near the Oakland House.

At noon a birthday cake and ice cream social will be held at the museum, 1117 Nantasket Ave. The museum will remain open until 5 p.m. for visitors to experience a "hands-on" station 100 years ago.

At midday, Hull Kidsfest will get underway at Mariners Park, Fitzpatrick Way, with pony rides, the Metropolitan District Commission's zoomobile and games and prizes will be offered.

From 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. folk dancing will be offered for young and old alike.

During the day, the Coast Guard station and two Coast Guard vessels will be open to the public from about noon to 5 p.m. both Saturday and Sunday.

Windsurfing is planned at Pemberton Saturday afternoon, unless the wind is great in the morning. If there is no wind, folks will try again Sunday.

Saturday's events will conclude with the Oceanic Brass Quintet at 8 p.m., sponsored by the Hull branch of the Rockland Trust Company, a harbor illumination of the mile-and-a-half coastline with flares with the sound of a lone bagpiper, Coast Guard Chief Michael Mone, and a dance at the Saltwater Club.

The Hull chamber of commerce will hold a pancake breakfast from 10 a.m. to noon at Mariners Park followed by the annual South Shore chowder fest at Hull High School from noon to 5 p.m.

A heritage house tour in Hull Village, featuring two of Hull's oldest houses built circa 1650 and Victorian summer homes will be held from noon to 4 p.m. Tickets are $10 each.

In addition, the historical society displays, upstairs in the Village Fire Barn, will be open.

From 1 to 2 p.m. the Coast Guard will fly mock rescues in a helicopter over Pemberton Bay.

For further information about weekend events, call the lifesaving museum at 925-5433.

Six stations dotted coast

There were several small boat rescue stations built along the South Shore coastline in the late 19th century, but only a few are active today.

The Brant Rock station was built in 1892 but was sold in 1963.

The station at Fourth Cliff, built in 1879, was destroyed by fire 40 years later and not replaced.

The one on the Gurnet in Plymouth, built in 1873, was disposed of in 1957 by the General Services Administration.

The Manomet Point station, built in 1874, was disposed of in 1955 by the GSA.

The North Scituate station, built in 1885, was discontinued in 1963.

The Point Allerton station, built in 1889 opposite Stoney Beach, is still in operation.

The building now houses the Hull Lifesaving Museum, and a new station was constructed at Pemberton Point.

Summer schedule on cable

Upcoming guests for July and August editions of 'Pierson to Person' on cable channels 3 and 53 are listed as follows: Thursday, July 13 — Thomas R. Hughes, Norfolk County Register of Probate; Thursday, July 20 — Dr. Edward Lees, Alcoholism in America; Thursday, July 27 — Massachusetts State Auditor Joseph DeNucci; Thursday, Aug. 3 — Dennis McCarthy and Daniel Croce, Ex-inmates at Plymouth: Drugs on South Shore; Thursday, Aug. 10 — Red Sox radio broadcaster Ken Coleman and Red Sox pitcher Dennis Lamp; Thursday, Aug. 17 — Barbershop group "Men of Harmony"; Thursday, Aug. 24 — Tax debate between James Braude and Francis Faulkner; Thursday, Aug. 31 — Massachusetts Inspector General Joseph R. Barresi; Thursday, Sept. 7 — Cohasset Chamber of Commerce: Donald Staszko, Daniel Leahy, and Wayne Sawchuck.

This program is seen each Monday evening at 6:30 p.m. on Channel 53 and Thursday evenings at 8 p.m. on Channels 3 and 53.

Minot's Light to be revisited

The Cohasset Historical Society will present the sequel to last summer's "Minot's Light Revisited" charter boat tour to and around the famous offshore lighthouse when "Minot's Light Revisited II" takes to the water Sunday, August 6.

Last summer's boat tour viewed the world-famous granite tower with its entire top section removed for major restoration work. This year the view will be of the restoration completed, and the unique lighthouse once again appearing as it has for the previous 128 years.

As before, this year's tour will depart and return to Government Island wharf at Cohasset Harbor. The charter boat again will be "Seabreeze," a Boston Harbor charter vessel, small enough to safely dock at the town's harbor facility. Because of its size, seating will be strictly limited aboard "Seabreeze." Thus, four separate sections of the tour will depart, each on the hour. Times of tour departures will be 1, 2, 3, and 4 p.m., with seating limited to about 35 persons each hour. Advance reservations are a must, with firm choice of hour specified. Cost per person will be $15 for Historical Society members, $20 for non-members, payable to Cohasset Historical Society, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset, MA 02025. Please include phone number in case a particular hour may be fully booked.

Parking for the boat tour will be at the parking lot of St. Anthony's Church, corner of South Main and Summer Streets. A shuttle will run to the Government Island wharf just before the hour and return when each segment docks at the pier. Refreshments will be available after the tour at the Society's Caleb Lothrop House, adjacent to St. Anthony's Church, where an exhibit of lighthouse-related pictures may be viewed.

Additional information may be obtained by contacting the Historical Society at 383-6930.

Oxfam reps. at Stop&Shop

This weekend, shoppers at the Super Stop & Shop on Route 3A in Cohasset can help the world's hungry help themselves.

Local volunteers from Oxfam America will staff a table outside the supermarket Saturday, July 15 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

They will distribute literature, sell T-shirts and raise awareness about the problem of hunger, according to Oxfam organizer Chris Savage of Scituate.

"Oxfam organizes self-help food projects all over the world. It's definitely a worthy cause, and we hope people will help out," he said.

Mammography screening

The Social Service League of Cohasset and the Board of Health Nurse sponsored a mammography screening in June. Mobile Diagnostics came from Wellesley to perform the X-rays.

The Mobile Unit operated to capacity for the one day visit. Because of a full schedule and to allow more women the opportunity to have a mammogram screening, the Social Service League is planning to repeat the clinic sometime in the coming Fall of '89.

Students name omitted

In an article published in last week's Cohasset Mariner, students who were recently recognized by Johns Hopkins University were listed, but the names of two Cohasset residents were omitted.

Three Cohasset eighth grade students were selected for displaying high academic potential in a talent search conducted by the Center for the Advancement of Academically Talented Youth. They are: Krista Ansberg, Bonnie Krueger and Ann Senechal.

Information corrected

There was incorrect information provided in last week's listing of the colleges which the 1989 CHS graduates will attend.

Michael Suhrbier will be attending St. Michael's College in the fall.

If there is more information from that list which should be corrected, please contact the CHS guidance department with that information. They will provide the accurate and official information to the Mariner.

LDS Sunday services

At the 9 a.m. Sacrament meeting Sunday, July 16, at the local Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 379 Gardner St. in Hingham, the sermon subject will be: Your Life — is it led by the Holy Ghost?

Bishop Bradley Johnson, spiritual leader, has invited Marilyn and Gary Irish of Marshfield to offer the sermon. Brother and Sister Irish have been long time members of the Hingham ward (congregation) holding positions of leadership in Priesthood, Primary and Relief Society.

Regular schedule of family worship at 9 a.m. followed by Sunday School for all ages will continue throughout the summer. Visitors are always welcome.

Teens receive awards

Six teenagers from Hingham, Cohasset, and Norwell were recipients of achievement awards at the annual Seminary recognition banquet held by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Seminary, a world-wide program of Scripture study for Mormon youths, meets locally five mornings a week at 6 a.m. throughout the school year.

Amy Arkell of Hingham has completed four years of Seminary which covers study of the Old and New Testaments, the Book of Mormon and Church history. Dan Arkell and Warren Lynch of Hingham have successfully completed a year of the four-year course, and Jon Garrison has completed his third year of study.

Mitch Mangum of Norwell and Todd Woodbury of Cohasset completed the year with honors.

Hull church survey results

A June survey of parishioners of St. Mary of The Assumption Parish in Hull found the majority favor a parish re-consolidation plan, even if this means selling existing parish property such as St. Mary of The Bay Church, St. Mary of The Assumption at Green Hill or the parish rectory.

Eight hundred and sixty parishioners responded to the survey. Of these, 684 said they supported the consolidation plan where all services will be held at a reconstructed St. Ann's Church. Another 176 people did not support consolidation, a plan requested by the Archdiocese of Boston to facilitate a central church for the parish and to save money.

When asked if they supported the selling of church property to facilitate consolidation, 553 said yes and 307 said no.

Obituaries

Amy M. Lawson

A memorial service was held July 12 at McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., for Amy (McDonald) Lawson, 76, of Cohasset, who died July 8 at Rest Haven Nursing Home, Braintree, after a long illness.

Mrs. Lawson was a retired waitress who had worked at the Red Lion Inn and Kimball's By The Sea restaurants in Cohasset.

Born in Nova Scotia, she was a 1930 graduate of Boston Girls Latin School.

Wife of the late William Lawson, she leaves three daughters, Nancy BerBerick of Hull, Roberta Figueiredo of Cohasset and Candace Eno of Moosup, Conn.; two sisters, Clarissa Mead of Scituate and Pauline Hardy of Concord, N.H.; nine grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Donations may be made to the American Cancer Society, 294 Pleasant St., Stoughton.

Fred Weisenfluh

A memorial service was held July 7 at Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland St., for Fred Weisenfluh, 85, of Cohasset, who died July 2 at Braintree Manor after a long illness.

Private burial was in the family cemetery in Ridgeway, Pa.

Mr. Weisenfluh was an employee of National Fuel for 41 years. He retired in 1969.

He was born in Ridgeway, Pa., and lived there before he moved to Cohasset 15 years ago.

He leaves his wife, Olive L. (Benson) Weisenfluh; a son, F. Allen Weisenfluh; a sister, Frieda Kifer of Wilcox, Pa.; and three grandchildren.

He was the son of the late Henry W. and Magnella (Ott) Weisenfluh.

Arrangements were by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Donations may be made to the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Rd., Cohasset, 02025, or to Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset, 02025.

Cohasset swim team logs first win of season

The Cohasset Swim Team began its 1989 season Friday, July 7 with a 410-204 victory over Scituate Harbor Yacht Club.

The list of first place winners which follows shows the depth of this year's team. The names of those swimmers with more than one first place finish are followed by the number of firsts they won last Friday: Jennifer Jackson (4), Jonathan deLima (4), Greg Bilton (4), Topher Henderson (3), Billy Baird (3), Brooke Anderson (3), Chris Kondrat (3), Katie Devine (2), Maureen Long (2), Hether Littlehale (2), Greg Shultz (2), John Brister, Lauren deVito, Tracey Reardon, Hillary Strong, Maria Kierce, Tina Rousseau, Melissa Rousseau, Tom Greco, Ted Reardon, Nick Welz, Matt Pierce, Caroline deLima, Burke Davis, Megan Connelly, Emily Henderson, Becky Golden, Bobby Mehan, Aimee Theriault, Sammy Baird, John Kissell and Mike Equi.

Congratulations to the swimmers and to all the swimmers whose seconds, thirds and fourths contributed to Cohassets hefty score. It was a real team effort. A special pat on the back goes to Lauren deVito who, although only 10, swam in the 12 and under category. Cohasset meets Duxbury Aqua Dux on Fri. July 14 at Cohasset.

Cohasset Divers Win

Jonathan deLima was first in the 16 and under age group, and younger sister, Caroline came in first in the 12 and under age group, as Cohassets Diving Team defeated the visiting Scituate Harbor Yacht Club team Friday, July 7. Cohasset divers finished second as well, with Alison Doherty in the 16 and under category and Dawn Meehan in the 12 and under category.

Stars of the Week

Coach Kate Anderson has announced the Stars of the Week for Cohassets Swim Team: 8 and unders, Greg Bilton and Brie McKenny; 10 and under, Patrick Leahy and Emily Henderson; 12 and under, Jamie Kondrat and Sarah Kirk; 14 and under, Becky Hackenberg and Time Brister; and 16 and under, John Kissel and Melissa Rousseau. Star of the Week awards are presented to those swimmers whose effort and team spirit deserve recognition.

Other team members whose spirit was rewarded by winning swim team were: Kerry and Greg Bilton, Katie Devine, Cara McKenney, Michelle Ward, Sawn Meehan, Greg Schultz, Scott Theriault and John Kissel.

Brooke Anderson and Topher Henderson relax momentarily after they recorded their first wins during last week's swim team competitions. Their victories helped pace Cohasset to a big win over Scituate Yacht Club. (Staff photo/Jane Lane)

Summer recreation programs listed

The Cohasset Recreation Department's second band concert will be held on Cohasset Common at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, July 18.

The 30-piece South Shore Concert Band will perform under the direction of Richard P. Whitmarsh. Concerts are free, through the generosity of the South Shore Playerhouse Associates, Inc. and Brockton Federation of Musicians.

Bring either blankets or lawn chairs to sit on, and insect repellent.

SUMMER PLAYGROUND

Currently there are over 180 children between the ages of 3 and 12 years of age enrolled in the summer playground programs. Each week, aside from the usual activities, there will be special activities, events, field trips, classes, etc., most of which will require pre-registration.

Most special activities registrations will be done at the playground for your convenience, except Music Circus registrations, which are completed at the recreation office on Thursdays from 9 a.m. to noon and from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m., two weeks prior to the actual registration date. No late registrations can be accepted for the Music Circus.

ADULT PROGRAMS

Many adult recreation programs continue throughout the summer months, such as adult golf and tennis lessons, aerobic exercise classes and dog obedience classes. Call the recreation office for more details.

Adult volleyball, held at the Gates School in Scituate, will not meet during July and August, but will resume during September. Details will be forth coming in early September.

BASEBALL CAMP

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct a baseball camp for ages 8 through 14 during the week of July 31, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday at the Deer Hill School Field.

The camp will be taught by Scituate High School varsity baseball coach David Hartnett. The fee for the program is $55 for the week. To register, call the recreation office at 383-6791. Checks must be made payable to: The Town of Cohasset.

Hartnett taught a very successful and popular program for last year and is a recent recipient of a Fullright Scholarship. The camp will be limited in number and registrations will be accepted on a first-enrolled basis.

SOCCER CAMP

The recreation department's summer 1989, soccer camp sponsored by North American Soccer Camps, Inc. will be held during the week of August 14, at Deer Hill School Field, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

A few openings remain. Interested children between the ages of 6 and 8 should call us immediately to reserve your place. The fee for this program is $80.

Each participant will receive a camp shirt and soccer ball. Checks must be made payable to: Town of Cohasset.

U.S.C.G.A. COURSE

Thirty-four participants, ages 11 through adult, have just completed The United States Coast Guard Auxiliary's Boating Safety Course, sponsored by U.S.C.G.A. Flotilla 1207, Cohasset Harbor and Recreation Departments.

All 34 class members passed the course, and will be awarded certificates of completion.

The course is for all ages, but is specifically designed for youth under age 16 who will be operating a craft with 25 horse power or more.

Plans are currently being made for another course, to be offered during September, 1989. Thanks to the officer's of Flotilla 1207 for their effort, time and expertise.

FACILITY PERMITS

The 1989 stickers are now mandatory for resident's who want to use the landfill, Sandy Beach parking lot or the Government Island/Edwin A. Young, parking lots.

The regular 29-hour per week issuance of stickers will end Saturday, July 22. Stickers will be issued for the balance of July and August from 10 a.m. to noon, Monday's, Wednesday's, and Friday's only, or by appointment, which can be made by calling 383-6791.

Summer Little League continue

Cohasset Little League Baseball is still active with its Summer Program well underway. The 10 year olds and under have so far played three games as part of the North River Tournament. Their record stands as two wins and one loss.

In the first game, Cohasset beat Kingston 13-8. Winning Pitcher Joey Magner did an excellent job. Solid hitting for Cohasset was displayed by First Baseman Greg Bilton, Shortstop Robby Buckley and Pitcher Joey Magner.

In their second game, Cohasset defeated Halifax 12-4. Pitcher Matt Lewis did a great job at the mound. Hitting in runs for Cohasset were First Baseman Greg Bilton, Shortstop Robby Buckley, Designated Hitter Paul Michael Quinton and Colton Ralston, who had an in-the-park homerun.

Cohasset lost their third game to Carver 20-3. Although Robby Buckley banged home 2 runs in the first inning, the third inning showed an explosive output of runs for Carver which overpowered the home team. The Carver Coach complimented Cohasset for its strong hitting, but Cohasset's weak defensive play displayed that day, was a contributing factor in the loss.

The team of 15 players is being coached by Kevin Lewis, Dave Buckley, Buddy Bilton and Kevin O'Connor. They play three or four games each week and also schedule one or two, two-hour practices each week to ready themselves for their opponents. The time and effort devoted to baseball by the coaches and players is a real tribute to the team. We wish them much success in the season ahead.

Senior center news . . .

Massachusetts Elder Affairs Secretary Paul J. Lanzikos warns elders about the risk of hyperthermia and provides tips on was to identify and prevent this serious and often fatal health hazard during the scorching summer months "most often heat stress victims are elderly and the effects of heat stress are serious," said Secretary Lanzikos. "The strain that hot weather puts on your heart can lead to heat exhaustion, heart failure, or stroke. By learning to identify warning signs associated with heat stress and by taking precautions, however, you can help to beat the heat this summer and remain healthy."

While heat stress can cause physical and mental changes, some signs are more serious than others. Mild signs of heat stress include feeling hot and uncomfortable and lack of energy or appetite. Unless persist, these signs are cause for caution but not alarm. However, if you experience any of the following serious signs, call your doctor or seek medical help: Dizziness, great weakness, dry skin (no sweating), rapid heartbeat, breathing problems, nausea, diarrhea, throbbing headaches, chest pain, vomiting or cramps. Your chances of getting sick in hot weather are increased by a weak or damaged heart, hypertension, problems with circulation, diabetes, previous stroke, overweight, infection or fever, diarrhea, drinking alcoholic beverages, or skin diseases or sunburn which may reduce sweating. In addition, many prescription drugs, such as aspirin and antihistamines, make you more vulnerable to the heat because they interrupt the body's automatic reflex to cool itself. If you take medicine for high blood pressure, nervousness, depression, poor circulation or sleeping, do check with your doctor or pharmacist for advice.

Staying cool is the best way to avoid heat stress. The following tips will help you beat the heat. (1) Find a cool spot, such as a cool room at home, an air conditioned shopping mall, library, movie theatre or your Senior Center (come and enjoy a good book.) (2) Take a cool bath or shower, water reduces body heat 25 times faster than air does. (3) Drink plenty of fluids, whether or not you feel thirsty. Avoid alcoholic and caffeinated drinks which interfere with your body's attempt to cool itself. (4) Wear light clothing. Wear a hat or use an umbrella for shade when outdoors. (5) Cook when it's cooler. Try to cook meals during the early morning and late in the evening. Avoid hot meals and heavy foods, which adds heat to your body. (6) Slow down. Physical activities produce body heat. For more information or help, call the COA office at 383-9112.

NEW DRIVING COURSE FOR 55 & (ALIVE) MATURE DRIVERS

55 Alive/Mature Driving, an innovative, classroom driver retraining program, designed to help older persons improve their driving skill. Cohasset Council On Aging will be offering the course September 20 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Council office in the function room of the community Center, 3 No. Main St.

Developed by the American Association of Retired Persons, (AARP), 55 Alive/Mature Driving is the first comprehensive driver retraining course geared to the specific needs of older motorists. The course material covers the effects of aging and medications on driving, basic driving rules, license renewal, local traffic hazards, adverse road conditions, energy saving and accident prevention measures. Research shows that older drivers are involved in more accidents than their middle aged counterparts when the record is based on actual miles driven. The physical changes of aging create difficulties for many older drivers, when yielding the right of way, backing, turning, changing lanes, and entering and leaving expressways. However, research also indicates that older persons can improve their driving abilities through additional training, attention and practice, enabling them to maintain their driving licenses longer while driving safer. This is the ultimate goal of 55 Alive/Mature Driving.

Any persons 55 years of age or older are eligible to participate in the program by calling the Council On Aging office 383-9112. The course fee is $7 for the two (2) day course. Check or money order can be sent to Cohasset COA, 3 No. Main St., Cohasset, 02025.

MASSACHUSETTS VOTER HALL OF FAME

The office of the Secretary of State is pleased to announce that in 1989, they will again recognize the long time voters and induct them into the Mass Voter Hall of Fame. Eligibility requirements for prospective Hall of Fame members are as follows:

THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
NORFOLK DIVISION

DOCKET NO. 89P1689E1

Estate of LOUISE J. WHEELWRIGHT late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK.

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that WALTER C. WHEELWRIGHT, Jr., of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK be appointed executor named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on August 16, 1989.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the fifth day of July, one thousand nine hundred and eighty nine.

Committee to go forward with cemetery plan

"Apru town meeting deemed that the cemetery get underway," he said.

At the special town meeting in May, residents voted not to reconsider the article, which meant that the April town meeting action stood, he said.

However, the debt exclusion articles at both the election and special election were defeated by residents.

If necessary, Pratt said he will go back to another special town meeting and talk about the cemetery again.

Such a town meeting must be held to rescind the borrowing orders approved at town meeting but defeated at the ballot.

The cemetery is planned for 14 acres of land which had been under the control of the school committee until it was transferred to selectmen for use as a cemetery.

It is part of a 70-acre parcel which runs from the Osgood School to the Deer Hill School bounded by Pleasant St. on Old Pasture Road, with frontage on Sohier St. and Route 3A.

Seven other sites in town were considered, but the school committee land was deemed the most appropriate.

Bounded by gentle sloping hillside to the west, with two brooks to the north and east, the site is about 1400 feet from the Deer Hill School.

"With various interesting ledge out cropping, the site lends itself to a peaceful setting," said the committee in its report.

"The 14 acres lay out in sections that could be developed in phases with nearly 5,000 graves in phased development.

"Currently there are about 75 burials per year in Cohasset (not all are newly purchased graves) giving this site a potential life of nearly 100 years."

Engineering, survey, plans and specifications were estimated to cost more than $75,000. But that amount was reduced to $50,000 because a $25,000 survey will be done for no charge by the Norfolk County Engineers.

"That's why we are seeking $50,000, not $75,000," said Pratt.

But the Norfolk County Engineers won't do the work until they know that there is funding available.

In addition, about $400,000 in construction funds, for the first phase of development of about 2,500 graves, will be sought at the 1990 town meeting, according to Pratt.

Total construction cost is estimated at $1.1 million.

But Pratt feels a strong case can be made because of the money which would come into the town from the sale of graves.

The committee feels the price of a grave should be raised to nearly $600. Then the total sale price of all 5,000 graves would be about $3,000,000, he said.

Pratt noted that Cohasset, which has three town cemeteries, will run out of graves in 1991. Massachusetts law requires cities and towns to provide burial place within its boundaries.

The committee had thought that the town might be able to buy back some unused lots at existing cemeteries.

"But it has been a bit of a chase around," said Pratt. "We are not always sure if a lot is vacant."

He said the depletion of graves is not a problem which caught the town by surprise.

"The 1961 Benjamin report said there was expected life of 30 years in town cemeteries," said Pratt.

"The Planning Board in 1977 cautioned that there were about 10 years of available graves left."

Funds for a consultant were approved by the town in 1987.

Pratt said he wasn't surprised that the ballot question regarding the cemetery was not approved.

"It was the mood of those who went to the ballot box to vote no on everything," he said.

Only two items, an override and a defibrillator, passed.

Pratt said he thinks the town can find $13,000 in its 1991 operating budget for the cemetery project.

"Of course there is $13,000 in the budget," he emphasized. Pratt did not point to any particular portion of the budget where the money could be found.

If construction of the new cemetery can start by the late summer of 1990, plans will stay on schedule, according to Pratt.

The first burial would take place in the spring of 1992, about when the town will run out of space.

"If not, we are going to be in a jam," he said. "That will push us back a year."

Pratt doesn't think alternative funding is a possibility for the cemetery.

"People who give away money, don't like to do things that should be tax supported," said Pratt.

He added that the cemetery has to be owned by a non-profit organization or a municipality.

Once the new cemetery is constructed, the town shouldn't have to worry about a new one for quite some time, he said.

"It has to be done now, " he said," and it will last for 75 to 100 years."

State budget woes leave officials and residents reeling

Leaders predict trouble ahead

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Gov. Michael Dukakis' direct veto of $100 million in local aid could cost Cohasset $125,229, according to an estimate from the Massachusetts Municipal Association.

And that doesn't include Dukakis' "conditional" veto or freeze of $110 million in local aid which could double Cohasset's loss.

But those losses could be softened a bit since the town accountant, mindful of possible cuts, underestimated the local aid by $70,000 in planning the 1990 budget.

Still, cutting any amount from a bare-bones budget will be a tough assignment for town officials who have already wielded a sharp knife over budgets.

And the likely victims will be personnel, most officials say.

"We're going to be in a lot of trouble," said selectman chairman Burt Pratt.

"There's no way we can do it without trimming someone pretty drastically," said Pratt. "I presume we'll have to have more budget meetings.

"We've got to open up budgets where a number of cuts have already been taken," said Pratt. "Plus we've had to find money for the police contract."

Pratt said he didn't know where the budget cuts would be made, but he assumed that half would be on the town side, and half on the school side.

"That would be the logical way to do it," he said.

Pratt noted that there isn't much in the budget to

Sen. Golden: Shrink government

Cohasset and Hingham's legislators split on the state bailout plan for fiscal 1989 - which will hike state income taxes by 15 percent for an 18-month period.

But state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray who vehemently opposed the tax hike and state Sen. Bill Golden who approved the tax were in agreement on this point: state government must shrink soon.

Regarding the income tax hike, Golden said, "It was the only responsible thing to do - which was a fiscally conservative step - to pay those bills."

The state intends to bond $800 million to offset nearly a $475 deficit for fiscal 1989 and to pay off Medicaid bills, some of which date back to 1975.

"There was no alternative," said Golden. "I believe the state should not be in the position of not paying its bills.

"It should not be a debtor and write bad checks."

"I don't think anyone understood the extent of the past bills," said the Weymouth legislator.

"It's much more important to acknowledge how wrong things have gone and take care of the debt than to hide it from the public," he continued.

"The Republican party intentionally confused the issue. We are paying for existing debt.

"Frankly that's why we have a $3 trillion federal deficit because nobody for years said, "Let's bite the bullet, pay what we owe and tighten our belts in the future."

Golden said the people want government to tell it like it is. "To vote against (paying the debts) is a real betrayal of the public trust."

Rep. Murray: Taxes will hurt

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner Staff

"It's unfair to the taxpayers," said Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) about cuts in local aid and increases in taxes.

"It's just been a horrendous situation when you figure all the money we had and it's gone," said Murray.

Gov. Michael Dukakis recently vetoed $100 milion in local aid which could cost Cohasset $125,229 and Hingham $337,895.

And that doesn't include the governor's "conditional" veto, or freeze, of $110 million which could double each town's losses.

"I'm very, very annoyed with the governor," said Murray. "There are so many other areas he could have cut.

"For instance, let's cut out a lot of administration, the $60,000 to $80,000 a year personnel."

Murray said there are departments which could also be cut.

"I file legislation ever year for my Sunset Bill," she said."Every five years, we would have an investigation of every department in the commonwealth.

"If there is overlapping, which we all know there is, or a department whose need has gone by,then wewould close that department."

Murray also criticized the public works department.

"When they had a good number of engineers,

Elderly residence plan for former Cox estate under consideration

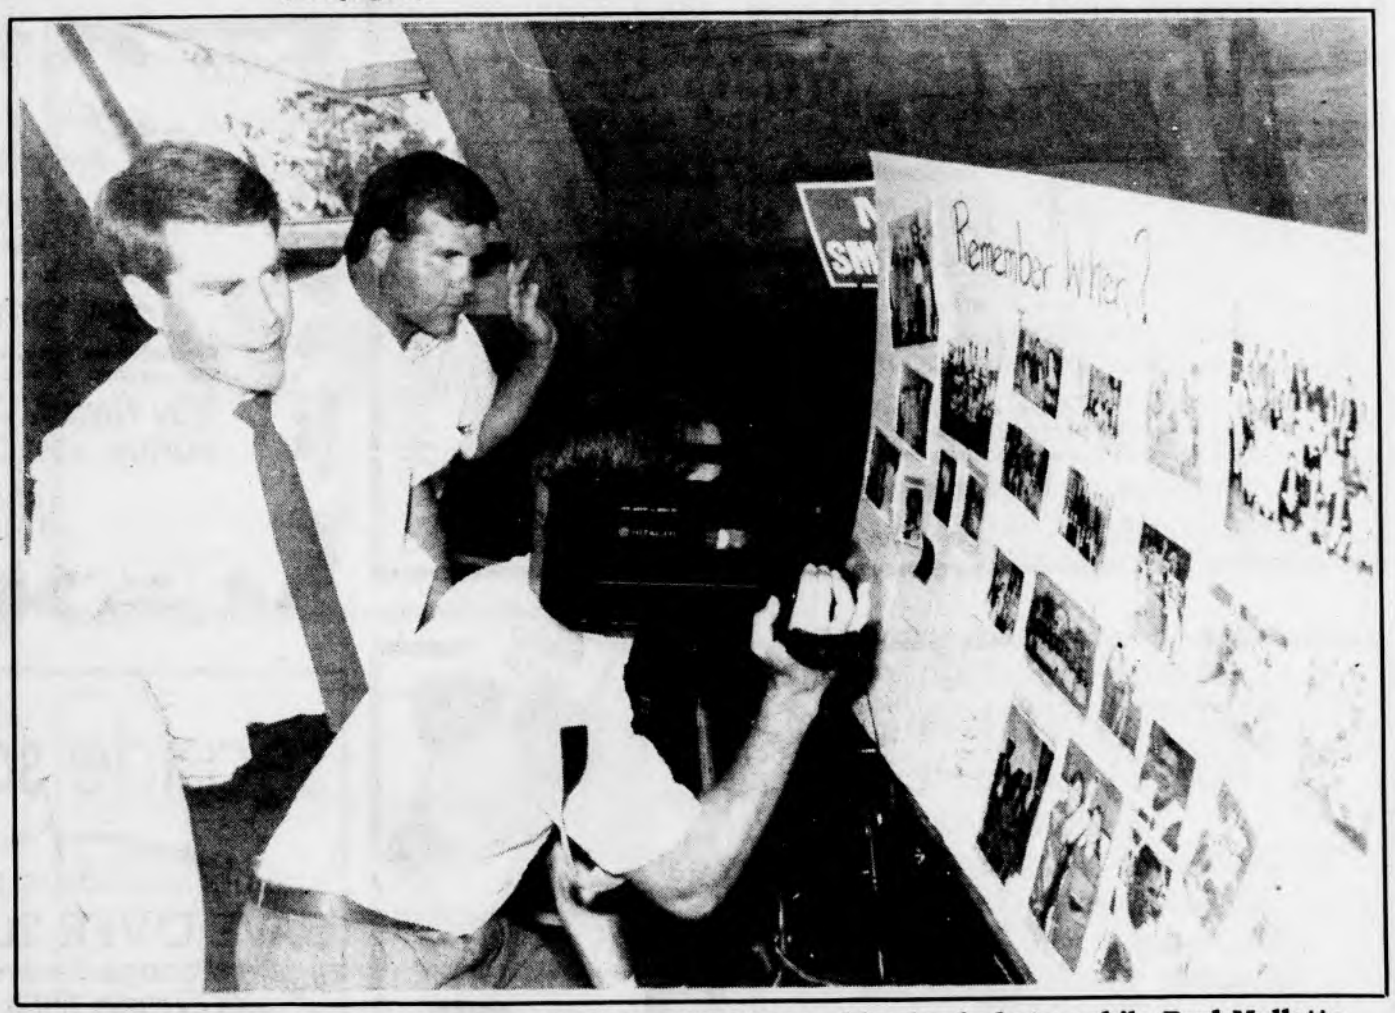
By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

There's at least one buyer interested in purchasing the former Oaks estate on Cohasset Harbor.

The 38-room mansion, once owned by millionairess Jessie Cox, is on the market for $3.7 million. And although local realtor Tom Hamilton of Dean and Hamilton, says there are several people interested in the property, only one has made his intentions public.

Charles Regulbutl of West Hartford, Conn. came before the appeals board last week to discuss his "very, very" preliminary plans for the property. He emphasized that no purchase agreement has been signed, and as yet he has even to speak with the owners, MTC Associates III.

Regulbutl of Konover and Associates, a management and development firm in West Hartford, told appeals board members last week that the company would like to convert the harborside home into residences for the elderly.



It would not be a health care facility or nursing home, he explained this week. "It would simply be a residence for ambulatory elderly who want the companionship that this home would provide," he said. At this point, Regulbutl said, it is too early to determine how many "suites" could be included in the home. "I guess that would be a function of what is legally allowed by zoning and what our needs would be," he added.

Because there have been no formal negotiations to purchase the property, Regulbutl said Konover and Associates has not conducted a market survey to determine a need for the facility, or engineering tests to calculate the feasibility of the project.

"Until we have an agreement, we really don't know what's going to happen. We can't say now if there would be any changes to the exterior. It's too preliminary at this point," he added.

Konover and Associates has constructed elderly health care facilities along the Northeast coast, but 25th reunion is a 3-day party

By Merilyn de Vos
Mariner staff

A 25-year high school reunion is a big event.

Sandra Dowding Lorgeree, a member of Cohasset High School's class of 1964 now living in Halifax, put it best when she said,

"It's really special. It's like 25 years of marriage. They've gone all out in celebrating (the reunion.) There will even be a biographical booklet on all of us."

Lorgeree was one of over 100 alumni and spouses attending a weekend-long celebration in Cohasset, July 14-16.

This was only the second reunion of the class of 1964. A 10-year gathering was sparsely attended.

But last winter, two cousins in the '64 class, Ronald and Donald Massa, still living in Cohasset, sat around with a few other class members and decided to form a committee to plan for the 25-year event.

Lack of vehicle questioned

A Forest Avenue resident has written to selectmen that she is "appalled that our animal control officer does not have a town-owned vehicle in order to carry out his work."

Deborah E. White said that she recently contacted animal control officer William Quigley when a stray cat wandered into her garage.

Quigley told White he did not have a van or suitable vehicle to transport animals to the appropriate facilities.

"It is understandable that he preferred not to use his own car for transporting animals, as in the past, animals had caused destruction of the inside of his vehicle," said White.

"Officer Quigley was working in his office late that evening, but at our urging, he did interrupt his duties at the office and came by in his car to transport the cat to Dr. Smith's office.

"He did this as a special favor, and I very much appreciated his dedication and willingness to assist me."

White said that Quigley should not be expected to use his private automobile in order to accomplish his duties.

"Something must be done to rectify this situation," she said. "He mentioned that he may have access to one of the police cars when they receive new vehicles later this year. I hope that will be the case.

"However, what must the officer do in the interim? The animal control officer definitely should have some sort of small truck or van for the transportation of animals."

She asked whether there was money in the budget for a "good used van."

"If an ad were placed in our local paper, do you think some kind person would donate a vehicle?" she asked.

White called Quigley a "caring, hard-working individual who deserves more."

"He is doing, with the transportation handicap, a fine job -- but a his personal expense.

"My concerns are for Officer Quigley as well as the animals who are in need of our help.

"How many dogs, cats, etc. are not receiving the attention that they, too, deserve because of a lack of transportation?

"As you know, we pay enormous taxes to the town of Cohasset. Cannot some of those monies go towards an extremely worthy and humane cause?"

Field renovation project

The chairman of the Milliken Field study committee will discuss with selectmen a proposal to fund the $280,000 renovation project from the town's fiscal 1991 budget.

The study committee decided at its meeting last week that plans for the field renovation and expansion should not be discarded. Chairman Wayne Sawchuk will meet with selectmen July 24 to discuss whether the project can go forward.

Town meeting in April supported the project, which also required funding by a debt exclusion override. The override, however, was defeated in the town election. When voters were given the opportunity in May to rescind their previous approval of the project, they rejected that option. But in a special election held last June, voters once again defeated the override which would have appropriated the money for the project.

The study committee felt that the overwhelming approval given to the project by two town meetings demonstrated strong support for the renovations. However, the two override election defeats indicate that residents do not want to pay higher taxes for the project, according to the committee.

The committee members will ask selectmen whether any money will be available in fiscal 1991 to finance the field project. If certain town debts are repaid by that time, committee members feel there may be enough money to complete the field expansion and renovation.

Engineering work at the field has cost the town only $2,500 because Norfolk County engineers did much of the preliminary work at no cost. Plans call for expanding the Milliken/Lillard fields into five football-sized fields.

Forty-eight households in Cohasset received fuel assistance during 1988-1989, according to South Shore Community Action.

The households received a total of $26,050.75, according to the action council in a report to selectmen.

Among the other towns listed were Hingham, with 116 households receiving $55,093.37; Scituate, 149 households receiving $72,132.87; Norwell, 45 families receiving $23,364.85; and Hull, 305 families receiving $138,625.34.

Recycling-Transfer Facility update

As of fiscal year 1990, which began July 1, budget reductions eliminated the position of recycling monitor at the Cohasset Recycling-Transfer Facility.

Residents are asked to observe the following rules.

GLASS: Clear and green glass only. Please rinse glass and remove caps, rings, and metallic seals on wine bottles. Labels can be left on.

ALUMINIUM: If possible, please remove strapping from aluminum chairs. Use a magnet (refrigerator magnets work well) to test if cans are aluminum. If it sticks, it's not aluminum.

BRUSH: No longer accepted. Only grass clippings, leaves and chipped material can be left in the compost pile.

APPLIANCES: There is a $10 charge for any large appliance (stove, washer, water heater, etc.). Pay the landfill supervisor directly. (Checks preferred)

TIRES: Cost is 75 cents per tire without rim; $2 with rim for passenger cars; $5 for unmounted tires. (Checks payable to Oxford Tire)

HOURS OF OPERATION: The landfill is closed Monday, Tuesday and Thursday and open Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

FACILITY STICKER: Vehicles must have a red 1989-90 sticker which is available at Town Hall Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 10 a.m. to noon through Aug. 25. Fee is $7.

Officials clash about ledge cost hikes

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner Staff

The health board and selectmen are tentatively scheduled to meet Thursday, July 20, at 7 p.m. at Town Hall to resolve a $30,000 discrepancy involving the amount of ledge at the site of the town's planned transfer station.

Before that meeting occurs, officials hope to talk with principals of SEA Consultants, the project engineers, about compensation for the cost overrun.

Original estimates by SEA were that 50 cubic yards of ledge would have to be removed from the site at the town's Cedar St. Landfill at a cost of $5,500.

But there were actually 600 cubic yards at the site, and cost of removal was $60,000.

The discrepancy was the topic of a meeting Monday night between the two boards, transfer station building committee, and representatives of SEA Consultants Inc.

About half of the $60,000 was included in the first payment to the contractors, Sciaba Construction Co.

Selectman also agreed to pay another $34,000 in construction costs, but the final $30,000 for ledge removal was withheld until the matter is resolved.

Selectman Diana Kornet proposed that the town pay one third of the cost, and SEA pay two thirds.

"I don't think the town should make a $30,000 adjustment," said Kornet.

"I think you are being extremely charitable," said Selectman Chairman Burt Pratt.

"We didn't blow it," contended Paul F. Gabriel of SEA. "We did a good job."

Town boards questioned why boorings for ledge weren't done within the footprint of the $472,000 transfer station.

But Doug Burkhardt, project engineer, said the decision was made to do boorings in areas that were accessible and not heavily wooded.

"Wouldn't it have been better to have one booring close to the site (of the transfer station) rather than seven farther away?" asked Kornet.

"One booring would never satisfy our needs," said Gabriel. "We try to do as many as possible."

"We were working on a very limited budget, and there was steep, wooded hillside. We found two to eight feet of cover material, made some assumptions and took it to the next phase."

"Don't you think it would have been wise to tell the client it might require more money to do boorings where the building would exist?" asked health board member Michael Sullivan.

"It would have been better to spend $10,000 for extras boorings, than $60,000 now," said Kornet.

"If we knew we would spend $60,000 on ledge, we might have relocated the transfer station to another area," said health board chairman Bill Baird.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle spoke of SEA's good reputation.

"But a mistake was made," said Laugelle, who suggested a meeting with SEA principals.

"We've just got to sit down and say, 'what can you give us in regard to your mistake?'"

"We did everything we should," reiterated Gabriel. "It was an underestimate of ledge. Nothing is certain."

But Baird called the discrepancy "a gross error of judgement on your part."

He said that the town could have received a lower rate for removal of the ledge if it had known the higher amount involved.

"We could have gotten $65 to $70 a yard, rather than $100," he said. "That comes to $18,000.

"It seems to have been a real error on your part," said Baird.

"There is room for negotiation," said Gabriel, who told the town boards he would discuss the matter with the contractor.

Town counsel Richard Henderson said "it appears there is a certain degree of responsibility for the error on the part of the engineer."

"Maybe they should have given the town the option of spending more money for more boorings," said Henderson.

Town boards also talked about changes in the design of the transfer station, proposed by SEA Consultants, to compensate for the unanticipated ledge removal costs.

The changes, and the money they would save, include : delete a retaining wall, $3,000; relocate the recycling area $3,675; delete top soil and seed for landscaped area, $8,000; delete chain link fence, $3,250; reduce paving at existing recycling area, $10,530; delete two of three drains for transfer station's upper level, $3,000.

CUSTOM TILE DESIGN
Selecting ceramic tile for the kitchen floor not only allows the homeowner to enjoy a premium floor covering, but the floor can be customized as well. Most people take the step from a solid-color floor to a custom-designed one by creating a border. Generally, the border has an accent color and outlines the physical layout of the base cabinets. However, a more adventurous look at tile design reveals that there is no limit to the pattern of tile placement. It can take a symmetrical geometric form, or it can assume a zig-zagging step pattern. Truly contemporary kitchens can accept post-modern designs spiked with multi-colored audacity. The place to start any tile design is on graph paper where each block can represent a single tile.
Choosing a tile pattern where you can get the most design on your floor means you must have a floor plan with the maximum amount of space. To get the best layout for your kitchen come to kitchen design associates. We know how to set up a kitchen for the maximum efficiency and beauty. Your cabinets and appliances will be lined up in proportion to your room's size and shape. With the help of cabinets by Poggenpohl and Millbronk, you'll get the most storage with the sleekest units in the best possible position. For a complete look, come to us at 962 Washington St., Rt. 53, Hanover. Tel. 826-4121.
HINT: Laying tiles diagonally to the walls gives an illusion of space to narrow floors.

School board supports plan to reorganize administration

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The school committee last week endorsed a proposal to reorganize the central office administration. They hope to save some money with fewer personnel while making that office more efficient.

The proposal came after a study this spring indicated that Cohasset had an insufficient number of central office administrators. In that grant-funded study, Dr. Robert Whalen, a retired school superintendent, recommended that Cohasset employ four central office administrators, including a superintendent, assistant superintendent, a director of special needs, and a director of guidance and curriculum.

In an effort to meet the needs cited in the study at a reduced expense, Supt. Stephen Hart recommended that no new assistant superintendent be hired after Richard Streeter retired in June. Instead, he suggested that a Director of Pupil Services be employed to administer the special education, guidance and testing programs. It is, he explained, a consolidation of the assistant superintendent's position with a director of guidance.

He also recommended that the central office bookkeeper's position be expanded to a bookkeeper/accountant. He suggested that the position of enrichment teacher, which was to be eliminated, be reinstated with expanded responsibilities to include the coordination of curriculum.

Supt. Hart also recommended that a part-time business clerk could be established to supervise the transportation budget, along with the preparation of end-of-year budget reports and financial plans. That person would also file and prepare bills and prepare the payroll.

"This allows us to fill those tasks of curriculum, special needs and the budget which were recommended by the study, although not to the extent recommended," Supt. Hart said. "It offers the promise of additional efficiency and at the least cost."

The superintendent said until the people are employed, it would be difficult to say how much money will be saved by the administrative reorganization. But he said the change would be more economical and efficient for the schools.

In an effort to meet the curriculum needs of the secondary schools, a curriculum council will be established to assist the enrichment teacher/curriculum coordinator. The primary overseer of the curriculum at that level, Supt. Hart explained, will be the department chairmen.

Although the committee supported the recommendation, several expressed regret that they could not go forward with the type of plan outlined in the administrative study. Committee member Ralph Kidder refused to endorse the plan, saying it impacts the committee's ability to provide sufficient management control over the schools.

"It's not ideal," chairman Barbara Bliss agreed, "but we have to be realistic about our financial constraints."

Committee member Nancy Sandell said she was nervous about the coming year and the financial problems that will once again confront the school system. She said it will take a lot of work by administrators and teachers to accomplish the schools' long range goals in light of those problems.

Cox estate plan for elderly residences

this would be their first non-health-care residence for the elderly. Regulbuti said he has had experience with both types of complexes.

"Whatever we do, if we purchase the property, it would be in keeping with that neighborhood and the character of the town," he stated. "But at this point, it's impossible to say what will happen. We may have an agreement sometime in the future, or we may not."

The Oaks was owned by Jessie Cox, the granddaughter of Clarence W. Barron, owner of the Wall Street Journal and founder of the financial weekly, Barron's. She inherited the land after Barron's death in 1928 and had the Georgian mansion constructed on the site.

After her death in the early 1980's, the Oaks has had two owners. The Yankee Companies acquired the property in 1983 and converted it into corporate headquarters. They converted many of the first floor rooms and renovated the entire interior.

MTC Associates III bought the property in 1987 for about $2.3 million. Their plans to construct a private "dockominium" marina around the harbor property were strongly opposed by many residents and town officials. Town meeting rejected the marina plan in December, 1988, and soon afterward the owners put up the for sale sign.

The next step for Konover and Associates is to talk with the owners of the Oaks and attempt to negotiate a sale. If it appears that will occur, Konover will begin surveys and research to determine whether such a facility is needed in this area.

"I would assume it's going to take several months before we're ready to appear before town boards on a formal basis. We have a lot of engineering and legal work to do first if an agreement is reached," Regulbuti stated.

He appeared before the appeals board last week after contacting secretary Barbara Power and inquiring about the statutory process. She invited him to the meeting to discuss his preliminary plans. "I'm a little unused to coming before a town board without being fully prepared, but I wanted to make an appearance since I was invited," Regulbuti said.

"But at this point, any plans we have are very premature. It's all very exploratory and we don't want to get any neighbors disturbed or unenthused about what we might propose there," he added.

Nuclear plant assessment study

U.S. Rep. Gerry E. Studds recently called on the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) to conduct an Environmental Assessment of the effects of operating Plymouth's Pilgrim Nuclear Power Plant prior to allowing any further increase in the power level.

In his letter to NRC Chairman Kenneth Carr, Studds said federal law — and the agency's own implementing regulations — require environmental assessments for all licensing and regulatory actions.

Such a regulatory action occurred last December, he argued, when the NRC's Commissioners voted to allow the Pilgrim plant — closed for three years by safety, management and emergency planning deficiencies — to resume operations.

The NRC claims that Boston Edison — the plant's operator — could technically have restarted the plant at any time without NRC approval.

Agency officials argue further that, for this reason, the commissioners' vote was not a regulatory action, and therefore not subject to the environmental review requirements of federal law.

Town clerk requests hour increase

The town clerk said she will ask selectmen to increase the hours of one of her employees with extra funds Cohasset will receive since it recently withdrew from the Norfolk County dog system.

Town Clerk Frances Marks said she will ask that the hours of employee Jackie McGuire be increased from 20 to 25 "so that we can continue to offer good service to the town."

McGuire's hours were reduced from 30 due to budget cuts. As a result, birth, marriage and death certificates are no longer available while residents wait in the town clerk's office.

"We will mail out the certificates, or people can pick them up," said Marks.

McGuire also works on dog licenses, according to the town clerk.

A portion of each dog license fee had been sent to the county, explained Marks. Some of it is later returned.

From January through June of this year, $3,151.25 was sent to the county, she said. Town clerk's fees, which go into the general funds, totalled $1,023.75, and retainer's fees, for such things as education, amounted to $1,289, according to Marks.

But none of the money has gone to the town clerk's office which handles the dog licenses, said Marks.

She said McGuire's lost hours will really be felt during the office's busy time preparing for the census in January.

"I can't see how we are going to do it without the extra hours," said Marks. "Everything will fall way behind if we don't get more hours.

"I feel it is only fair that some of the money should come back to this office since it says town clerk's fee."

Marks said she would also like to discuss with selectmen rules and regulations relating to dogs which will now be needed.

"Included in these regulations should be the requirement to license dogs, license period, penalties for failure to license, licensing fees, lost tags, kennel licenses, etc., " she said in a letter to selectmen.

"I feel where my office is involved with most of the paper work which in part includes notices sent out, licenses issued, dog reports, turnovers to the treasurer/collector, etc. that I should have a great deal of input into these new regulations," she said.

Marks said she will go along with the status quo until the selectmen act.

"It's our slow time right now," she said. "So it is working out for today. But when it comes to the first of the year, that will be our busy time. So we want to have it resolved by then."

Govt. efficiency urged

Golden added he proposed two measures in the Senate which would have "down-sized" government but neither was embraced by the House.

One measure was to establish a sunsetting commission which would require an activity or a department to justify its existence, rather than to continue on ad infinitum once it is established.

The other proposal was to create a Grace Commission, similiar to the one on the federal level, which looks at the budget and identifies areas of waste and political cuts.

"Let's bring in the private sector," said Golden. The Grace Commission was composed of private individuals.

"I think we have an opportunity to shake up and reorganize state government. Otherwise we won't have the efficiency and productivity to avoid fiscal problems.

"This is necessary for institutional change or we are condemned to repeat our problems."

Golden said a similiar commission on the state level was established in 1979 by Gov. Dukakis during his first term and completed by Gov. Edward King.

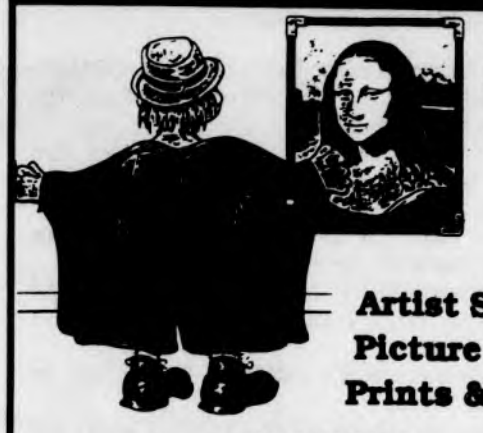
Airport guide at library



"New England Air Traveler's' Bill of Rights" produced by the people who run Logan International Airport has been a hot item for circulation in the past month, according to Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray.

The free Massport brochure has entered its second printing of 15,000 to meet demand for the slender consumer guide.

For those who have tried to find their way around airlines switchboards, the booklet contains this information: the direct consumer complaint and information phone numbers of the 35 major airlines serving Logan.

For a free copy of the guide, Rep. Murray has supplied the libraries in her district Cohasset, Hingham and Hull.

Cohasset officials say there's nothing left to cut. . .

cut.

"There isn't a heck of a lot left," he said. "Eighty percent of the total budget is personal services. It's definitely a people-oriented budget."

Any cuts, as well as those already made for the police contract, would have to be approved at town meeting, he said.

"I doubt if we will go to town meeting before september, and possibly later," said Pratt.

Town accountant Mary Matthews noted that Cohasset received $1.7 million in local aid last year.

It was to have received $1,168,583, according to Paul Moran of the MMA.

Matthews said that some of the town's local aid money, which the town has received quarterly, goes into the general operating budget, and some goes to the schools for reimbursements.

Matthews said the only way budget cuts could be avoided would be if funds could be found from other areas, such as new growth.

"But I don't think that is likely," she said.

More cuts in the school department would be difficult, if not impossible, according to Supt. Stephen Hart.

"We have already cut $282,000," he said. "We would have to look at additional cuts in salaries.

"But it's still unknown what is going to happen. It's still a little premature.

"Since we have cut so much, it would be difficult to find the money in non-personnel areas, though we would look at all areas. "

Hart added, "I hope we don't have to face the same things next year."

Police Chief Joseph Kealey said there is nothing left to cut in his department but personnel.

"We are down to bare bones," he said. "It would definitely have to be personnel that would be cut.

"This is the worst year," said Kealey. "It just doesn't stop. It's been long and drawn out, and it's not over."

Kealey said that three officers are on duty at one time, according to the minimum manning requirement in the police contract. There are two men on the street, he explained, and one remains at headquarters.

"I don't see them lowering that level," said Kealey. "You have to have visibility."

The chief noted that the department hasn't added an officer in 17 years. There are 16 uniformed officers, and one detective, Kealey said.

"We should have more officers, not less," he said.

Kealey also said the department was to receive three new cruisers this year, but now it will receive none.

"We usually turn in two cars every year," said Kealey, who explained that the police department puts between 70,000 and 90,000 miles a year on its five cruisers.

"After that, you start running into transmission problems. Monthly maintenance can take care of the small things."

Fire Chief Daniel Brock didn't even want to think about any more cuts in his department.

"I haven't heard of any more cuts," he said," and I have no suggestions at this time where any would come from."

Rep. Murray disgusted with tax hike. . .

they got the job done," she said."Then in the late 1960s, they went to consultants. They only had so many on the list, then they get so many jobs, they can't handle it. Plus, it costs so much money."

Murray said she will vote to override the governor's veto of $100 million.

"One of the problems is that the governor has been given too much power over the years he has been in (office)," she said.

"I have a problem with this whole thing. I look around here and say, 'don't these people know what is happening in their districts?'

"I have phone calls from people who can't afford to pay taxes, people who are working more than one job. It's a vicious cycle.

"That's one of the reasons I'm against expanding the sales tax. My feeling was, if you expand to include food, diapers, clothing, it's ridiculous. People can't afford these things."

With cuts in local aid, Murray said towns will have to cut back even more.

"And I think they have cut back to bare bones," she said. "Yet I can understand how taxpayers feel went they go to voter on an override.

"All I know is that we are going to be hurt."

Murray said that one of her major peeves is putting campaign workers on the state payroll.

"I don't think any of my workers expect a job," she said. "But Dukakis has put on 26, according to the Boston papers, and I think that is terrible.

"They don't get rid of the high paying positions, they get rid of the people who plow snow on Route 3A, who do a fantastic job. They're not making that kind of money.

"I blame him (Dukakis) for the whole thing. He was running for president and he wanted certain things. The majority of the legislature voted for him."

Murray said she has consistently voted against an increase in taxes, including the recent 15 percent temporary increase.

"I care about the people, and they come first," she said.

Murray said she and other legislators, including Rep. Frank Hines, will sit down and find other areas which can be cut other than local aid.

"I'm really anxious to get going on that," she said. "There are other areas that can be cut besides local aid."

Golden on state budget

documented $80 million in savings annually with the implementation of that commission's recommendations.

"And the state budget was less than half of what it is today," Golden said. He predicted the commission could come up with between $150 and $200 million in savings on an annual basis.

The commission would recommend how to eliminate waste and implement changes in management and administration to rid government of inefficiencies. The commission would have subpoena powers to get information from all three branches of government to determine how financially government can do a better job.

"We are trying to address a fundamental concern," Golden said. "It's not how much or how little money there is but how well we spend it. That is the heart of the credibility problem. The people don't trust that we are spending (our tax dollars) well."

Senior Vice President David T. Sargent on Trust Services.

"SOME BANKS CAN REALLY CRUNCH NUMBERS. UNFORTUNATELY, THEY OFTEN TAKE THE SAME APPROACH WITH PEOPLE."

"Many banks are going through merger mania. It's good for profits. And generally bad for customers—especially in high-service areas such as trust.

"Rockland Trust is different. We've remained independent. Our trust department is growing. Yet we treat every customer as if they are our only customer.

□ Talking about San Diego, Navy Seaman Apprentice Gerald Patrolia has completed recruit training in San Diego. Wonder if the two will meet up with one another!!

□ One final tidbit of news, we understand that Airman Garret A. Hunt has arrived for duty at Barksdale Air Force Base in La. Keep those cookies coming, Mom!

We all know how Leo loves to chat about his favorite team, the Boston Red Sox. Did you notice this spring though? He was talking as much about the Cohasset Red Sox!! That's right folks! Leo Fiori and his sons Bob and Leo backed the local Little League Team, and the Red Sox won the Little League title for Cohasset! The next time you run into Exxon for your gas be sure to congratulate them, not only for winning but for helping to support Little League in Cohasset!

□ We salute Bob Jackson, a sergeant on the Cohasset Police Force! Bob has just been made Full Commander in the Naval Reserve.

□ You undoubtedly read about the Bay State games going on all of last week, it was exciting to read about. Did you know that Brian Pompeo was on the hockey team that won the Gold in the final game Sunday!! As they say, "He's Good!!!" Garrett Raegan, a former hockey coach at CHS was a member of the coaching squad for the team.

□ Saw Beth Salvador "around town" last weekend, and she looks wonderful. Beth is a 1982 CHS grad, and she is now working in fashion design in New York. Anyone who remembers Beth isn't surprised at that, she was always a leader in fashion . . .

□ We certainly wish Andy Weltman lots of luck in his movie career, he's working hard to make it happen! Talk about how the Witches of Eastwick changed people's lives for a while, in his case it made up his mind as to his future! We wish you well, Andy.

□ Congratulations to Michael and Victoria C. Hurley, who had a baby girl June 27 at South Shore Hospital.

□ We hope that someone from the Class of '64 lets us in on all of the details of the reunion that they had last weekend. Heard there was a great turnout.

□ Although it was printed last week, we would like to make sure that everyone reads this: there were three eighth grade girls that were recently recognized by Johns Hopkins University. Two girls were left out of the article that appeared last week. The three girls were: Krista Ansberg, Bonnie Krueger and Ann Senechal. My apologies go to you girls, you should be extremely proud of your efforts!!

Budget cloud doubt

If the doom and gloom headlines in the local newspapers are enough to sink you deep into depression, then don't bother taking a trip into the local town hall.

What's left of the staff in our municipal headquarters is working under the darkening cloud of doubt. They must continue to function and operate the business of the town, yet they know any day their jobs may be eliminated if the state forces further budget cutbacks.

Not only are we the taxpayers feeling the pain from the state's budget crisis, but our town employees are now worried about their next paycheck. Secretaries for some town boards and committees will be laid off if the town is forced to further reduce its budget.

And when school reopens in September, there won't be much cause for celebration. If the schools are forced to cut deeper into their budget, another round of teacher lay-offs will follow. There are no more schools to close, so teachers will be the likely target.

More firefighters and police officers will probably be forced out if the state reduces its local aid by vast amounts.

If you've been inside the town hall lately, you'll notice the pervading mood is hardly upbeat and optimistic. While taxpayers worry about the effect of higher state taxes, the people we employ are worried about their jobs.

So many programs, projects and people are 'on hold' while our legislators decide the fate of our fiscal future. It's so unfair, unnecessary and unkind to the people who must pay for the state's blunders by the pocketbooks and professions.

What will happen to our Council on Aging which depends so heavily on state-funded grants and programs? The senior center has provided an enviable amount of activities for our elderly residents. It has been an informational center for many people, yet the center relies on state grants to finance many of its long-standing programs.

Like many people within this community, we will have to wait to see what will happen if the axe falls to this budget. We are impatient as we await this unpleasant possibility.

Economic uncertainty and instability certainly are depressing. When it affects people you know and respect, it becomes increasingly difficult to understand or accept.

These are the people whose jobs will be sacrificed because of the inability of the state administration to deal with a troublesome budget. Because of their failures and shortsightedness, we will bear the consequences of higher taxes, a declining economy, fewer amenities that were once financed with state money, and reduced services in our schools and town.

Yes, this has been a depressing summer thus far. And the forecast does not appear brighter as we enter the new fiscal year.

Johnston decision could heat up senate race

By David S. Cutler
Mariner staff

Acknowledging that "politics is in my blood," state Human Services Secretary Philip Johnston of Marshfield confirmed recently that he is seriously considering a run for the Massachusetts Senate.

Should he choose to run -- "and the chances are maybe four out of ten that I will" -- Johnston will precipitate a major political brawl in the Democratic Party, pitting him, as a self-described progressive, against State Rep. Robert Ambler of Weymouth, considered a conservative Democrat, and Weymouth Selectman Brian McDonald, who weighs in on the liberal side of the party.

RANCOROUS RACE

Such a rancorous race would serve as a bellwether for a number of issues -- including taxes and abortion, would be expensive and time-consuming -- and might well split the Democratic Party on the South Shore.

One sign of that was Sen. William Golden's fast disappearance when his staff attempted to bring him to the telephone for comment on the Johnston bid.

Golden neither came to the telephone, nor returned the call.

Johnston will decide whether to enter the Senate race in the next two to three weeks, "a month at the most."

The senatorial district, serving Weymouth and six smaller South Shore coastal towns -- Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury -- has been represented by Golden, D-Weymouth, since 1984. Golden plans to run for lieutenant governor and won't seek re-election to the Senate.

"This thing is getting hyped more than I thought," said Johnston, when asked about his own Senate candidacy.

"There is a general concern in the district that we should be doing everything possible to ensure the continuance of progressive Democratic representation in the Senate.

ABORTION ISSUE

"It isn't just a question of the abortion issue," he said, referring to the recent U.S. Supreme Court decision giving states more power to regulate abortions.

"The (abortion) choice issue is very important, but it isn't the only issue. Commuter rail is important to the South Shore, and Ambler is against it.

"Environmental protection, human services and housing all need strong advocacy in the legislature," Johnston said.

"I know Bob Ambler well, and I respect him, but we have strong philosophical differences."

Ambler, who has adopted a strong pro-life stand on the abortion issue, is a veteran of 25 years in the Massachusetts House, and decades as business agent for the Boston Edison employee union, with wide fundraising resources. He is expected to raise substantial money for the Senate race, which could well become the most expensive legislative battle in state history. Until Johnston began testing the waters, Ambler was considered the clear-cut favorite to succeed Golden.

Though other issues will undoubtedly surface, the abortion question looms in next year's state elections.

Pro-life legislators have a substantial majority in the House, but in the Senate, the pro-choice faction enjoys a one-vote majority. Whoever succeeds Golden, who is pro-choice, could hold the swing vote on an expected onslaught of abortion-control legislation.

MONEY MATTERS

Johnston says he isn't worried about raising money for the Senate campaign, but money is a major concern in his decision on whether to run at all. As Human Services Secretary, he earns $87,500 a year; state senators are paid $37,500.

A Marshfield resident since 1971, Johnston, 44, was elected to the Massachusetts House in 1974, representing Marshfield and Norwell, and later, Marshfield and Scituate.

He was re-elected four times and resigned in 1983 to oversee human resources under Gov. Michael Dukakis. He was appointed Secretary of Human Services in 1984, and presently runs a staff of 38,000 employees and a budget of more than $4 billion.

Until recently, he had planned to finish out the Dukakis term and was considering academia or a management position in business in 1991 when Dukakis leaves office.

Should he win election to the state Senate, Johnston would be the first cabinet officer to move to the legislature since the cabinet system was created in the early 1970s. Such a move, he said, "would be unique and helpful to the legislature."

Though a member of the Dukakis Administration for the past six years, Johnston is anything but an apolitical bureaucrat.

He is an active member of the Marshfield Democratic Town Committee, where he served as chairman for several years, and is a member of the Democratic State Committee. He has also been a delegate to the Democratic National Convention since 1980.

"I love politics," he said. "It's in my blood."

State Rep. Ambler switches abortion stance

By Robert J. Flavell
Mariner staff

State Rep. Robert B. Ambler has changed his position on the abortion issue, a move that may drive liberal Human Services Secretary Philip Johnston out of the race -- but bring conservative John Creed in.

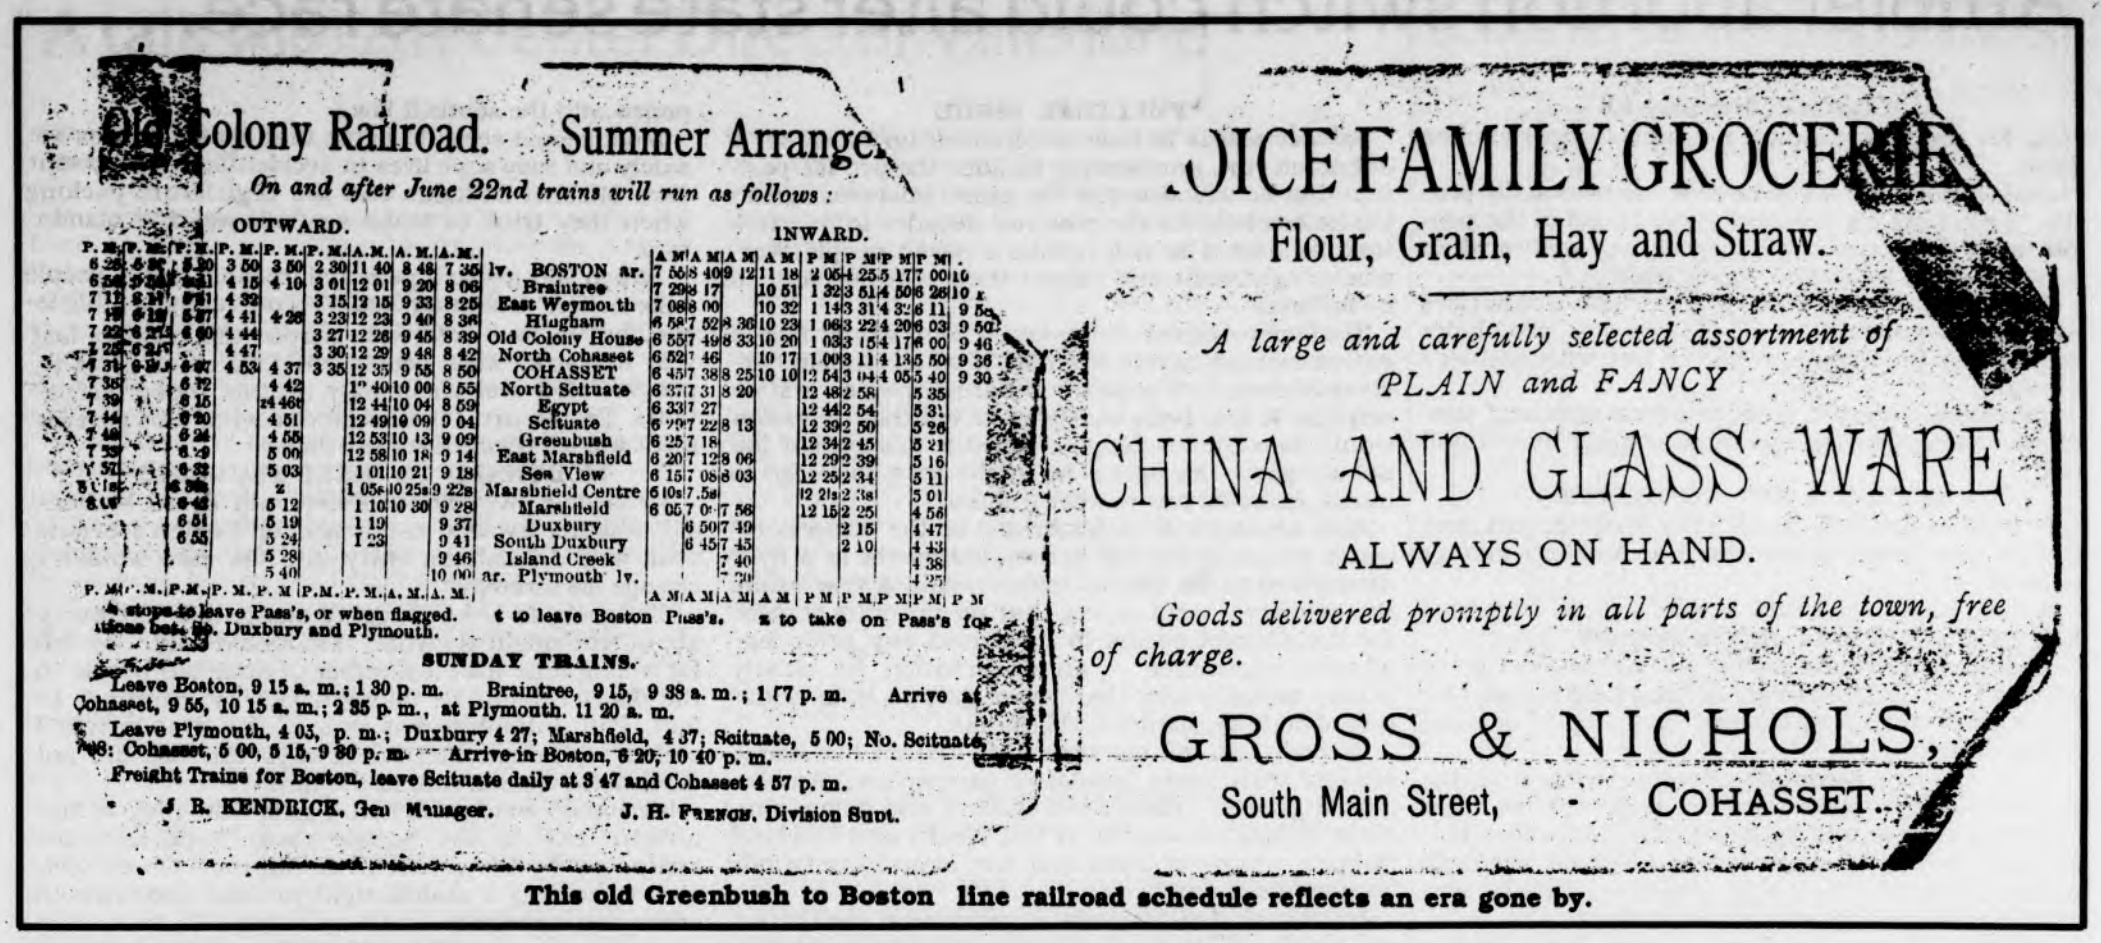
The irony mounted this week as Ambler, a longtime pro-life representative, read the entrails, and determined that a pro-choice position would best reflect the feelings of his hoped-for constituency.

That discouraged Johnston, who had hoped his pro-choice position would draw votes away from the previously pro-life Ambler. But it encouraged Creed, an ex-priest and Marshfield School Committee member, who is staunchly pro-life.

Both Creed and Johnston hail from Marshfield, while Ambler is a longtime Weymouth state representative, already facing Weymouth Selectman Brian McDonald for the Democratic nomination.

All are weighing bids to replace state Sen. William Golden, D-Weymouth, a pro-choicer who plans to run for lieutenant governor.

The Norfolk-Plymouth senatorial district runs along the coast from Weymouth to Duxbury, including Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate and Marshfield.



ANNOYED PRO-LIFERS

In exchanging a Marshfield liberal for a conservative, Ambler probably has done himself some good, the district being overwhelmingly pro-choice. But he faces the uncomfortable position of annoying pro-lifers who thought Ambler was their candidate.

Pro-lifers may be few and far between in the senatorial district, but they're loud. Ambler regretfully admits he expects die-hard pro-lifers to groom one of their own to run against him.

Anti-abortion activists said they felt betrayed by Ambler's new position, and warned that they may

This old Greenbush to Boston line railroad schedule reflects an era gone by.

Florida resident remembers Old Colony Line with glee

To the Editor:

Yes, it was a quiet end "for the Old Colony Railroad," a sad ending and the loss of a great service never replaced.

I am pleased to classify myself as one of those endangered species sometimes referred to as "A Townie."

This article on the railroad caused me to think and relive some of the beautiful memories I have of Cohasset since I was born there in 1905.

I rode the train to Marshfield with my sisters and parents where we walked from the train stop up through the woods to the fairgrounds.

Again, with family we rode the train to Nantasket Junction, changed to the electric train for the ride to Nantasket Beach and Paragon Park which was a great place for an outing in those days.

The park then was owned by the late George Dodge who at the same time owned the farm at the corner of North Main Street and Forest Avenue, and there he wintered the beautiful peacocks, a variety of other beautiful birds and animals that were to be seen in lovely surroundings in the park in season.

Then there was the annual trip to Boston, a walk along Atlantic Avenue to board the "Dorothy Bradford" for a delightful roundtrip to Provincetown.

I later commuted to South Braintree to go to school, and to Boston to go to school.

Accompanying this letter is a photo copy of a timetable of the railroad dated 1885, which shows the schedule of wonderful transportation it provided. A few words about the advertisers on this timetable.

Lincoln Brothers had a coalyard on a rail siding opposit the station, their office across on Depot Avenue with Gertie Locke a faithful employee in charge for many years.

C.F. Tilden Livery Stable was opposite the station on Ripley Road, a great convenience for many railroad passengers.

A ramp went up the side of the building to the second floor where numerous horses were stabled.

School barges, pungs (who remembers the Gracie-May, also used for charter sleigh rides on monnlight nights?) fancy wagons and work wagons were on the first floor.

Mike Burke's Blacksmith Shop with the big hammer constantly ringing on the anvil was out on the north corner of the lot.

Gross & Nichols on South Main Street later became C.H. Trott Co., and after that the Central Market.

When it was the Trott Company, one of the meat cutters, in trying to establish a little romance with one of the village belles of that era, decided to present her with some flowers which were carefully wrapped and boxed, and presented same.

However, before the presentation, a young lad and a companion, both who worked in the store, had taken the box, removed the flowers, and replaced them with a carefully wrapped pair of old corsets.

You can imagine the embarrassment and furor this caused, and needless to say the meatcutters cleaver would have become a guillotine had he been able to catch the culprits.

Back to the railroad.

Remember the old Roundhouse that was located near what is now the north end of the parking lot, and the turntable in front of it?

It was my pleasure to know Frank Litchfield for many years, a fine gentleman who succeeded Mr. George Gough as station master.

Before Mr. Litchfield acquired and remodelled the building into his home, that had been the gatehouse and office for the Thomas W. Lawson Estate, there was a special train which operated express from Egypt to Boston on every weekday for the convenience of the famous financier.

It was called "The Lawson Flyer."

There were two white flags on the front of the locomotive to designate it as a special train, and it went full speed through the towns with whistle blowing at the crossings.

I could name about 20 Cohasset residents who were employed by the railroad but will only take time and space to name two who many will remember as ticket agents, telegraph operators, Annie Nichols, and Billie Burdick.

What a joy it is to sit and make notes of these memories, and there are so many more since I first saw the light of day in a house off Atlantic Avenue now known as the Dean Farmhouse.

Cheers, and best to all.

Sincerely,
Fred Petersen

Gridiron issues statement on coaching funds

To the Editor:

At the July 10, 1989 School Committee meeting, Mr. Chatterton stated that the Cohasset Gridiron Club had agreed to fund $1,500 for a football coach.

This is not true. We have never, until our meeting of July 11, 1989, even discussed such a situation on a formal basis.

The Cohasset Gridiron Club has never participated financially in the activities of the Cohasset football team that are part of the on-going school budget (such as equipment, equipment rehabilitation, coaches' salaries, etc.)

For your information.

Drainage problem leads to town counsel advice

By Bill Leitch
Mariner correspondent

Serious drainage problems at a site off of Route 3A near the Cohasset Heights Landfill prompted conservation commissioners Tuesday to ask advice from town counsel how best to confront the issue.

The problems are a result of excavation work performed for leaching field testing for a low-income housing project, proposed by Deck Point, Inc.

The proposal has since been denied by the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering.

Excavation work has left several 15-foot deep test pits and large mounds of dirt at the site, according to Jeff Waal, commission chairman.

"Since the property was excavated, every time it rains everything just washes down and creates a siltation problem, which covers soil, kills plants, and gets into the culverts which flow into Sanctuary Pond on the opposite side of 3A," Waal said. "During one rainstorm, we observed a giant flow of siltation into the pond."

Waal said that the Board of Health requested the developers to address the problem. "The developers responded by installing siltation fences, which only provide a temporary solution," Waal said.

He added the commission requested the developers to submit plans for the future of the site.

"The commission has only the plans for the housing development which was refused by the state," Waal said.

"Over two months have passed with no adequate response from the developers," Waal noted. He added that the owners are hoping to sell the property.

"I would like to try and keep them from selling until we get some method of control. We have the power to stop a sale," said commission member John Bryant.

Commissioners agreed to request Selectmen permission to consult with town counsel on the matter.

In other business, the Commission:

• Elected not to comment on the proposed Crystal Woods Housing Development at a site near the intersection of Route 3A and Henry Turner Bailey Rd. at the Scituate/Cohasset line.

Waal said that the developers have yet to file a notice of intent with the town.

As the wetlands buffer zone at the site lies within both towns, the developers were requested several months ago to file with Cohasset as well as with Scituate.

Members Waal and Veneta Roebuck said they pain to attend a meeting and on-site inspection with representatives from the state Executive Office of Environmental Affairs, July 27.

• Agreed to send a letter to the resident of 38 Smith Place concerning some recent regrading performed in the backyard of that address. Waal said that he inspected the yard from the property of the abuttor who had called him, and that there is a brook or a drainage ditch running behind the houses, between Smith Place and Pleasant St.

Waal said that he had asked the owner of 38 Smith Place to meet with the commission, but that he has yet to do so.

• Granted a request by John P. and Kathleen M. O'Leary to replace a rotting 40 by six foot side porch on the east side of their house, located at 711 Jerusalem Rd., to replace and enlarge the rear deck on the north side to connect the two porches.

• Agreed to advertise for a public hearing Tuesday, Aug. 1 for a request filed by Irene Volpe of 45 Church St., to build an addition to her house.

• Approved emergency certification to Robert St. Onge of Arthur A. Smith Jr., Inc. to repair the septic system at the Zildjian residence, 127 Nichols Rd. The septic system, located in the flood plain, had been backing up, according to the commission members. Emergency Certification gives the contractor 30 days to perform the work, after obtaining DEQE approval.

St. Onge said the new septic system, which includes two alternating pumps enclosed in a concrete chamber, is the "Cadillac of systems."

"This is what we were looking for," said member Bill Parmenter. "No one could complain about this system."

Ambler abortion switch could alter state senate race. . . .

look for another candidate -- unless he switches back.

Ambler said that while he remains personally pro-life, "I can't set my personal views ahead of the people in my district, and will respect their wishes when any (abortion) legislation comes up.

That promise would seem to deflate Johnston's strongest argument -- that the one-vote pro-choice majority in the Senate would be lost with Ambler's election.

Johnston, a former state representative and pro-choicer, wasn't saying this week whether he will pull out.

DECIDING NOT TO DECIDE

He said he had only decided not to decide just now, but he was clearly taken aback at Ambler's change of heart.

A heartened Creed said Ambler's move surprised him and makes it more likely he will run.

And an ebullient McDonald quickly issued a press release to remind voters of his "long-held support for the right of women to choose," and engage in some Ambler-bashing.

"Rep. Ambler's recent decision to deviate from his well-known anti-choice stance, indicates his utter contempt for the intelligence of the electorate," McDonald crowed. "Abortion is a serious and intensely personal matter; the public deserves officials who will have the courage of their convictions."

Ambler does not consider his change in position a "flip-flop," but rather, a realistic and effective way to diffuse a painful issue.

"I don't need to do a flip-flop at this stage in my career. My view is my view, and I'm pro-life. But government should not be telling people what to do in highly-personal matters."

Besides, Ambler said, "I've always been a consensus candidate, and I don't want to get paralyzed on one issue. There are a number of things I want to accomplish for the South Shore, and we can't discuss that if this becomes a one-issue campaign. I want to be sensitive to the needs of people. I want to talk about why we don't need new taxes, and why the MWRA shouldn't be spending money the way they are, and why we don't do something about drugs, rather than just giving the problem lip-service."

FULLTIME ISSUE

Ambler seems to have set himself up nicely for a Johnston run, announcing besides the pro-life position that he will also quit the union business agent's job he has held for the past two decades to be a fulltime senator. His poll results showed people overwhelmingly want and expect their state senator to be fulltime.

That move boxed Johnston -- who would face a gut-wrenching paycut from $87,500 as Human Services Secretary to a $37,500 base salary as a state senator. It had been widely expected that Johnston would do some teaching on the side to augment the Senate pay -- an option he might have to forego to match Ambler's vow to work fulltime.

And, Ambler is already working on the "experience" issue, pointing out his accomplishments in a flyer distributed to the district towns -- fully a year before the primary -- and noting that no previous senator for the district seems to have had any prior legislative experience -- an observation he clearly thinks explains why the district gets so little in the way of state sympathy and largesse.

"Nobody can tell me when this district has had a senator with some legislative experience," Ambler almost gloated. "There's Bill Golden, and before him, Allan McKinnon, and then Bill Weeks and Newland Holmes -- none of them had any experience before becoming senator."

Ambler, 62, has 25 years' experience in the House, and would still hold a leadership post except for being on the wrong side during the George Keverian ouster of ex-speaker Thomas McGee.

LONG TALKS

Ambler's decision to take a pro-choice stand came after long talks with a wide variety of advisors and opinion-makers, and after studying a poll showing that while 60 percent of people in the senate district are anti-abortion as far as they, themselves, are concerned, 80 percent believe it's a personal matter.

That news came as no surprise to Ambler's political consultant, Michael Goldman, who was involved in the 1986 ballot question on abortion.

"The majority of people are opposed to abortion," Goldman said last week before the Ambler announcement, "they just don't want the Legislature making the decision for them. Look at what happened with the seatbelt law."

Most people seem to agree that seatbelts improve safety and may save lives in accidents. But they sent Gov. Michael Dukakis and the Legislature packing when they tried to make seatbelt-wearing mandatory.

"When you get to a personal freedom issue, people take notice," Goldman said. "Pornography is a big issue, but in four referenda across the country last year to restrict what people could watch on cable tv, people voted overwhelmingly against those restrictions. People are terrified about what the government will tell them they can't do next."

MCDONALD TO 'KEEP PLUGGING'

Meanwhile, Weymouth Selectman Brian McDonald, another avowed candidate for Golden's Senate seat, said Johnston's entry into the race wouldn't change his strategy.

"I'm going to keep plugging along, and not worry about who might do what," McDonald said. "I've felt for a long time that a number of qualified people in the district might be taking a look (at running). In fact, Phil Johnston was one of the first people I called," although McDonald says the two did not discuss the Senate race at the time.

McDonald said abortion rights will play a significant role in the Senate race, "especially accentuated" by the recent U. S. Supreme Court decision upholding a state's right to limit abortions in some circumstances.

PRO-CHOICE

"I'm a pro-choice person," McDonald said, adding his position that abortion is a "matter for the individual woman, her doctor, her religion, and her family considerations," not an issue for government to decide.

Asked if he is concerned about raising sufficient money to run a Senate campaign, McDonald called the amount necessary to win even a selectman's seat "absurd and obscene," but said he will be "competitive" with anyone who enters the race.

"When you have folks like Phil Johnston and Bob Ambler, who have been on Beacon Hill for as long as they have, they have a wider range of resources. But I've found that you can do a lot with a little if you work hard, and that's what I'm going to do, more ag-

A talk with Art Center Director Valentine

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

It may not always be easy, but the art center is here to stay, according to its director Lanci Valentine.

Right now, the South Shore Art Center is expanding its popular children's classes into Plymouth. Those "satellite" classes are now available in Hull, Hingham, Scituate, Weymouth, Quincy, Plymouth and Norwell.

Despite some recent publicity to the contrary, Valentine says the art center is paving the way toward a productive and successful future.

"We are not cutting back on any of our programs," Valentine said this week. "There are programs we'd like to have, but we can't expand at this time.

"With any organization, there are always goals you want to reach. I guess you'd have a problem if you actually met all your goals. We have goals and we're always stretching to meet them. And sometimes, we simply can't," she added.

The biggest stumbling block for the art center right now is a $160,000 mortgage on the building which was completed two years ago. At that time, much of the $1.3 million building was funded through private fundraising and donations. The center was left with a mortgage of about $330,000, which has been greatly reduced since that time. In this year alone, Valentine explained, the center's board of directors raised $125,000 toward the mortgage reduction.

"I wish there wasn't any mortgage left, but the fact is, there is. But the board of directors is working very hard, and they are committed to whittling away at it," she said.

Valentine said the center has experienced a "great year." Memberships are up, totalling about 575, and there are 170 individual donors.

The summer session of art classes, including the many satellite courses, are extremely popular, according to the director. This summer's China Art Camp, a new venture combining the resources of the art center with the Cohasset Community Center, has been well received. There are currently 20 children registered for each of the two sessions which begin next week. "That is the number we were hoping to get - very manageable," Valentine said, although the center will still accept late registrations for the week-long arts camp.

"The way the classes operate and with the funding we receive, we feel we can operate quite well," she said. "We're having a very busy summer session. I don't know, maybe people are just realizing we're here. They're just starting to recognize that we have a lot to offer in our new headquarters. It really was a quantum leap from 103 to 119 Ripley Road, and some people are just finding that out."

The non-profit organization depends on financing from memberships, donations, grants and class fees. Last year, the class fees were increased by five to ten dollars, keeping the art center fees in line with those charged by other area organizations.

Valentine is not optimistic about the Massachusetts Council of the Arts funding for next year. This could be one of the items slashed from the state budget because of the state's fiscal woes. "Right now we're trying to mobilize our legislators because we obviously feel that the arts are very important. We'd hate to see it cut from the budget because we feel it's vital," she said.

Foundation moneys and grants are something the art center hopes to receive, but can't guarantee each year. "We hope for the best and sometimes we get lucky. Sometimes we don't," she stated.

The future looks bright for the art center, according to its director. "Once we get rid of that mortgage, we'll be in really fine shape," she said. "We're all working very hard on that. And I have complete confidence that pretty soon our mortgage will be a thing of the past.

"I'm really excited about our future," she added. "I'm happy about what we're offering now and what we are planning for the future. We have a wonderful staff who can leap any hurdle placed in front of them. I'm very optimistic about the future of the art center."

State Senate race...

gressively as time goes on. I like to campaign. It's fun."

McDonald, who works for the state Department of Revenue, is of liberal cut, like Golden and Johnston. How deeply he and Ambler would split the Weymouth vote -- by far the largest in the district -- and how effectively he might campaign against a philosophically-similar Johnston, may be a function of how well his fundraising efforts succeed, and to which candidate the liberal allies of Golden and McKinnon turn.

But for Johnston more so than McDonald, support will also turn to some degree on how deeply-felt is the public acrimony toward Gov. Michael Dukakis, and the extent to which Johnston can posture himself as his own man, without alienating Dukakis adherents.

Historical society sponsors walking tours

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold the second of its three scheduled historical walks in the town Sunday, July 23.

Featured on this tour will be Cohasset's historical harbor and its environs. From its earliest days, the town's harbor was known as "Ship Cove" and was the center of a thriving maritime industry. Earliest shipbuilding records show that vessels were being constructed at Ship Cove by about 1700, or shorty after the area now called Cohasset saw its first farms and homesteads.

By the mid-18th century Samuel Bates had established the town's first known fishing business at the harbor and had built the stone wharf that still carries his name. Not long after, Capt. Abraham Tower and the Doane family followed suit at Border Street to establish fishing wharves and as well as fleets of cod and mackerel fishing schooners. Later they were joined by Capt. Levi Tower, Ephraim Snow, Caleb Lothrop, "Squire" James C. Doane and his son-in-law Amos O. Lawrence, Alfred Whittington, Capt. Nichols Tower, the Hall family, and John Bates as shipowners and merchants whose maritime ventures flourished at Ship Cove. Principal shipbuilders were Levi Tower, then Bela Bates and his son Jonathan Beals Bates whose shipyard on the Cove's northern edge built fishing schooners as well as larger square-riggers for trans-Atlantic trading voyages.

By the early 1800's Cohasset's Ship Cove had become a beehive of maritime-related industry, and by mid century briefly ranked among the leading ports of Massachusetts in the size of its mackerel catch. Just before the Civil War more than 50 large two-masted mackerel schooners called Cohasset their home port, and the town's mercantile seafarers travelled to ports in all corners of the globe. The small ports of Massachusetts and their fishing industries went into decline in the latter 1800's when the once-plentiful schools of mackerel disappeared from traditional fishing grounds, and Cohasset's last mackerel schooner sailed its final fishing voyage to the Gulf of St. Lawrence in early summer of 1894, never to return home.

The mackerel schooners and shipyards now have vanished, but Cohasset's "Ship Cove" retains many remembrances of the great "Age of Sail" when the ocean was the town's frontier, and these will be seen by participants in the Historical Society's July 23 tour. During the mid-1800's the construction of famous Minot's Ledge Lighthouse off Cohasset's shore was a major endeavor and an engineering feat for its time. Stonecutting for the granite blocks of the lighthouse was done at Cohasset's Government Island during the 1850's. After completion of the light the Island itself served as shore station for Lighthouse Keepers and their families.

The Society's tour will visit Government Island to see evidence of the building of the offshore lighthouse and the small park now established there to honor that feat of engineering more than a century and a quarter ago.

The Society walking tour of "Ship Cove" meets at Veteran's Memorial Park (next to the motel on Border Street) at 3 p.m. Guides will include Charles Fink, President of the Society, Noel A. Ripley, Chairman of the town's Historical Commission, and Society Curator David Wadsworth. Refreshments will be served at the Government Island.

The third historical walk scheduled for this summer will be held in September. It will feature Cohasset's early Burying Ground at Central Cemetery and a bus tour of ancient King Street, as well as a stop at the site of Mordecai Lincoln's 1700's iron foundry on Mill Lane in Beechwood.

Also to be featured Sunday, August 6 is the Society's second boat trip to the famous offshore lighthouse at Minot's Ledge, "Minot's Light Revisited II," with details to follow. For additional information, call 383-6930.

Cohasset Knoll exchange

August 7, Cohasset Knoll Nursing Facility will host a cultural exchange program for visiting Japanese students, facility residents, family members and staff. Local community dignitaries will also be invited to participate.

Fourteen exchange students from Japan will be spending a month living with Cohasset families while on vacation from their high schools and universities. Arrangements for this program were made through the cultural homestays institute's local coordinator, Patricia Durkin.

Roberta Dufresne, administrator of Cohasset Knoll, will be assisted by a committee of staff members in planning an afternoon designed to provide these students with an overview of daily life in a long term care facility in Massachusetts.

Members of the resident council will meet with the students to share their experiences of living in a long term care facility. The program will also include an American pot luck buffet provided by the staff to enable the students to smaple a wide variety of American foods.

Interior LifeStyles DECORATING
Magic Carpeting

Carpet is the anchor for your decorating Scheme. The type of carpet you choose depends as much on your life style as the area to be covered.

Households that demand durability need dense, closely woven carpet. You can check carpet density by folding back a corner. If the backing shows through easily, it probably won't hold up well.

Carpet texture should complement your room's decor. Level looped piles are considered traditional and more formal than multilevel loop piles.

Of the many carpet fibers available, venerable, luxurious wool is among the most expensive. For all its cushiony comfort, natural warmth and sound control, wool carpet requires special care and cleaning and limits the range of colors.

Synthetic fibers are more practical Acrylic is most like wool in terms of comfort, texture and appearance yet it is priced significantly lower. Acrylic is also nonallergenic, mildew and insect resistant and easy to clean.

Other synthetics include durable, low maintenance nylon: soft, economical polyester; durable, but crushable olefin.

What about the budget? Fortunately, today's carpet makers offer attractive affordable choices for every budget.

"Minots light revisited II"

Sunday, August 6, is National Lighthouse Day, and the Cohasset Historical Society will feature one of the world's most famous, with an educational and fund-raising program centering on Minot's Light, the "I love you" beacon off our shore.

The program will be highlighted by hourly minicruises around the Light, with talks, displays, and a viewing of the reconstruction in progress of the watch room on Government Island in Cohasset Harbor.

This is a repeat of the popular Revisit presented last year when Minot's Light was "topless." Now the top has been restored so that passengers this year will have the opportunity to see and photograph the Light as it was for almost 130 years and will be for the future.

Tides limit the cruising period to the hours between 1 and 5 p.m., with four hourly cruises at 1, 2, 3 and 4 p.m. from Government Island.

Parking will be provided at St. Anthony's parking lot off South Main Street, with buses leaving 15 minutes before each hourly trip beginning at 12:45 p.m.

At the Lothrop House and at the construction rings on Government Island there will be detailed information about the original building of the Light and the reconstruction work of the past two years.

On the boat trip there will be a running commentary on the Light, its history, famous shipwrecks and a description of shoreline landmarks.

Refreshments will be served at the Lothrop House, 14 Summer St. next to the church parking lot.

Because of the tidal situation the group is limited to a total of 150 persons on the four boat trips. Be sure to reserve your tickets early. To the extent possible, preference for trip time will be honored and you will be notified of any need to change.

Marion Bush exhibition at bank

The South Shore Art Center is featuring watercolors by Hingham artist Marion Bush at the Quincy Cooperative Bank Galleria, Rte 3A, in Cohasset during July and August.

Bush received an M.A. in Hispanic American Studies at Sanford University with elective credits in Studio Arts and Post Graduate studies at the University Guadalajara. She has recently completed a certificate program at the South Shore Art Center.

Her work has been exhibited at juried shows throughout the South Shore where she received many awards.

She holds membership in the South Shore Art Center and the Artist's Gallery, North River Arts Association, and the Scituate Art Association Gallery. In addition her work is handled by Old North Wharf Gallery in Nantucket.

Summer theater plans

The Young People's Summer Theatre of Scituate is gearing up for its most ambitious season of educational musical theatre since its debut in 1977.

Three shows will be presented this year.

The largest production, an annual event which this year involves more than 70 young people from all over the South Shore, will be the Kander and Ebb musical-comedy 70, Girls, 70.

The show revolves around a "gang" of elderly who decide they're going to spice up life a bit by robbing some fur salons, selling the furs for profit and using the money to live comfortably while at the same time buying a hotel for the "less fortunate" to live in.

Don Capen, director and choreographer, said, it's a twist on the "Robin Hood" theme.

"The play tells a simple story about what people think getting old is like, and what getting old can really be like if one's attitude is different," he said.

70, Girls, 70 will be performed Thursday through Saturday (August 3, 4 and 5) at Scituate High School at 8 p.m. Tickets are $7 each, $5 for senior citizens.

A week later, on August 10, 11 and 12, the group will present Showcase '89, a "cabaret"-style musical revue with eight featured performers presenting some show-stoppers of their own.

Under the direction of Douglas Trudeau, the show will be a dinner-theatre held at the Scituate Knights of Columbus Hall.

Tickets are $10 (includes dinner) with dinner at 6:30 p.m. and the show beginning at 8 p.m.

But perhaps the most challenging of all YPST endeavors is its newest program for ages 6-12.

With a group of 49 kids, Don Capen, along with assistant Wendy MacPhetres and Musical Accompanist Meri-Lee Mafera, is assembling a show to be presented on Saturday, July 29 at 3 and 6 p.m. and Sunday, July 30 at 2 p.m. at the First Congregational Church on Country Way.

Capen describes the show as a "revue," but says its subject matter "strictly deals with kids — their thoughts, feelings, and what they're all about. There will be songs, dialogue, poems — you name it."

Tickets for the "younger show" are $3, but seating is limited. Tickets for all three shows can be reserved by calling 826-7983.

At the Music Curcus

South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset will round out with performances by Patti LaBelle, The Temptations & The O'Jays, The Judds, Air Supply and the 35th Anniversary Tour of Dick Clark's American Bandstand concert.

Show time for Patti LaBelle is 8 p.m. Dick Clark's "American Bandstand" wil be presented at the Music Circus Thursday, July 27 at 8 p.m.

The tour, sponsored by Canada Dry and VH-1, is a tribute to four decades of music and dance and will be headlined by The Spinners ("Working My Way Back To You"), The Association ("Along Comes Mary"), The Guess Who ("These Eyes"), and The Drifters featuring Charlie Thomas ("Under The Boardwalk").

The Temptations and The O'Jays will appear at the Music Circus for one show only at 8 p.m. on Friday, July 28.

The mother-daughter country duo, The Judds, will appear at the Music Circus Saturday, July 29. They will be presenting two concerts at 5 and 9 p.m.

Completing the month of July at the Music Circus will be Air Supply Sunday, July 30. Show time is 7:30 p.m.

For information or to charge tickets by telephone, patrons may call the Music Circus at 383-1400 any day after 10 a.m.

Alzheimers Alert issued

Police and fire departments in local communities have received an "Alzheimer's Alert" from the Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore, Inc., based in Hingham.

ADSGSS sent information to each unit explaining Alzheimer's Disease and how public safety officers might encounter and assist an Alzheimer's patient.

Typical Alzheimer's behaviors are a result of the disease and include wandering, indecent exposure, shoplifting, appearing disoriented, seemingly intoxicated, or driving erratically. Included in the "Alert" is a 23-page Alzheimer's Association booklet, "Victim, Not Criminal: The Alzheimer Sufferer," which is designed to help public safety personnel deal with these common situations.

Alzheimer's victims are usually elderly and seldom violent, but they are often overwhelmed by confusion. The suggested strategies for dealing with dementia victims may make the difference in diffusing a potentially catastrophic reaction on the patient's part.

ADSGSS urges families to provide medical alert identification bracelets for their Alzheimer's patients. Such ID bracelets give valuable information to police and fire personnel, information which patients themselves are unable to remember.

ADSGSS provides information and support for families dealing with the problems of Alzheimer's Disease. Monthly meetings, held from September to June, are free and open to the public.

For more information or to receive a free brochure listing support group meetings in Hingham, Kingston, Milton, Quincy and Scituate, call 749-5417 or 749-7816.

Vo-Tech officials continue to pare down budget increase

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The school committee for South Shore Vocational Technical High School agreed to over $78,000 in cuts last week, bringing their budget increase down to 5.98 per cent.

Despite the cuts, all 17 programs offered this past June will be offered in the fall, said Robert L. Molla, Jr. of Norwell.

But Molla warned that Vo Tech may not be out of the woods.

"These cuts may not be the last," he said. "Mr. Dukakis used his poison pen today.

"We may have to make some other cuts down the line, until we receive notice nothing will be final," he said.

Originally the school committee passed a $4.1 million budget for FY'90, an increase of about 8 per cent. That budget was rejected by five of the eight towns served by Vo Tech, including Hanover. Norwell, Scituate, and Cohasset accepted the original budget. Each town's assessment is based on the number of students it sends to the school.

The 24 cuts include one teaching position, metal and welding shop supplies, extracurricular club advisors and student activity coordinators, parking lot monitor, and girls' varsity basketball and softball, representing the entire girls' sports program.

Supt. Director Dr. Clifford Easton said that the girls' sports were undersubscribed, and therefore logical to cut. He said that the school would be starting a co-educational intramural volleyball program. Girls can try out for the boys' sports, he said, and some do participate in cross country.

Easton said that girls make up about 22 per cent of the student population at Vo Tech.

"The programs (girls' basketball and softball) are not dead," he said. "But it doesn't make sense to pay coaches when they're not successful."

Lloyd E. Patriquin of Whitman was concerned with the cuts in shop supplies.

"What are the staff and kids going to work with?" he said.

Easton said the department can maintain the status quo by using surplus supplies from the past.

The school committee consolidated some bus routes for a possible $10,000 savings.

Easton said the school could survive on the current budget.

"We can limp through on our program but we will have lost in terms of major improvements especially in the area of textbooks," he said.

"It's tough for a technical school to retain its strength and attraction if we don't keep upgrading, if our programs are not responsive to needs.

"And if technology continues to grow at a rapid rate, we'll lose our attraction to industries."

Chamber of Commerce news: Shop locally

"Mom, I need a present for the party.."

"Did you remember to get a present for your father?"

"Oh no, I forgot to buy the shower gift."

Sound familiar? How often are these last minute scenarios played and replayed in your home each year? And how often do you scramble to rearrange your schedule, pile into the car, and rush off moaning and groaning all the way to South Shore Plaza or the Hanover Mall? Well, if you are like the rest of us, the answer is "constantly."

But it doesn't have to be that way. Weddings, birthdays, Father's and Mother's Day...sneakers, soccer cleats, school supplies, sports equipment. The bad moods and snippy commands; the tightness in your chest and the banging headache. Why put yourself and the family through it over and over again? It's not the last minute shopping that can change — with kids and other assorted human beings living in the same household it's bound to happen. No, it's not the situation — it's the solution that is all wrong. That last minute rush to the Mall. So what IS the solution? Easy. SHOP COHASSET. With very few exceptions, you can find exactly what you need for every occasion right here — either in the downtown area or in one of the Rte. 3A Malls. And you can usually find that perfect gift at a price comparable to what you would pay elsewhere. Sneakers, hardware, jewelry, silver, porcelain, crystal, school supplies, etc., etc., ad infinatum. It's all right here within five minutes of home.

Be honest, now. When was the last time that you took a good look at all the merchandise available in our area stores? When was the last time that you actually took the time to compare the prices and quality of the merchandise that can be found in Cohasset with what you can find at the Mall? Or the Plaza? And when was the last time that you put yourself into the hands of the SMILING, FRIENDLY, HELPFUL salespeople that you find right here at home? The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce urges you to give yourself a break. Take some time to stop in to our Cohasset stores. Browse, relax, chat with the owners and salespeople. We think you'll be surprised. Who knows, shopping in an easy, relaxed atmosphere just might become addictive.

Start a new habit. SHOP COHASSET.

PS: If you don't know where to find something, or are just wondering what is available in different shopping areas of Town, don't be afraid to call the Chamber of Commerce for suggestions. Our number is 383-1010. We are here for everyone, not just the business community.

BAY STATE GAMES

7. William Baird, Soccer, Cohasset High School.
8. Jason Cameron, Soccer, Cohasset High School.
9. Dawn Meehan, Synchronized Swimming, Deer Hill School (team and trio.)

COHASSET HIGHLIGHTS

Dawn Meehan won a silver in the team synchronized swimming competition.

Brian Pompeo contributed with five goals and two assists in five games leading his Southeast club to its first ever gold medal victory.

Southeast defeated Coastal, 5-2, in the championship game July 16, at Quincy Youth Arena.

In Southeast's 6-3 win over West July 14, Pompeo scored twice and added two assists. He and linemates Tim Griffin of Hingham (one goal) and Mike Richardson of Hull (hat trick) accounted for all six Southeast goals.

The Fishing Line

By Bill Bowers

Striped bass are in

Big striped bass are in!

Several anglers have weighed in trophy-size stripers caught at a variety of South Shore locations recently.

Top honors go to Joseph Leandro Jr. of Plymouth, who caught a 60-pound, 54-inch lineside off Plymouth Beach.

The fish was weighed in at Cherry's Bait in Plymouth.

And A. Ed McManus of Plymouth caught a 46-pound, 8-ounce bass on a live eel in Duxbury Bay, according to Bill Smith at Adams Tackle in Pembroke.

Raymond Mondville of Rockland brought in another striper of 41 pounds, 5 ounces.

Charlie Foshey of Pembroke caught a 32-pound, 8-ounce bass, also in Duxbury Bay.

Drifting live eels around Clark's Island seems to be a highly productive method.

Keith Williams, 13, of Scituate used a bucktail jig to fool a 38-pound, 4-ounce striper. That fish was weighed in at Trask Tackle in North Scituate.

Such a catch will make him the envy of many older anglers.

Mike Lavender of Quincy caught a 39-pound, 7-ounce bass in the Weir River. That fish was logged at Bra-Wey Sport Shop in Braintree.

And David Hannon of Hull took a 37-pound, 14-ounce bass which he weighed in at Fore River Tackle in Quincy.

Dan Nunes at the Tackle Shop reported a 20-pound, 1-ounce bass caught by Richard Kaiser of Plymouth.

Anglers are taking school-size bass in the North River. The bend just upstream of King's Landing Marina is a good location, as is the Union Street bridge, according to Jerry Duffy at Mary's Boat Livery in Marshfield.

Several sources have reported heavy action on bluefish close inshore from Plymouth to Boston when the east wind is blowing.

Duffy said blues were thick in the river mouth the afternoon of July 14, and numerous fishermen took them on poppers and hardware.

Bob Wasielewski of Rockland weighed in a bluefish of 12 pounds, 6-1/2 ounces.

Adams Tackle reported a 13-pound, 10-ounce blue caught by Chris Regan of Hanover.

Stan Glaskin of Hanover and his fishing buddy Paul Cronin of Norwell caught and released two school-size bluefin tuna at Stellwagen Bank.

Cape Cod Bay now holds numerous young bluefins from 75 to 150 pounds.

These small fish must be released alive to preserve the future of the magnificent bluefins, which have suffered greatly from overfishing in recent years.

Adams has announced the start of a weekly bluefish and freshwater largemouth bass contest.

The largest fish of both species weighed in each week will win its captor a $20 gift certificate.

The largemouths should be weighed in alive and then released.

Andy Craig of Quincy started off the contest with a 5-pound, 12-ounce largemouth from a Pembroke pond. That fish beat a 3-pound, 4-ounce specimen he caught earlier the same day.

Both bass were released alive.

And Chris Regan of Hanover won a gift certificate for his 13-pound, 10-ounce bluefish caught off Plymouth on a piece of cut mackerel.

Ernie Deloritti of Duxbury had a great day sharking recently near the Fingers off Martha's Vineyard.

He caught a 150-pound Mako shark and several blue sharks. A few others escaped before they could be boated.

Red Sox relief pitcher Dennis Lamp and Bernie Hamill, both of Cohasset, took four nice bluefish from a boat off Nantasket Beach.

Eddie Cordo of Scituate took a dozen blues four miles east of the North River mouth.

Rich Brown of Cohasset and Bob Sylvester of Scituate caught bluefish of 10 pounds and 10 pounds, 4 ounces at Minot's Ledge.

And Mike Achille of Hingham weighed in a 6-pound, 5-ounce largemouth bass at Trask Tackle in Scituate.

That shop's annual Bigfish Bluefish tournament is now under way and will continue until Labor Day.

The entry fee is $10. Call the shop at 545-4228 for more information.

The fishing is hot right now, so get those lines in the water.

LDS sermon for July 23

Sunday, July 23 at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Hingham, speaker Bro. Gailen Vick of the Stake High Council, will deliver a sermon on: "Applying the Lord's Commandments in our Everyday Lives."

The commandments: "Thou will not steal" and "Thou will not covet" will be emphasized.

The family worship hour begins at 9 a.m., followed by Sunday School classes. Brother Heber Nielsen of Hingham will conduct the meeting. Visitors are welcome.

CANOEING ON THE NORTH RIVER

Spend a day canoeing on Massachusetts' first scenic waterway with Russ Sears, a certified canoe guide. Saturday, July 29, 9 a.m.-3 p.m. (raindate: July 30). Members/$20 adult, $16/child under 12 — our canoe; $9 adult, $7 child — your own canoe. Non-members/$26 adult, $21/child — our canoe; $11 adult, $9 child — your own canoe. The river is alive with summer plants and animals. Picture the shipyards of yesteryear that dotted the river banks where workmen built the stately clipper ships. We provide canoes, paddles, and preservers. Canoes hold 3 adults or 2 adults and 2 children (under 12). Some ability to canoe is necessary. Please note the raindate. Raindate refunds will not be given unless your space is filled. Call the Science Center at 659-2559 to register.

TROPICAL RAIN FOREST

Experience the thrill of making your own tropical rain forest, Saturday, July 29, 10-11:30 a.m. Members/$10. Non-members $12.50. You will learn about the water cycle, how plants grow, and what they need to survive with Suzanne Kramer of the Mass. Horticultural Society. You'll also study real rain forests and the many types of plants and animals that live there to find out why they're important to the entire planet. Call the Science Center at 659-2559 for registration information.

GREAT ESKER PARK

Join a SSNSC naturalist for a leisurely walk through Great Esker Park, Weymouth, Wednesday, August 2, 10 a.m.-noon. Members/free. Non-members/$4. Bordering the Back River, this glacial formation contains woodlands of hickory, red oak, black cherry and sassafras. In the marshes below the park you may see a great blue heron, snowy egret, or a marsh hawk. These informal walks are perfect for all ages. Meet at the Science Center 659-2559 and register at the Main Desk.

FLYING MAMMALS

Science Center Naturalist Jini Foster will introduce the whole family to that much maligned of mammals, the bat, Thursday, August 3, 7-8:30 p.m. Members/$4 adult; $3 child under 12. Non-members/$5 adult; $4 child under 12. Bats are actually among the most interesting and marvelously evolved mammals on earth! We'll view slides, examine a live bat, and scout the skies for resident species. Call the Science Center at 659-2559 for registration information.

MONARCH BUTTERFLIES

Join butterfly expert Anne Torey for a walk and talk about the exotic, delicate Monarch butterfly, Saturday, August 5, 10 a.m.-noon. For children 7 years and up. Members/$6. Non-members/$9. Through slides, we'll take a close look at the life of a butterfly, including its incredible migration from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico. We will also examine an actual Monarch larva and chrysalis. Then, we'll to outside to observe these fanciful flyers in the wind. Please call the Science Center at 659-2559 for registration information.

Three-day party for 25th CHS reunion. . .

"The big problem was the detective work," Ron said.

"We had 88 members in our class and managed to locate all but three of them, Linda Bernitt, Alice Nugent and Harry Ward.

"We went to the colleges a lot. Alumni offices tend to know where former students are, hoping for donations, no doubt."

During the reunion committee meetings, the 12 members did a lot of reminiscing. "In fact," Ron kidded, "I think most of us joined the committee so we wouldn't get talked about behind out backs."

Ron estimated 57 class members were in attendance for all or part of the three-day happening.

While the French celebrated the fall of the Bastille, the class of 1964 celebrated with a kick-off party Friday, July 14 at Don Massa's home.

Saturday, July 15, there was a day-long beach party on offshore Bassings Beach. That evening the main event of the weekend took place, a dinner-dance at the old Greenhouse Restaurant.

If this group still wanted to see more of one another — and it did — there was a farewell brunch Sunday, July 16 at Kimball's.

People attended from near and far and felt, yes, it was worth the trip.

"It's been wonderful seeing people after so long," said Jane Marshall of North Hollywood, California.

"I do have to check name tags a lot though. Some people look the same but most have changed.

"We've been talking more about now than then, where we live, what we're doing, look us up when you pass through, that sort of thing."

Linda Williams Needham drove up in a truck from Florida. "Yea, I really wanted to come," she said. "I must have to have come here in a truck with no air conditioning, no cruise control and my cat Veronica in the back."

There were five classmates who came from Colorado. A dozen other states were represented.

But the majority of the class, 48, still live in Massachusetts. Seventeen alumni still live in Cohasset.

John Sands cruised in from Mashfield and said, "The reason I attended is to give all the girls a second chance at me."

The "Travelled Longest Distance Award" went to Robert Reed who came 6,000 miles from Hawaii.

The "Travelled Shortest Distance" went to Cohasset policeman Brian Noonan who had to walk 730 steps to the Saturday-night party. He beat out his wife Jackie Stauss Noonan by one step by virtue of sleeping on the side of the bed closest to the bedroom door.

Donald Massa and Jean Phippen enjoy the class reunion. (Photo by J. Paul McDonald)

The award for the "Youngest Child" went to eight-months pregnant Christine Cooney. "Most Known Kids" (oh,oh) went to Diane Coletti Joseph with five.

George Casey and Chris Cassidy had been voted Most Likely to Succeed in 1964. Both attended the reunion and a classmate, Geoffrey Mullette of Denver, Colorado, said it had more or less turned out to be true.

Casey himself, who is a developer in New Hope, Pennsylvania, said,

"How did it work out? I don't know. I know Jimmy Lyons ('64) receded and John Sands ('64) has gone to seed. So I guess I've succeeded.

"I do know what success is though. It's looking at a corn or wheat field and seeing houses."

For those who couldn't attend, Ron wants you to know that the award for "Most Original Hair Left" went to his cousin Don Massa.

"In fact, he has more hair now than he did then," Ron said referring to Don's full head and beard.

And the least amount of hair award went to Steve Humphreys, former class president.

The mood of the three-day get-together was upbeat and relaxed, a tribute to the recognition that despite the Vietnam war and the hazards of modern life, all 88 members of the class of '64 were still alive.

Ron said, "What was most exciting was the feeling of the reunion.

"A five- or 10-year reunion is too soon. People are getting established. Reunions are less to see people than to impress.

"After 25 years, it's like, hey, we just want to remember people we knew 25 years ago and enjoy their company. It' a whole different attitude."

Mullette said something similar when he briefly turned serious in the midst of the festivities. The reunion was only the third time he had been in Cohasset in the 25 years.

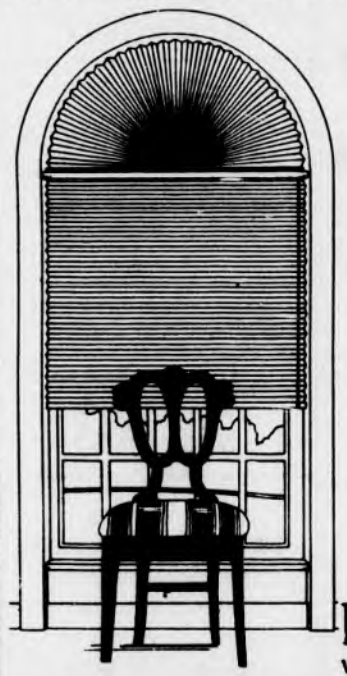
"The four years I spent in Cohasset High School were the happiest in my life until I turned 40.

"You learn things about yourself by then, what's real. You don't try to impress people anymore — except maybe when you come to reunions, ha, ha."

Mullette was elected Most Sincere in 1964; so how could his words be doubted?

Finally, on Sunday a 25-year-old grudge was settled when Carol Grassi Began pushed Mullette off Mill Bridge into the harbor water.

It seems Mullette had pushed Began off that same bridge during Senior Week, instilling in her a 25-year fear of hitting her head and drowning. She was still angry.



When she told Mullette about her reaction, he was horrified and sportingly invited her to return the insult.

So, while Mullette sat on the bridge, fully dressed, and reading the Sunday paper to boot, Began got a running start across the street and pushed him into the water.

Any lingering demons were expelled, and the reunion of the class of '64 came to a happy end. ■

Grave Study Comm. urged to continue plan despite vote

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Selectmen told the chairman of the Cemetery Study Committee July 24 to meet with other town officials to see if plans for the cemetery can go forward despite a rejection by voters to finance the project.

But they told the chairman of the Milliken/Lillard Study Committee to look for private financing for the project, also defeated at the ballot, which would renovate the town's athletic fields.

Both projects had received support at town meetings, but were defeated at the polls.

Cemetery committee chairman Glenn Pratt said that voters' action was more a statement about where the money would come from, than about support for the project.

Residents voted against a $50,000 debt exclusion for the engineering, plans and specifications for the cemetery.

Pratt asked selectmen to find $13,000 in the town's 1991 budget to pay back the first portion of the $50,000 loan plus interest.

Then in 1992, the cemetery will become self-funding when the sale of graves begins, he said.

"We don't have $13,000, or 13 cents," said selectmen chairman Burt Pratt.

But Glenn Pratt said that selectmen must show leadership.

"This isn't a special interest," he said. "It is an obligation and requirement of the town."

The town will run out of graves in 1992, according to the study committee. The new cemetery would provide 5,000 graves when it is completed.

Selectman Ned Tebbetts said he did not want to act against the voters, and would not support the project.

"The way the question (on the ballot was worded, Mr. (Glenn) Pratt is exactly right," said selectman Diana Kornet.

But selectman Martha Gjesteby disagreed.

"That ($13,000) will take money from other things we need," said Gjesteby. "We have to go by what the voters say."

"It's not right for the town to treat the citizens to no place to be buried," said Glenn Pratt. "In 1992, there will be no place to be buried. It's a disgrace.

School Supt. recommends student athletic fee

No action was taken but the school committee began discussing instituting a student athletic fee of $100 per student per sport. The proposal was made by School Supt. Stephen Hart.

One of the concerns I have is that we insure that funding be available for athletics," Hart said. "We're relying on fundraising, which I have confidence in, but it takes time and I don't want us to be in a position of offering fall sports and then not having money for winter or spring sports.

Hart suggested that the $100 fee be established, but that the amount would be reduced according to the amount of money generated through fundraising.

"That way we can ensure that the athletic program will be run, " Hart said. "And hopefully we'll raise the $25,000 and we can drop the fee back to $35. "

"So then if they don't raise the money, a student who plays three sports will have to pay $300?" asked member Russ Reidy.

"I don't know of any other way," Hart said. "Hopefully we won't have to rely on user fees every year."

Member Ralph Kidder asked if a $100 fee would cover the cost of the athletic program. Hart replied that it would. Hart added that if fundraising were to be conducted during the school year students who had already paid the $100 fee would be reimbursed from a revolving account.

Kidder asked if allowances would be made for families on whom the fee would create a hardship. Hart said that such situations would be "resolved somehow."

Ford said that the fee would "shift the burden appropriately, because the contributors for the fundraiser are primarily parents of students anyway."

Hart said that he felt "positive about the fundraiser. The fee is really an insurance policy, " he said.

The school committee will again discuss the user athletic fee plan during an August meeting.

SHINE outreach senior program clouded by budget cuts

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

A husband and wife in their 80s recently moved to Cohasset to live with their son.

The father had a serious illness and needed treatment at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston.

But the couple had questions about such things as insurance and medical transportation.

That's where the Cohasset Council on Aging came in.

"Through a number of different resources, we got help for them," said council director Kathy Bryanton.

That help came from the SHINE program, an outreach worker and network of information on medical transportation, according to Bryanton.

"Those are the kinds of programs we will lose next June," she said, referring to budget cuts by Gov. Michael Dukakis.

"It's really frustrating," said Bryanton. "There are going to be cutbacks in councils on aging throughout the South Shore and the state.

"It's not just a Cohasset problem. There are going to be cutbacks statewide. There is a crisis in the state, and the most vulnerable people are being hurt.

"The man and woman we helped are very, very independent. But they didn't know where to turn in Cohasset.

"It's not as if they needed a whole lot of help. But they needed access to the proper services."

Bryanton explained that the SHINE (Serving Health Information Needs of Elders) program began in 1986.

"It originated with Sen. William Golden," Bryanton said. "He was interested in getting information to seniors."

Through the efforts of the state Executive Office of Elder Affairs, the program was established to ensure that Massachusetts elders have access to accurate information regarding heath insurance and health care options.

Trained volunteers answer questions over the phone, at the senior center, 3 North Main St., or in senior's homes. Services are free.

Pat Ryan is coordinator of the South Shore program, which is funded by a state grant obtained by Bryanton. Cohasset has three SHINE

Town Hall will be open Monday - Friday

Town hall will not be closed to the public one day a week after all.

Selectmen had considered the measure during budget deliberations. They said that with department's shorthanded, employees could use the time to catch up on work.

But at Monday night's selectmen meeting, executive secretary Greg Doyon said that the move will not be necessary.

Doyon said he had a discussion about the proposal with department heads.

"The consensus was not to close on Wednesdays (the day which had been suggested)," said Doyon.

"They said they would be getting more quiet time than they really need," he said.

Doyon added that closing town hall anything less than a full day at town would be too confusing to the public.

Cohasset's week

Robbins chosen as inspector

In a unanimous decision, Hingham selectmen chose to appoint Donald Robbins, the current building inspector in Cohasset, as their new building commissioner, replacing Richard Morgan.

A total of 29 resumes were submitted to selectmen, out of which ten candidates were called for interviews.

Selectmen said they narrowed the pool down to three by last Saturday.

Robbins, was nominated by selectman Kate Mahony, who cited his experience as the current deputy building inspector for Hingham and his position as the chief building inspector for Cohasset.

"I think with his experience, he'll move the town right along," Mahony said.

The nomination was echoed by selectman Edward Lewiecki, who said Robbins' references were excellent.

"He can step right into the job, with his experience," Lewiecki said. "He received some exceedingly high references."

Robbins, who lives in Norwell, said he will accept the appointment, which will commence on August 14. The term will expire in May of 1990.

"This is a natural progression for me," Robbins said. "I've worked in the town, and I think I have plenty of experience."

Robbins will receive $672.10 a week, or $35,082 a year in his new capacity.

Ledge removal cost reviewed

An official from Sciaba Construction Co. said he will look over the figures and see if any reduction can be made in the cost of ledge removal at the site of the planned transfer station, selectman chairman Burt Pratt said July 24.

Pratt said he expects to receive a response this week after a meeting Monday with Sciaba as well as SEA Consultants, Inc.

The dispute involves a $30,000 discrepancy over the amount of ledge at the site at the Cedar St. Landfill.

SEA Consultants had estimated that 50 cubic yards of ledge would have to be removed at a cost of $5,500.

But there were actually 600 cubic yards at the site, and cost of removal was $60,000.

The discrepancy was the topic of a meeting last week between the health board and selectmen, as well as transfer station committee and representative of SEA Consultants Inc.

About half of the $60,000 was included in the first payment to the contractors, Sciaba Construction Co.

Selectmen also agreed to pay another $34,000 in construction costs, but the final $30,000 for ledge removal was withheld until the matter is resolved.

Selectman Diana Kornet had suggested that the town pay one third of the cost, and SEA pay two thirds.

But SEA contended that it didn't do anything wrong.

Town boards also questioned why boorings for ledge weren't done within the footprint of the $472,000 transfer station.

But Doug Burkhardt, project engineer, said the decision was made to do boorings in areas that were accessible and not heavily wooded.

Kornet said at this week's meeting that SEA should absorb some of the cost as well.

"I came away feeling that Sciaba and SEA will give a little," said Pratt.

Cohasset's week

Computer system review

The Board of Water Commissioners has voted to review the computer system requirements in the water department.

In a letter to selectmen, Water Dept. Supt. Ben Curley discussed "excessive operating expenses and less than satisfactory performance" with the current system.

"It is our intention to acquire an in-house system in FY 1991," said Curley. "We will consult with various water works agencies to determine which system which address our needs.

"Please notify us of your intent for computer systems, so that our objectives will be compatible with the goals of other departments."

Interest in regional plan

Norwell's executive secretary said she and possibly others would be interested in talking with Cohasset about regionalization of services.

In a letter to selectmen, Norwell Executive Secretary Annette Sexton acknowledged receipt of a letter from Cohasset's town government structure committee on the possibility of discussing the topic.

"We presently have a long range planning committee reviewing the town government structure as to whether we should be making changes and perhaps they would be interested," said Sexton.

"If not, I would like to discuss such a concept on behalf of the board of selectmen."

Make way for ducklings

A Spring St. resident who has been playing crossing guard to a group of ducks thinks it may be time the town took over that responsibility.

Elizabeth A. Soule has asked the town to erect some "Duck Crossing" signs on Cushing Rd. where the ducks cross, apparently to get something to eat.

Soule said she has directed traffic a few times while the ducks crossed, and watched some near misses.

She said she has heard that "Duck Crossing" signs are more common than one would think.

"Other towns have done similar things," said Soule. "I would hate to see them (the ducks) get killed."

Soule also said that the town should find out what is wrong with the pond which has algae all over it.

"The Hingham Fisheries and Wildlife was going to ask the town to do something about it," said Soule.

"There is obviously a problem there," she said. "The animals can't feed."

Due to the limited amount of money in the sign budget, selectmen should make the decision about a sign, said highway surveyor Harold Litchfield.

"While I sympathize with Miss Soule, the money in this account is needed just to repair and replace our most basic signs," said Litchfield.

"Therefore, should the board approve this request, the money for this sign will have to come from a transfer of funds."

Estimated tax bills coming

Assessor James Lagrotteria told selectmen recently that estimated tax bills will probably be sent out this year.

"We see no other way with the situation with the budget," said Lagrotteria.

He said that the tax rate will be ready to be set in September.

"We have finished revaluation, and expect certification in six to seven days," said Lagrotteria.

Last year's tax rate was $14.63.

Chiropractic for Health
by Dr. Debra M.Tranberg
Chiropractor
FIELD WORK
The fitness boom has produced its share of sports injuries. Sprain, strain, and other physical ailments afflict weekend warriors and serious athletes-in-training alike. Such injuries as joint dislocations are accorded chiropractic treatment that is in keeping with its overall approach. The aim is to restore correct positioning, and move toward mobilizing the injured area as quickly as possible. Of course, there are cases which warrant immobilization. The chiropractor's expertise lies in pinpointing the correct time for restoring movement. This approach helps to avoid muscle and ligament shortening which restricts the range of motion for excessive periods of time. One need only look to the chiropractic record for returning injured professional athletes to action to see the benefits of the chiropractic approach.
The science of chiropractic offers many applications from dealing with existing problems to preventing unwanted situations from developing. Your needs and problems will be assessed and indicated measures explained and introduced. If you are involved in the trades or are a fisherman or perform other types of manual labor, it may well be that the problems you are experiencing are due to the nature of the work you do. For the happy and healthy lifestyle you desire and deserve, we invite you to call SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC today. Located at 80 Front St., Scituate Harbor. Telephone 545-7388. By appointment. Early morning and late evening appointments. Workers Compensation cases, VISA, M/C and most insurance plans accepted.

Cemetery Study Committee asked to continue project

"We've known since 1977 that this was coming. Here it is, and I don't believe we can sidestep it."

Gjesteby suggested raising the price of an unused grave which is sold back to the town.

But Peter Laugelle, tree, park and cemetery superintendent, didn't think that was a good solution.

Kornet asked about expanding Beechwood Cemetery, but that idea was not considered economical.

The selectman chairman suggested that Glenn Pratt discuss the matter with the town counsel, town accountant, and executive secretary "to see if there is a viable way to move the project along."

"What do we do with other departments who request money?" asked selectman Rocco Laugelle. "We are cutting police and fire. We just don't have it."

"They'll see if a solution is possible," said Burt Pratt. "They'll see if they can come up with an innovative way to do this and report back to us. It will be a conference between town officials to see if they can come up with an answer that we can't come up with tonight."

"I go along with the committee, but I am resistant to paying $13,000," said Tebbetts.

Gjesteby was opposed to the meeting.

"I would like to see all the debt exclusion articles at the next town meeting," she said.

"You are fun and games," selectman Pratt told Wayne Sawchuk when he approached the board about the $280,000 plans for Milliken/Lillard Field. "The cemetery is serious business. Your project is dead in the water.

"Ordinarily, we would dismiss your committee with a vote of thanks. The board is being very liberal in keeping the committee operating and ideas alive."

Pratt noted that none of the projects will go forward without "passing muster" with the capital budget committee.

Tebbetts said the Milliken/Lillard Field project was ranked eighth out of eight by the capital budget committee.

Sawchuk said he understood residents who didn't want to pay more taxes.

But he said he would like to proceed with the plans in some manner.

"We definitely need more places to play," he said.

"But I don't see how town finances are going to get any better. We are probably going to be bankrupt in five years."

Sawchuk asked selectmen for some direction.

"If there isn't a prayer in the world, then tell us to try raising money privately. Tell me what to do so the committee can go forward."

"Finance the project privately," said Pratt.

Kornet praised the work of the committee, and said its members should see how much money they could raise privately.

"Maybe if you see how much can be raised, you can go to town meeting and ask for the balance," she said.

Pratt also praised the work of the committee.

"It's a darn shame we just can't reach into the till," he said.

Selectmen also gave the committee permission to talk with town counsel about establishing a non-profit corporation to accept donations.

In addition, members accepted Sawchuk's offer of machinery and clay to fix the common pond.

Cox Estate Planning Comm. to study site use

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

With some organizational tasks completed, the six-member Cox Estate Planning Committee will meet Aug. 16, to study possible municipal uses of the former waterfront home of Jessie Bancroft Cox.

The committee held a brief, initial meeting July 19, and discussed some organizational issues.

At its next meeting, the committee plans to elect its officers, as well as to supply members with information on the property, known as the Oaks.

The estate was recently put up for sale again with a price tag of $3.7 million.

Members of the committee are Rev. Edward Atkinson, minister of First Parish Church, representing the Paul Pratt Library; Paula Knowles, the South Shore Chamber of Commerce; Fritz Pfaffmann, the Harbor Committee; Donald Staszko, the Recreation Commission; Veneta Roebuck, Conservation Commission; and Rob Ralston, member-at-large.

The committee's charge, recently broadened by selectmen, will be to study such things as the preservation of open space, use of the shore line, generation of septage or sewerage, traffic and parking impact, and economic benefit.

The committee will also present a report to selectmen, and advise permit-granting agencies of the town's concerns regarding any proposed uses of the property by a prospective buyer/developer.

The estate was the center of controversy last year when the owners, MTC Associates, III, proposed a marina along the 1,800 feet of water frontage on Cohasset Harbor.

The marina of 90 to 100 boat slips would have been sold as "dockominiums".

In return for town approval, the owners of the property offered to donate the house and grounds to Cohasset officials to use as they saw fit.

MTC Associates would retain ownership of the waterfront for the marina development.

But the plan was rejected by town voters in a special town meeting in December, 1988.

The property is now being marketed by LandVest, the Boston-based luxury real estate broker, in affiliation with Gallery 360 of Cohasset.

Among those who have expressed interest in the property is Konover and Associates, a management and development firm in West Hartford, Conn.

Konover would like to convert the harborside home into residences for the elderly.

At the planning committee's initial meeting last Wednesday, Ralston asked whether the committee would be a "lame duck" if the property were sold.

"I don't think necessarily," said Rev. Atkinson, who explained that unless the buyer wants to use the property as a single family residence, he or she would have to obtain permits from town boards.

"I see us as a little bit of an advisory committee," he said. "We would advise the selectmen what our feelings are. If we kept our eyes on this, our services would be valid whether the property is sold or not."

For the next meeting, members will assemble such things as a deed to the property, variance granted by the town regarding the estate, and a copy of the zoning bylaws.

Beach Street flooding

James and Ann Whelan met with conservation commission members Tuesday to discuss flooding at their property, which they believe is being caused by construction at 153 Beach St., the lot adjacent to their home.

Joseph McLaughlin, of 43 Surry Dr., owns the property at 153 Beach St., where he has recently had a large home built.

Flooding is occurring on the Whelan's property at a site where they recently obtained a successful perc test for proposed construction.

James Whelan said that he believes that water was being pumped from the basement at the McLaughlin property. Commission chairman Jeff Waal said builders allegedly hit water 18 inches below the surface.

Whelan said that his property is flooded now after every rain, although this year has been much drier than average.

"He [McLaughlin] raised the level of his land. First he put in a whole lot of clay. Clay — which water will not penetrate. Then he put loam on top of the clay, and then sod on top of that," Whelan said. "So then he watered the sod there and the water cannot go down so it runs right off."

The Conservation Commission has asked McLaughlin three times to meet with them, Waal said. The first time, McLaughlin said he was going to Vermont, said Waal. The second request drew no response.

Then the commission sent a certified letter which the postal service was unable to deliver to McLaughlin in three attempts. Finally the commission issued an enforcement order which was delivered by a constable.

The commission received a letter from the builders that a new drywell had been installed.

Waal said that a letter would be sent to SITEC Engineering to request a meeting and an on-site inspection of the property, Aug. 1.

SHINE program funding clouded by state budget woes

counselors - Joe Buckley, a retired CEO, Eleanor Smith, a retired librarian, and Helen Cody, a retired nurse.

"There is such a need for the SHINE program," said Ryan, who works 15 hours a week, and was hired last September.

"She has done an outstanding job, too," added Bryanton.

From January to March of this year there were 50 requests for information from SHINE counselors, according to Ryan.

"It has been very popular," agreed Bryanton. "It has really taken off."

Counselors make a commitment to volunteer four hours a week for a year, according to Ryan.

"They are really interested in serving the community," said Ryan. "They are asked to come in for four hours, but they do a lot more.

"They are detail-oriented. A lot of people shy away from paper work. But not these people. They just dig right in."

Last year, the council received $13,500 in discretionary grant money which was used for the Ryan's salary and for an outreach worker, Sue Connelly.

"But now that has been vetoed," Bryanton said. "Unless the legislature overrides the governor's veto, we won't see that money again.

"I feel very frustrated. I believe the councils on aging are very cost effective programs. It's taken a long time for the councils on aging to establish programs, to become apparent to people in the community."

Information referrals at Cohasset's senior center have increased three-fold since the center was established in 1986, according to Bryanton.

"We really put a lot of effort into helping people," she said. "We work with the FISH program (which provides transportation to medical appointments and hospitals) and with South Shore Elder Services to do everything we can to make sure needs are met."

Given the financial climate of the state, Ryan said she is not really surprised at the cutbacks.

"Hopefully, this can be resolved," she said.

Sen. Golden and Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray have been contacted about the cuts, said Bryanton, and the council has started a postcard campaign.

"A year is time to document the need to our representatives," said Ryan. "We all have a wait and see attitude."

"We don't know what our real options are," continued Bryanton. "The elderly do have a voice in this. Other people might not realize how valuable these programs are, and how many people they reach.

"At the council on aging, we have always tried to educate people to services that are available and to initiate progams we feel will help seniors gain access to better programs."

"As people grow older, their needs change, and the council on aging addresses their needs," said Ryan."The budget cuts directly affect the ability of the council to meet their needs."

In addition to these cutbacks, the council also faces a 10-20 percent reduction in its formula grant money, according to Bryanton.

She attended a meeting on that topic at the Executive Office of Elder Affairs last Friday.

"The money for formula grants has been frozen," she said. Cohasset received about $3,000 in such grants last year.

"We won't know what will happen with that until August," said Bryanton.

The majority of the council's budget comes from the town, she said.

"They have been very supportive of the council on aging," said Bryanton.

In addition, over 125 volunteers give their time to the senior center. But some paid directors are still needed.

The SHINE program would be hard pressed to operate without a director, despite all its volunteers, according to Bryanton.

"You really need to have a professional staff person to make this happen," she said. "You need to have a professional person to keep up with the state and federal regulations, and you have to know what is happening locally.

"You have to be in touch with the Department of Elder Affairs. A volunteer wouldn't necessarily be able to do that."

Bryanton said that her biggest concern is that programs won't be continued.

"The elderly need to have consistency," she said. "It's not fair for them to be put on hold or to have wait."

She noted that last spring, the town's advisory board spoke of the possibility of closing the senior center one day a week. It is open Monday to Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

"We really want to try to keep it open five days a week," said Bryanton. "But we'll have to keep it in mind if more cuts are made in the future."

The center also offers such things as exercise programs, walking clubs, craft activities and luncheons. In addition, there are day trips and educational programs.

"It's a meeting place for lots of senior citizens," said Ryan.

About a third of the town's population is made up of senior citizens, according to Bryanton.

She feels it is unfair that 36 percent of the state's elder affairs budget has been cut.

"There have been less cuts in other departments," she said. "The cuts always seem to be to the most vulnerable in the population. We find that very difficult.

"The main thing is that it takes a very small amount of money to keep senior services going," said Bryanton. "People need to realize that it is that type of funding. That same funding needs to be kept in place so that good progams can continue.

"Even if people don't need the council on aging today, they never know when they are going to need it.

"We have had people say, 'you have helped me so much'.

"You can't put a dollar amount on that."

.....

The council on aging needs volunteers to drive a Cohasset man to Waltham Hospital. He needs daily treatment for a month, but drivers can volunteer for one day a week. The family will reimburse the driver for gasoline. To volunteer, call Bryanton at 383-9112.

Litchfield to lead pond repairs

Selectmen voted Monday night, July 24, to appoint highway surveyor Harold Litchfield in charge of repairs at the common pond.

Northeast Gunnite was selected to install the gunnite. That work is scheduled to begin Aug. 15.

Selectmen noted that some work on the pond has already begun.

"Many people have said to me, 'Thank heavens something is happening," said selectmen Diana Kornet.

Work on the pond, which is officially called Meetinghouse Pond, is expected to be completed after the gunnite is installed.

Rte. 3A site plan appearance noted by planners

By Bill Leitch
Mariner correspondent

Planning board members have strongly affirmed a commitment to work towards improving the appearance of Route 3A.

Referring to architect James Regan's rendering of a metal building proposed by Deltec, Inc. of Pembroke for a current site of Nantasket Pier Marine, Planning Board chairman Alfred Moore said, "I'm not trying to say that your building is ugly, but storage buildings tend to be less than attractive. I realize that it's a storage building, but we're trying very hard to improve the appearance of Route 3A."

Regan and Paul McInnes, both from Deltec, considered possible problems with a proposal by Greg Sandonator, owner of Nantasket Pier Marine, to construct a metal warehouse building at the site to be used primarily for boat storage during winter months.

Board members did not rule out the possibility of a metal building, but said they would wait to learn the recommendations of the Design Review Board.

"Ideally, you'd come back arm in arm with the Design Review Board," said Moore.

Member Daniel Cotton was less enthusiastic.

"I've got to tell you that frankly I don't think they [metal buildings] are very gorgeous or the kind of thing suited for 3A," Cotton said. "I think that metal buildings are great — for an industrial park. But I just don't see Rte. 3A as an industrial park. I'll listen politely to the Design Review Board, but I won't promise that I won't argue with it."

McInnes said that since Sandontor would only be using the building for storage space, it would not be cost-effective to construct a more elaborate building.

"The question for Greg [Sandonator], as it is for everybody, is dollars," McInnes said. "If it gets cost-prohibitive, Greg will stop [with his plans]."

Because some boat sales will be conducted at the site, there was debate about whether the building could be classified as a warehouse.

The issue was the number of parking spaces which would be required. A warehouse requires one space for every 500 square feet of building space, which would mean 15 spaces for the proposed building.

All other buildings, including showrooms, are required by the bylaw to provide one space per 100 square feet, of which one-third may be held in reserve.

This would mean 50 spaces, with land reserved for 25 more.

Regan said that 50 parking spaces would be "excessive" for Sandonator's purposes.

"I, personally, am not in favor of paving everything in sight just so we can all look at asphalt," said Moore. "But it's essential in any event that the maximum [75] spaces be at the very least reserved."

Planning Board members agreed that 15 spaces would be sufficient for the proposed use of the site. Their concern was that in the future, the building may be used for something other than boat storage.

"We don't want to find out five years from now that the boat business has gone bankrupt and we've got a farmer's market in there and no place to park," Moore said.

Cotton said that the board could not approve site plans with the stipulation that the building only be used as a warehouse.

"The problem is that there's nothing to say that this building is going to stay in this particular business. When we accept the building, it's accepted as a highway business building no matter what. And it's perfectly capable of being transformed into a market or something of that sort somewhere down the line, because it's allowed in the area," Cotton said.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson supported Cotton, saying, "You cannot incorporate a use provision into a site. You have to incorporate use provisions in the zoning bylaws."

Henderson added however that the building would have to be renovated in order to be used for something other than a warehouse.

"They're going to have to get site approval again, so that's when you refer it to the building inspector or the appeals board to allow him to hold in reserve 80 percent, rather than one-third, of the required parking spaces.

This would require only 15 spaces to be paved, with land held in reserve for 60 additional spaces. Other board members agreed with this recommendation.

Regan agreed to meet with both the Design Review Board and the appeals board.

Lighthouse contest plans

The Scituate Arts Association will sponsor a "Let's Draw The Lighthouse Contest" for children of all ages.

Ribbons will be awarded and, space permitting, all entries will be hung in front of the Gallery on Front Street during the Chamber of Commerce's Heritage Days Weekend, August 4, 5 and 6.

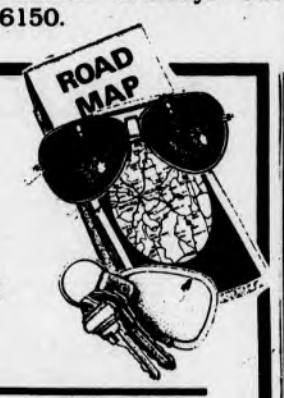
The Cedar Point Lighthouse, one of Scituate's most charming historic sites, has been drawn, painted, sculpted and photographed by professional and amateur artists from around the world.

Entries must not be framed and must be no smaller than 12" x 16" and no larger than 16" x 20".

First-, second- and third-place ribbons will be awarded in three age categories: 0-10 years, 11-18, and 19+ , A special ribbon will be awarded for most unusual viewpoint.

There is no entry fee and contestants may submit multiple entries.

Artists are requested to print their name and age on the front of the entry and their address and phone number on the back.



Drawings should be dropped off at the gallery before Friday, August 1, at 5 p.m.

The Scituate Arts Association Gallery at 131 Front Street in Scituate Harbor is open Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. Closed Mondays. For information, call (617) 545-6150.

□ It is especially nice to know that the business community of Cohasset has not forgotten the elderly citizens. One business in particular is the Super Stop and Shop of Cohasset. Once a week its florist department, managed by Ann Hudson, donated its "day old" flowers to the residents of the Cohasset Knoll Skilled Nursing and Rehabilitation Facility. To some, this may seem unimportant; but to the residents of the Knoll, it is a special day.

The flowers add a great deal of life to the residents' rooms, dining room and nurses' stations. It's amazing how so little can mean so much to those who are unable to get out and about!

There is some exciting news for all of the former swim team members or employees of the Cohasset Swim Center and Abbie White is leading the charge. Abbie is forming an alumnae swim meet at the pool, scheduled for July 29. Anyone that qualifies should call Abbie or drop in at the Swim Center for more details. The telephone number is 383-9463.

□ July 17 was a busy day for St. Anthony's C.Y.O. Kevin Mulcahy, Jonathan Mitchell, and Brendan McCarthy braved the wind and rain to play in the 50th Anniversary C.Y.O. Golf Tournament at Ponkapoag Golf Course in Canton. That evening Bob Magner, Jr., and Lili and Joe Sestito took a group to the C.Y.O. Boston Harbor Cruise for dancing and sightseeing. Many thanks to all those who attended and to those who helped make it all possible.

□ Richard and Babette Strecker are proud parents and the reason is their brand new baby daughter Paige. Paige was born June 28 at Beth Israel Hospital.

□ A salute to Julie O'Rourke who was commissioned as a Navy ensign upon graduation from Villanova University in Villanova, Pa.

□ Also, Marine Captain Richard J. Rafferty recently received a Navy Commendations Medal and reported for duty at Camp Lejuene, North Carolina.

□ Hats off to Christopher Ford, who has been named to the Board of Directors at Pilgrim Cooperative Bank. Mr. Ford is the owner and president of Hallmark 100 Properties, and is also Vice Chairman of the Cohasset School Committee.

□ "Mucka" McNeill was spotted around town last weekend. He is teaching school in Texas, likes his work a lot; Mike as a fifth grade teacher, knowing how much he liked kiddos, is a good thought to hold on to.

□ Congratulations to Jim and Carole Runy from Rick Grassie.

□ Hard work is ahead for the following ladies, and they are sure to love it! The new board members of the Community Garden Club are: Rosie Dole, president; Barbara Christensen, first vice president; Noel Manion, second vice president; Annette Seehen, treasurer; Margaret Smart, secretary, and Mary Harrington, corresponding secretary.

□ A concerned Cohasset resident called last week, talking about the trash situation in our downtown. It has been an eyesore, she said, and wondered if it wouldn't be worthwhile to have a beautification committee to help organize trash pickup and make it look as beautiful as it should be. One comment that she did make was how much nicer it has been looking lately between Cohasset News and the Natural Health Food Store. Everyone should do their part too, pick up your litter and place it in one of the bins that are placed around the downtown. I see them being emptied every morning by the town departments.

□ An urgent appeal for volunteer drivers to take South Shore cancer patients to hospitals for treatment, has been issued by the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society.

This agency operates the volunteer service out of a "hot line" headquarters in the Hersey House, Hingham.

Towns covered by the service include Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Scituate and Weymouth.

For further information call the Hersey House, 749-2535 or the Unit Office, (617) 341-4210.

"These are really missions of mercy," Mrs. Housman states. "Our volunteers find it very rewarding and very much appreciated by patients, most of whom have no other way to get to hospitals for the daily treatments."

□ Happy Birthday to Clark!

□ Moms, if you missed out on tickets for the morning performances of the Thursday "kiddie show," don't despair! They will be having afternoon shows for all of the remaining performances, and they aren't all sold out. The whole audience loves the shows, so don't miss out.

□ Happy birthday to Jamie Roy!

□ There was a reminder last week in the Mariner, and one that is worthy of repeating . . . don't forget to "Shop Cohasset," it is easy, there are grand things around, and you don't have to go miles to get what you want. The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce even has a phone line for the "confused" shopper that doesn't know what to buy for a gift! Call them at 383-1010.

□ Did any Cohasset "Yaz fans" go to his induction into the Hall of Fame? If so, call me, would love to write about it with a Cohasset viewpoint!

That's the news for this week, please call me with your newsy item.

School Committee outlines goals

By Bill Leitch
Mariner corresponedent

The School Committee this week outlined their goals for the next year with an emphasis toward expanding and increasing the efficiency of the Cohasset school system in terms of educational quality, accountability and innovative use of resources.

School Committee Barbara Bliss outlined five objectives for the coming school year. They are:

• To review and revitalize the curriculum. Dr. Thomas Whalen former superintendent in Brockton and Weston hired to conduct a study on the school system, recommended the establishment of a curriculum council and exposing the curriculum to periodic audits by members of the school system, the community, and the educational field.

• To strengthen the professional development of faculty members for recognition, development and evaluation activities. Bliss cited a need to re-examine the evaluation process. She said that a process was needed to provide greater differentiation between faculty members in these times of unfortunate staff reductions." Committee members agreed that the current evaluation mechanism is insufficient.

• To strengthen administrative effectiveness and efficiency. The committee said they would encourage administrators to present their goals and to record periodic progress reports.

• To determine the best use of school facilities. Bliss noted that this would include the development of a five-year capital outlay plan. as well as addressing issues raised by members of the community, such as regionalization and the best use of space.

• To further develop community support. Bliss said that it is vital that the school system strive to encourage the continued support of those townspeople already involved and to generate support from those "who are sort of on the fence."

She added that the committee intends to examine the development of a communications tool, such as a newsletter or periodic forums. She said that the committee would also consider conducting a survey of residents to obtain their input on the school system.

"We need to get the message out that we are a good school system but that we will not remain that way for very long without further overrides," Bliss said. "We can be better, but we may need more than just very minor overrides, which is what I consider we just had." Member Christopher Ford agreed that the school committee needed to communicate more effectively with the community.

"I think a lot of people felt that we didn't communicate what was really happening last year as well as we could have," said Ford. "We have to be prepared to communicate not just at override time or at election time, but to make an ongoing effort to communicate and to be available as speakers."

School Committee reappoints staff

The following school administrators were reappointed by the school committee for the 1989-1990 school year: John Creamer, Principal, Joseph Osgood School; Kenneth Ekberg, Principal, Deer Hill School; Mary Ellen Gallagher*, Principal Junior/Senior High School; John DeLorenzo*, Assistant Principal, Junior/Senior High School; John Leary, Director of Guidance, Junior/Senior High School.

around town

□ It is especially nice to know that the business community of Cohasset has not forgotten the elderly citizens. One business in particular is the Super Stop and Shop of Cohasset. Once a week its florist department, managed by Ann Hudson, donated its "day old" flowers to the residents of the Cohasset Knoll Skilled Nursing and Rehabilitation Facility. To some, this may seem unimportant; but to the residents of the Knoll, it is a special day.

The flowers add a great deal of life to the residents' rooms, dining room and nurses' stations. It's amazing how so little can mean so much to those who are unable to get out and about!

There is some exciting news for all of the former swim team members or employees of the Cohasset Swim Center and Abbie White is leading the charge. Abbie is forming an alumnae swim meet at the pool, scheduled for July 29. Anyone that qualifies should call Abbie or drop in at the Swim Center for more details. The telephone number is 383-9463.

□ July 17 was a busy day for St. Anthony's C.Y.O. Kevin Mulcahy, Jonathan Mitchell, and Brendan McCarthy braved the wind and rain to play in the 50th Anniversary C.Y.O. Golf Tournament at Ponkapoag Golf Course in Canton. That evening Bob Magner, Jr., and Lili and Joe Sestito took a group to the C.Y.O. Boston Harbor Cruise for dancing and sightseeing. Many thanks to all those who attended and to those who helped make it all possible.

□ Richard and Babette Strecker are proud parents and the reason is their brand new baby daughter Paige. Paige was born June 28 at Beth Israel Hospital.

□ A salute to Julie O'Rourke who was commissioned as a Navy ensign upon graduation from Villanova University in Villanova, Pa.

□ Also, Marine Captain Richard J. Rafferty recently received a Navy Commendations Medal and reported for duty at Camp Lejuene, North Carolina.

□ Hats off to Christopher Ford, who has been named to the Board of Directors at Pilgrim Cooperative Bank. Mr. Ford is the owner and president of Hallmark 100 Properties, and is also Vice Chairman of the Cohasset School Committee.

□ "Mucka" McNeill was spotted around town last weekend. He is teaching school in Texas, likes his work a lot; Mike as a fifth grade teacher, knowing how much he liked kiddos, is a good thought to hold on to.

□ Congratulations to Jim and Carole Runy from Rick Grassie.

□ Hard work is ahead for the following ladies, and they are sure to love it! The new board members of the Community Garden Club are: Rosie Dole, president; Barbara Christensen, first vice president; Noel Manion, second vice president; Annette Seehen, treasurer; Margaret Smart, secretary, and Mary Harrington, corresponding secretary.

□ A concerned Cohasset resident called last week, talking about the trash situation in our downtown. It has been an eyesore, she said, and wondered if it wouldn't be worthwhile to have a beautification committee to help organize trash pickup and make it look as beautiful as it should be. One comment that she did make was how much nicer it has been looking lately between Cohasset News and the Natural Health Food Store. Everyone should do their part too, pick up your litter and place it in one of the bins that are placed around the downtown. I see them being emptied every morning by the town departments.

□ An urgent appeal for volunteer drivers to take South Shore cancer patients to hospitals for treatment, has been issued by the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society.

This agency operates the volunteer service out of a "hot line" headquarters in the Hersey House, Hingham.

Towns covered by the service include Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Scituate and Weymouth.

For further information call the Hersey House, 749-2535 or the Unit Office, (617) 341-4210.

"These are really missions of mercy," Mrs. Housman states. "Our volunteers find it very rewarding and very much appreciated by patients, most of whom have no other way to get to hospitals for the daily treatments."

□ Happy Birthday to Clark!

□ Moms, if you missed out on tickets for the morning performances of the Thursday "kiddie show," don't despair! They will be having afternoon shows for all of the remaining performances, and they aren't all sold out. The whole audience loves the shows, so don't miss out.

□ Happy birthday to Jamie Roy!

□ There was a reminder last week in the Mariner, and one that is worthy of repeating . . . don't forget to "Shop Cohasset," it is easy, there are grand things around, and you don't have to go miles to get what you want. The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce even has a phone line for the "confused" shopper that doesn't know what to buy for a gift! Call them at 383-1010.

□ Did any Cohasset "Yaz fans" go to his induction into the Hall of Fame? If so, call me, would love to write about it with a Cohasset viewpoint!

That's the news for this week, please call me with your newsy item.

School Committee outlines goals

By Bill Leitch
Mariner corresponedent

The School Committee this week outlined their goals for the next year with an emphasis toward expanding and increasing the efficiency of the Cohasset school system in terms of educational quality, accountability and innovative use of resources.

School Committee Barbara Bliss outlined five objectives for the coming school year. They are:

• To review and revitalize the curriculum. Dr. Thomas Whalen former superintendent in Brockton and Weston hired to conduct a study on the school system, recommended the establishment of a curriculum council and exposing the curriculum to periodic audits by members of the school system, the community, and the educational field.

• To strengthen the professional development of faculty members for recognition, development and evaluation activities. Bliss cited a need to re-examine the evaluation process. She said that a process was needed to provide greater differentiation between faculty members in these times of unfortunate staff reductions." Committee members agreed that the current evaluation mechanism is insufficient.

• To strengthen administrative effectiveness and efficiency. The committee said they would encourage administrators to present their goals and to record periodic progress reports.

• To determine the best use of school facilities. Bliss noted that this would include the development of a five-year capital outlay plan. as well as addressing issues raised by members of the community, such as regionalization and the best use of space.

• To further develop community support. Bliss said that it is vital that the school system strive to encourage the continued support of those townspeople already involved and to generate support from those "who are sort of on the fence."

She added that the committee intends to examine the development of a communications tool, such as a newsletter or periodic forums. She said that the committee would also consider conducting a survey of residents to obtain their input on the school system.

"We need to get the message out that we are a good school system but that we will not remain that way for very long without further overrides," Bliss said. "We can be better, but we may need more than just very minor overrides, which is what I consider we just had." Member Christopher Ford agreed that the school committee needed to communicate more effectively with the community.

"I think a lot of people felt that we didn't communicate what was really happening last year as well as we could have," said Ford. "We have to be prepared to communicate not just at override time or at election time, but to make an ongoing effort to communicate and to be available as speakers."

School Committee reappoints staff

The following school administrators were reappointed by the school committee for the 1989-1990 school year: John Creamer, Principal, Joseph Osgood School; Kenneth Ekberg, Principal, Deer Hill School; Mary Ellen Gallagher*, Principal Junior/Senior High School; John DeLorenzo*, Assistant Principal, Junior/Senior High School; John Leary, Director of Guidance, Junior/Senior High School.

The plain truth

Lately, we have been hearing and reading about the state budget mess which in the last few weeks has resulted in a state income tax hike for all of us and upcoming community cuts in town spending.

And we ask: Is all of this necessary?

State officials and legislators are running around now like a group of chickens, with no heads. Where were they a year ago when Citizens for Limited Taxation and state Rep. John Flood predicted we would be in dire financial shape?

Gov. Mike Dukakis and fellow legislators called them "naysayers," and predictors of doom.

Just how ludicrous the whole situation is is summed up in a news telecast of interviews with Senate Ways and Means Chairman Patricia McGovern and Senate President Billy Bulger.

McGovern said state leaders should meet with Wall Street bond officials in New York to tell them everything in Massachusetts is fine and Massachusett's financial ship is in order.

Bulger is seen smiling through the whole interview saying the tax debate is a good discussion because the people will justify that everything has been done to cut spending before taxes are approved.

First of all, how can Sen. McGovern be so naive to state the Wall Street bond rate setters will be convinced the state's financial house will be in order when no one can agree in the State House how to solve the financial mess.

As one of the top leaders in this state, how could Billy Bulger sit by and allow this financial chaos to occur.

One author wrote a book about England's unpreparedness for World War II entitled, While England Slept. How appropriate this is for Massachusetts legislators, House and Senate leaders and the governor to label this book, "While Massachusetts Slept."

Most everyone stuck their head in the sand last year when Gov. Dukakis ran for president. No one wanted to hear the bad financial news. Blame it on the press, blame it on Barbara Anderson, director of Citizens for Limited Taxation but don't blame it on the governor.

The cities and towns and the state's residents are now paying for the legislative inaction. This should not be forgotten when the next election comes along.

The resulting state budget cuts are obviously done to create the biggest human cry so legislators will be forced to approve a permanent tax hike.

Cut city and town aid so that teachers, police officers, firefighters and public works personnel will be laid off. Close half of the state registry offices, cut human services and services for the elderly.

How convenient a human cry for a permanent state tax hike.

Here are a few suggestions for budget cuts which we feel are relatively painless.

1. Eliminate the Metropolitan District Commission and or consolidate it with other state agencies.

2. Eliminate for this year repairs to the U.S.S. Constitution, any museums planned for western Mass and any other cultural program which could be postponed for better times.

3. Cut all public relations staff to the bare bones. The wrong type of positions are being cut. Why not cut any relative of a legislator who is on a public payroll, especially a highly paid one?

4.Follow Sen. Bill Golden's suggestion to establish a sunset commission which would require a department to justify its existence rather than to continue on ad infinitum.

We don't think the legislature needs the private sector to come in and examine the budget. Common sense and listening to constituents should be sufficient for a legislator to make the right financial decision.

But above all, each legislator should get his or her head out of the political quicksand and start listening to other financial forecasters other than the governor's people. They have been wrong in every financial prediction to date.

The importance of Minot's Ledge

By David Wadsworth
Senior Cohasset Historical Society Curator

Outer Minot's Ledge, some two miles at sea off the Cohasset shore, forms the apex of a large triangular area of small islands and submerged ledges called by seafarers the "Cohasset Rocks."

During the great Age of Sail of the 18th and 19th centuries the Cohasset Rocks were a formidable obstacle and treacherous hazard to sailing vessels of all sizes from the smallest to the largest, and posed a constant danger to vessels entering the approaches to Boston Harbor.

During that time dozens of shipwrecks occurred along the coast and many voyagers lost their lives within sight of Cohasset's shores.

In the decade of the 1840's, in an effort to reduce the number of shipwrecks at the Cohasset Rocks, and to save lives of ocean travellers, the U.S. Lighthouse Establishment decided to build an ocean lighthouse at Outer Minot's Ledge.

The first Minot's Ledge Lighthouse was completed in late 1849 and first showed its beacon in early 1850.

Just 15 months later the storm-battered lighthouse at Outer Minot's fell into the sea, carrying with it its two Keepers, Joseph Antoine and Joseph Wilson of Cohasset.

The first Minot's Light fell on the night of April 16-17, 1851 in a violent northeast storm historians now identify as the "Lighthouse Gale."

Almost immediately it was decided that a second, and stronger, lighthouse structure should be built at the same location. The second Minot's Ledge Light was to be of granite, with interlocking stone blocks of sufficient strength to withstand the onslaught of the stormy sea. Work began on the new light in 1855 and it was completed in 1860.

The beacon at Outer Minot's Ledge showed for the first time in September of that year. During the time between the fall of the first light and completion of the second nearly a decade later, the Cohasset rocks were to be marked by a government lightship or "light vessel" moored near the ledge at Outer Minot's.

The first light vessel at the site was an interim boat, to serve until the arrival of a government lightship.

Scarcely 24 hours after the ill-fated lighthouse collapsed, the Boston tugboat "R.B. Forbes" took up its station near the ledge.

"R.B. Forbes" remained at Minot's from April 18 until May 22, 1851, showing a beacon from its mast.

April 22 an official government vessel arrived to take up permanent station at the ledge. It was a veteran light vessel, called "Light Boat N" in official records, but unofficially called "Old Brandywine."

The wooden-hulled ship of some 72 feet length had been built in 1823 at New York, and had served for 27 years at sea on the Brandywine Shoals station in Delaware Bay.

"Old Brandywine" had been fitted with two powerful oil lanterns, one 42 feet and the other 45 feet above water, while serving at Brandywine Shoal, but for its duty at Outer Minots it carried one powerful lantern 25 feet above the ocean. It also carried a large hand-operated fog bell of 450 pounds.

Light Boat N, "Old Brandywine" was to serve at Outer Minot's Ledge from 1851 to 1854, and Coast Guard records show that its Master, or "Keeper" during that time was Capt. Joseph Battles of Cohasset, who married in 1854 Hepsibah, daughter of Cohasset Deep Sea Captain John Wilson.

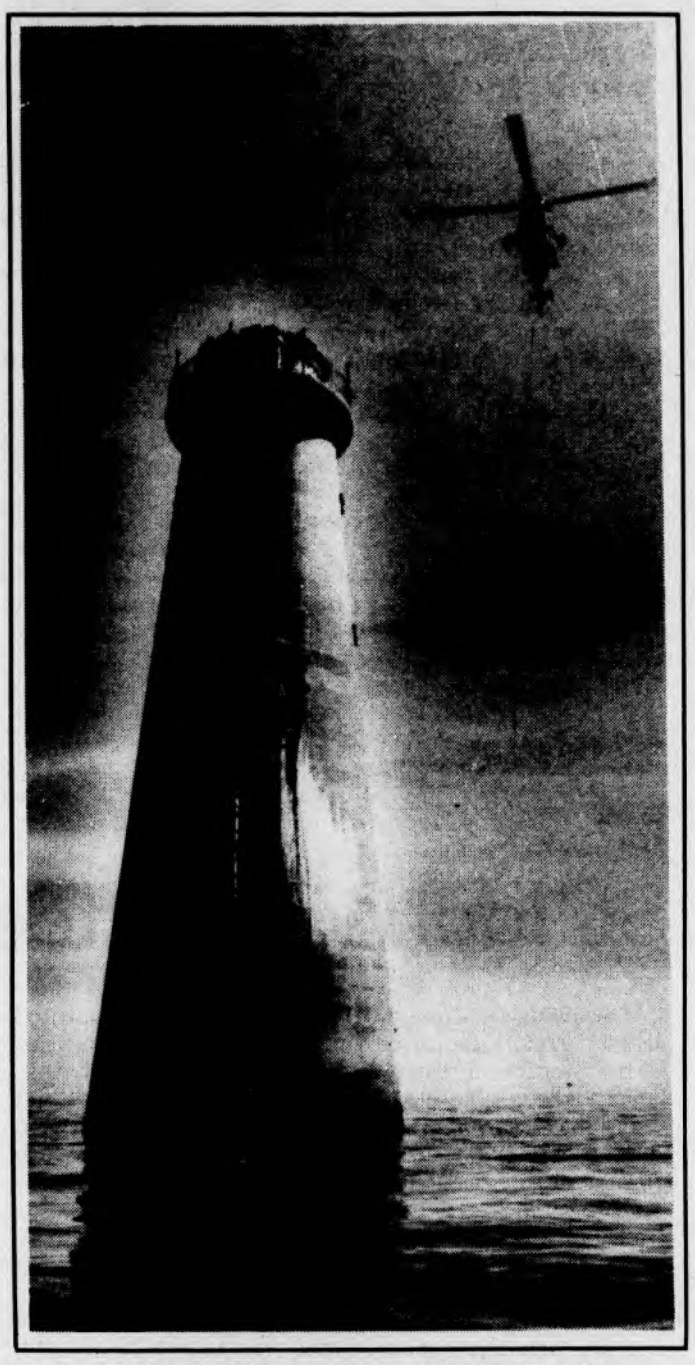
During 1854, a new, larger and more seaworthy light vessel was constructed to replace the aging veteran "Old Brandywine." Designated only as vessel "LV7" the new lightship was built by shipwright J.M. Hood of Somerset.

Destined for the storm-wracked station at Outer Minot's, LV7 was made of live oak and hard pine, with copper and iron fastenings. Schooner-rigged, it measured 98' 5" in length and weighed 142 tons. The new Minot's Ledge Light Vessel carried two oil lanterns each having a polished reflector of 12" diameter. The beacons were 41 1/2 feet above the water.

Atop its twin masts, LV7 also mounted two prominent "day marks" of large size, and on its deck there was a hand-operated fog bell of 500 pounds. Initially the vessel's hull was painted a cream color, with large black letters spelling the name of its station.

"Minot's Ledge." Light Vessel LV7 was to serve at stormy Outer Minot's station from Nov. 3, 1854 to Nov. 15, 1860 following completion of the nearby lighthouse on the ledge. With the lighting of the 90 foot high lighthouse lantern the interim lightship station near the ledge was discontinued.

Of the two light vessels serving at Minot's Ledge, the first, "Old Brandywine," went to Cape Cod's Cross Rip Lightship Station in 1855, then to Five Fathom Bank off the New Jersey shore until being honorably retired from service in 1859. LV7 moved from Outer Minot's to Vinyard Sound where it remained for the next 15 years. Eventually the sturdy vessel was taken out of service in 1909, closing a long career at sea.



The exact location of the Minot's Ledge Lightship Station is given as having been at 42 degrees 17.0 North Latitude, 70 degrees 45.6 West Longitude, or about eight tenths of a mile almost due north and to seaward of the ledge itself.

After the removal of the second Minot's Ledge Light Vessel 34 years would pass before another lightship appeared off Cohasset's shores.

In 1894 the bright red hull of the new Boston Light Vessel could be seen for the first time, to the north of the old station at Minot's and further away, but clearly visible to watchers ashore as well as to mariners at sea.

Light vessels were to serve on the Boston station for the next 80 years before the last was replaced by a modern automated buoy.

Today there are no light vessels remaining in service in the coastal waters of the United States, for the removal of the last Nantucket lightship a few years ago ended the long era of the "light boats" almost two centuries after its beginnings.

The historic and newly renovated Minot's Light will be re-dedicated by the U.S. Coast Guard and the Cohasset Historical Society in an August ceremony.

Relighting the Lighthouse

The United States Coast Guard District Office in Boston has confirmed a date for relighting of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse.

Following its two year restoration project, the lighthouse will be lit Sunday, Aug. 20.

During the summer of 1987 the entire upper section of the famous offshore lighthouse was removed prior to reconstruction of the structure's topmost granite-walled room, the "Watch Room".

Last year saw new granite blocks, near-duplicates of the original stone, assembled atop the 90 foot high tower.

This summer marks the completion of the restoration project, with final finishwork completed to interior and exterior of the lighthouse.

Original copper and bronze parts of the light's dome, railings, lifeboat davits, globe and spire have been refitted as they originally were, and the appearance of the lighthouse has resumed its familiar and unique form.

Originally constructed in 1855 to 1860, the granite tower, some 114 feet in height to the top of its spire, had withstood fierce Atlantic ocean gales and storm-tossed seas for more than a century and a quarter before requiring its first large scale renovation.

Minot's top now has been reassembled, and the reconstruction project, the first major repair made since the 1860's, has approached completion. The lantern, when relighted, will show the familiar characteristic signal pattern 1 - 4 - 3.

The Coast Guard in cooperation with Cohasset's historical organizations, hopes to mark the relighting of the lantern with appropriate ceremony at Government Island, site of the former Shore Station Facility for the lighthouse, Sunday, Aug. 20. Further details about the planned event will be announced soon.

Foreign Exchange students share cultural experiences

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

A Japanese teenager said that Americans are as friendly and kind as she thought they would be.

A young man from France commented that there are more rules and regulations for teenagers in his country.

Those were some of the reflections shared by about 20 exchange students from those two countries during a get-together Monday afternoon in Cohasset.

They are the guests of host families in the area.

The students, all of whom speak some English, got to know each other as they sat under the shade of a tree across from Second Congregational Church.

They chatted about differences and similarities in their countries, such as the role of women, as well as their impressions of the United States.

Patty Epstein of Cohasset is coordinating the visit of the 14 Japanese students, 18 to 22 years old.

Lee Jenkins, also a Cohasset resident, is in charge of placements for the 14 French students, 13 to 17 years old.

"If anyone in town is interested in taking the students on a field trip, or in sharing an interest, they are always welcome," noted Jenkins.

The Japanese students, who arrived July 16, will stay for four weeks.

The French students came here July 20, and will stay for three weeks.

Activities will include such things as visits to local historic and cultural sites, as well as parties and sports events.

These French students are visiting Cohasset through a summer cultural exchange program.

Photos by J.Paul MacDonald

The Cultural Exchange Institute (CHI), a non-profit educational exchange program, has brought Japanese exchange students to the South Shore for the past nine years.

The French students are visiting through a summer cultural exchange program with Cohasset's sister city, Souppes sur Loing.

Visiting from France are: Marine Parmelan, Jean Clair Ballot, Florian Prevost, Julie Pepin, Fanny Drouet, Leslie Drouet, Jean Guillaume Mathiaut, Anne-Sophie Barbier, Carole Pietri, Germain Drouet, all from Souppes sur Loing; Gaelle Longchambon, Avon; Bruce Vandellos, Yerres; Cecille Prudhomme, Aillant S/Tholon; and Nadeqe Dine, Paris.

These 14 Japanese students will stay on the South Shore for four weeks, thanks to the Cultural Exchange Institute.

Chamber of Commerce news: Future of the schools

By Paul Knowles
Publicity chairman

June 28, Cohasset voters joined thousands of Massachusetts townspeople in grappling with the issue of a Proposition 2 1/2 override vote.

And, like the vast majority of Towns, Cohasset said "enough is enough." For whatever individual reasons, the people in our Commonwealth are sending a solid message to their towns, cities, and state governments. "You can't get blood out of a stone," as the old adage says. People can no longer afford huge property tax increases to pay for skyrocketing school and municipal budgets.

Housing costs are too high; rents and mortgages are consuming ever increasing portions of individual and business budgets.

Food, clothing, necessities are pinching everyone's pocketbooks. Changes, drastic changes, in municipal thinking and planning are needed; and they are needed now. The voters have spoken.

To that end, the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will host a panel discussion Sept. 13 at Hugo's Restaurant on Cohasset Harbor, to discuss our schools and where they are heading.

Our school budget consumes a tremendous amount of our yearly tax revenue, and needs more every year. In a year when Hull schools are funding many athletic programs with private funding, when Avon and Holbrook school systems are seriously discussing combining their schools, and Cohasset is facing teacher layoffs and program cuts, we feel that it is time for the taxpayers to take the initiative and have their say in school planning.

So we are asking for your help.

School Supt. Steve Hart and School Committee members Barbara Bliss and Chris Ford have graciously agreed to meet with us and all Cohasset Townspeople to answer your questions and share with us their views.

Our topic will be "Cohasset Schools — the next five years," and we are asking for your input. All questions will be submitted to the panel in advance, in order that they may have all of the facts, figures, and information at their finger tips on the night of Sept. 13.

Therefore, we will need all of your questions in to us by Aug. 25. Please give this some thought. If, like many of us, you have had thoughts or questions about our schools and/or school budget, that haven't been answered to your satisfaction during town meeting; if you have an idea that you believe should be considered; if you have a concern that hasn't been addressed adequately — write it down.

No names are necessary, as all questions will be posed anonymously to the panel.

Your questions can be dropped off at Cards and Shards, Goodale Insurance Agency, or Kimball's Motor Inn, or mailed to "Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, P.O. Box 336, Cohasset, MA 02025." Just mark the envelope "Schools."

Please don't wait for someone else to ask the questions that concern you. We all know that never works. We are talking about your schools, your tax money, and your town's input; and please join us Sept. 13, 6:30 p.m., at Hugo's Restaurant, to hear the answers. And, of course, admission is free.

Heritage Days bluefish tourney

On Sunday, Aug. 6 (rain date Aug. 13), a Bluefish Tournament will be held — fish may be caught from the shore or boats. Participants must register prior to Aug. 6.

Places of registration are: harbormaster's office, information booth (Cole Parkway), James Landing Marina, Scituate Harbor (O'Neil's) Marina, Trask Tackle Company, Welch Company Marina, and Young's Boat Yard.

Fees are $7 for over 16 years of age, and $5 for 16 and under. Prizes will be awarded in each age group as follows: $75 for the largest fish and $30 for the second largest. The fish weigh-in will be held between 4 and 6 p.m. on Aug. 6, at the Morrill Memorial Bandstand, Cole Parkway, Scituate Harbor.

For further information call Gordon Price, 545-0792, 7141.

'Nice Race' spirit common in Hingham Bay Jr. Regatta

By Margie Kelley
Mariner staff

"We had two boats finishing one of today's races on the line, neck and neck. They were very close. When one finally overtook the other, the skipper of the beaten boat said to the winners, "nice race." That spirit is why this regatta means alot to me."

Those were the words of Brian McPherson, co-chairman of the ninth annual Hingham Bay Junior Regatta, held last week at the Hingham Yacht Club.

Approximately 228 teenagers from yacht and sailing clubs along the North and South shores gathered at the yacht club for two days of friendly competition in the sailing event, which has been gaining in popularity over the last few years.

Despite the overcast skies, McPherson, said this year's event drew the most competitors in its nine year history, with sailors from Winchester, Medford, Winthrop, Squantum, Plymouth, and Weymouth.

Hingham, Hull, and Cohasset yacht clubs, and the Lincoln Sailing Club were also well represented.

"This is the biggest gathering of turnabouts anywhere," said Hugh Divine, another program coordinator.

Divine said the purpose of the event is to bring kids together and have fun while hopefully improving skills.

"It's kids meeting kids from all around," he said. "It's the attitude about the whole thing. The kids have a ball."

"It's my favorite two days of the summer," Divine continued. "The kids are competitive, and they're friendly, and they have a good time."

The two-day regatta featured five series of races, as well as a cookout and a dance. An awards ceremony was held Friday afternoon, after the fifth and final race series was completed.

Four boat classes, consisting of N-10 Turnabouts, Lasers, Duplins, and 420's were featured in the junior competition, which was open to any sailor between the ages of 10 and 16 years old.

A first, second, and third prize was awarded for each of the four boat classes, and two special awards were given to the sailors with overall racing excellence.

Fourteen year-old Samantha Drohan, of the Hingham Yacht Club, won the highest honor of the Regatta, when she was awarded the Thomas E. Curtis Jr. Trophy.

The trophy, which was presented to Drohan by Thomas Curtis Sr., is awarded to the skipper who demonstrates racing excellence as well as a good attitude and composure during the two-day event.

The Curtis trophy is considered the highest award of the regatta, and is given in memory of

Norman Swain victorious in 'grudge match'

Norman Swain Painting defeated the Red Lion Inn 7-6 in a celebrated grudge match between two Cohasset team entries in the Scituate-Cohasset Men's League softball action recently.

The game featured last minute heroics by "Vinnie" from Weymouth who lofted a sacrifice fly for the winning run in Norman Swain's victory.

David "Lefty" Patrolia pitched seven strong innings to pick up the win.

According to Norman Swain's Rick Barrow, it probably was the most enjoyable softball game to date. "It was a close game right from the very beginning." About 30 people packed the Central School field in Scituate to watch the game.

The game meant a lot to both teams' players. Four players jumped from the Norman Swain team to the Red Lion Inn squad at the beginning of the season.

Norman Swain's hitting star was Peter McGee who had two hits. Each team member also had a hit during the contest.

For the Red Lion Inn, shortstop Billy Kurtz played exceptionally well, saving many a hit from going into the outfield.

In regular season play, Norman Swain is 8-4 and in fourth place in league play (Division II). The Red Lion Inn is in sixth place in Division I. Both teams will not play each other again until the playoffs.

Little League post-season play continues in the heat

Cohasset Little League Summer Program is continuing during July.

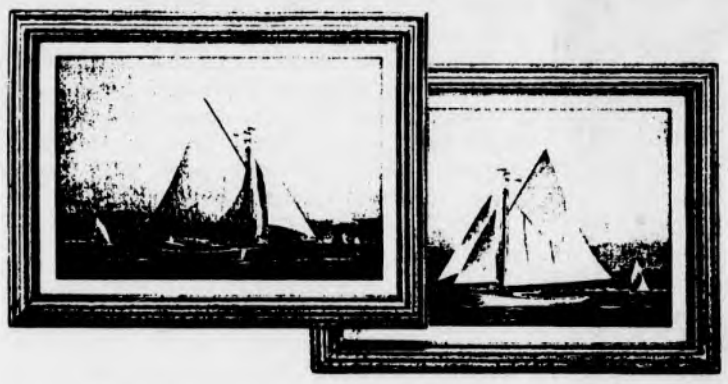
The 10 year olds and under have a record of 6 wins and 5 losses in the North River Tournament.

In two games with Duxbury, Cohasset won both 15-8 and 13-4. Joey Magner and Taylor Devin pitched the first game and Sean Norris and Kevin Duffy shared the duties of catcher.

Batting in runs for Cohasset were pitcher Joey Magner, second baseman Justin Buckley, center fielder Burke Davis, first baseman Greg Bilton and designated hitter Paul Michael Quinton.

In the second game with Duxbury, Matt Lewis was the winning pitcher and Doug Cameron did a great job catching. Hitting well for Cohasset were first baseman Greg Bilton, third baseman Joey Magner and center fielder Sean Norris.

Cohasset suffered disappointing losses to Hanson 23-4, Carver 20-3, East Bridgewater 18-0, Plymouth 16-2 and Scituate 15-6.



But in a second match with Scituate, Cohasset emerged as winner, with a 9-4 win.

Winning pitcher was Joey Magner and catcher Doug Cameron did a terrific job behind the plate.

Knocking in runs for Cohasset were first baseman Greg Bilton, shortstop Robby Buckley, pitcher Joey Magner and designated hitter Paul-Michael Quinton.

In a game with South Plymouth, Cohasset managed to score 2 runs in the last inning to win 4-3. This time Robby Buckley was the winning pitcher and Sean Norris did the catching duties.

The team is enjoying their summer season of play. As the tournament progresses, much improvement in their abilities can be seen.

Sailing spirit found at Jr. Regatta

Thomas E. Curtis Jr., a famous yachtsman from Hingham who died 10 years ago in a sailing accident off the coast of Florida.

"The objective of the junior regatta is fairly simple," Devine said during the awards ceremony. "To get the kids together and to have a good time."

"Tom Curtis was a famous sailor from Crow Point who stood for a time when junior sailing was at it's peak," he said. "So when we put the regatta together we said,'let's have a trophy named for Tom Curtis', who stood for everything good about sailing."

Drohan, who along with Heather Gautreau as crew won the Blue Turnabout fleet championship, said she has been sailing since she was six years old.

The Rockland Trust Company Trophy, named for the regatta's main sponsor, was awarded to Brian Keefe of the Winchester Boat Club, for his excellent performance in the Duplin class.

In the Laser competition, Meaghan McNulty of Hull Yacht Club took the first place trophy, and Peter Goulding and Alex Bradley took first prize in the 420 series.

The final standings were as follows:

Duplins: First place, Brian Keefe and Paul McGann, of Winchester; Second place, John Mullane and Chris Beattie, of Winthrop; Third place, Margo Spinnale and Elise True, of Hull.

Turnabouts: Blue class; First place, Samantha Drohan and Heather Gautreau, of Hingham; Second place, Keith Garland and Andy Collins, of Hingham; Third place, Amy Forker and Jessica Jancaitis, of Hingham. White class; First place,Mark Chaffee and Liz Hurley, of Hingham; Second place, Susan Flaherty and Trish Wilk, of Squantum; Third place, Andrew Colantonio and Adam Cole, of Hingham. Red class: First place, Tyler Sargent and Brian Gautreau, of Hingham; Second place, Jay DeWaltoff and Hilary Colantonio, of Hingham; Third place, Lee Sargent and Tripp Underwood, of Hingham.

420's: First place, Peter Goulding and Alex Bradley; Second place,(tied) Julie O'Hara and Peter Leary, and Jake Gaul and John Sargent.

Lasers: First place, Meaghan McNulty; Second place, John Murphy; and Third place, Kerry Murphy.

Swim team defeats Duxbury in winning style

The Cohasset Swim Team defeated the Duxbury Yacht Club team by over three hundred points July 21 at Duxbury.

Those swimmers winning blue ribbons for first place finishes were:

Ted Reardon (four), Lauren deVito (four), Jonathan deLima (four), Melissa Rousseau (three), Tom Greco (three), Greg Bilton (two), Katy Devine (three), Justin Buckley, Kerry Hart (two), Nick Welz (two), Becky Golden (four), Danny Baird, Robin deVito (three), Brooke Anderson (four), Topher Henderson (three), Derek Bugley (three), Megan Connelly (two), Doug Cameron, Heather Littlehale (four), David Leahy (three), Megan Staunton, Billy Baird, and J.L. Williams.

Others were Greg Schultz (two), John Kissell (two), Jamie Kondrat, Justin Golden, Tina Rousseau, Hillary Strong (two), John Brister, Tracey Reardon (two), Maria Kierce, Amy Theriault, Tom Forbes-Kittle, Caroline deLima, Bobby Meehan, Meredith Equi and Maureen Long.

In diving, Jonathan deLima was first among 16 and under, and Colby Lawrence was second.

For 12 and under diving, Sarah Daley of D.H.Y.C. was first, and Dawn Meehan of Cohasset was second.

The meet had one casualty, a broken arm for Emily Henderson, a ten and under swimmer.

The caring response from the members of the swim team and their coaches, Kate and Beth, the cards, balloons, flowers and the on-the-scene care of Doctor Golden helped to make a nasty accident much easier to handle.

'Alice in Wonderland' comes to life on Pleasant Street

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

"Hey, kids, let's put on a show," was an often-heard line in old Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland movies.

But that line came to life on Pleasant St. in Cohasset Saturday afternoon, July 22.

Sixteen children, 2 1/2 to 13 years old, presented "Alice in Wonderland" to an audience of parents, grandparents and friends.

And though they all received much applause, most of the credit goes to Beth Deveney, 13, of 95 Pleasant St.

"Beth got involved in theatre last year in a production of 'Annie'," said her neighbor, Jane Corry. "I think she got the itch to do something on her own."

She asked the children in the neighborhood if they would like to be in "Alice in Wonderland", according to Corry. She called the group the Pleasant St. Production Co.

"She did everything herself," said Corry. "She played the Mad Hatter and directed the production."

Beth's 10-year-old sister, Grace, played Alice, and her 15-year-old sister, Sara, helped with the art work, props and costumes, she said.

Corry's daughter, Meghan, was the Queen of Hearts.

Other parts were played by Ashley Koed, White Rabbit; Tom Kittle, Caterpillar; Kelly Tufts, Duchess; John-Paul Laugelle, Cheshire Cat; Jenny Tremblay, March Hare; Jack Jerz, Dormouse; Tom Robertson (visiting from England) King of Hearts; Clifford Tremblay, Knave of Hearts; Suzanne Lester (visiting from New York), Mock Turtle; and Terry Lester (from New York), Mariel Koed and Andrew Jerz, Cards.

Elizabeth Corcoran provided the offstage voice of Alice's mother.

"They were wonderful," continued Corry. "They prepared in about three weeks. They would have two- hour practices every afternoon.

"The kids were all very faithful about going to practice. A lot of them really looked forward to it. Meghan couldn't wait for 3 o'clock so she could go up there."

The play was presented in the Deveney's garage.

"It was wonderful," said Corry, "absolutely wonderful. They did an excellent job."

Neighbors came out to enjoy Beth Deveney's youth production of "Alice in Wonderland", held in Deveney's backyard on Saturday.

No one forgot their lines, she said, and everything went smoothly during the 40-minute production.

"Except for a few children in the audience who wanted to participate," she said.

The scenary, made of sheets, was changed for every scene. And the children wore costumes made by the mothers.

"All of the neighbors helped each other out," said Corry. "Everybody seemed to chip in and work together."

A two-page program listed all the actors and scenes, and thanked everyone for their help.

It also noted that the $1 admission fee would go to the Pine St. Inn.

"The kids absolutely had a ball," she said. "Beth deserves an awful lot of credit.

"You hear so many negative things about teenagers. This is something well-meaning and positive.

"She shared with them an experience she had had, and brought theatre to these kiddos. It was absolutely wonderful," said Corry.

"Beth is planning to do one production a summer. So they can't wait for next summer.

China Camp focuses on cultural heritage

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Some youngsters go to day camp. Others go to sports camp. But some South Shore children are enjoying still another kind of camp - China Camp.

Offered jointly through the South Shore Art Center and Cohasset Community Center, the summer arts camp focuses on the cultural heritage of China through the arts.

It is open to children, 6 to 12 years old. The first two-week session runs 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. through this week.

The second session will be held the beginning of August. Registration is still being taken.

"It's a cute program, and the kids are finding it a lot of fun," said Judy Volungis, community center director.

"There are also a lot of friendships forming ,too," she said.

Twenty-one youngsters from eight South Shore towns, including Cohasset, signed up for the first session, according to Volungis.

"We're pleased with the response," she said. "It's a nice sized group to work with."

Visual arts include workshops on making Chinese dragons, silk painting, kite making, calligraphy, clay pottery and masks.

Special demonstrations, workshops and video presentations by visiting artists are included.

There are also classes in dance and creative movement, set design and costumes.

Time is available for bowling, lunch and supervised outdoor activities each day.

Last week, girls in the program decorated fans with ribbons and glitter for a dragon dance, while boys made swords out of painted cardboard. They also worked on a paper mache` dragon.

"They have been learning a ribbon dance, dragon dance and fan dance," said Volungis. "They are all traditional Chinese dances. They'll be presented in a show, open to parents and the public, Friday at 11:30 a.m."

One of the teachers, Shelly Cotta, new owner and director of the Duxbury Dance Shoppe, said that a lot of research went into activities for the program.

"There were a good couple of months of research," said Cotta. "Then we had to adapt things when we started. With all different ages, you have to adapt things as you go along.

"I love working with kids," she continued. "This is a little different for me. It's definitely a challenge to keep them all interested."

Cotta said the children like to work with their hands.

"As long as they are moving and doing things, they are fine," she said.

"It's a long day for them and they do so much. But I think they are having a good time.

"And it's been fun for me, too."

August at the Music Circus

South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset will begin August with single-evening concerts by Engelbert Humperdinck, Reba McEntire and Smokey Robinson.

Engelbert Humperdinck, performing at the Music Circus Tuesday, Aug. 1, is known as the "King of Romance" to his many fans. Presenting such hits as "A Man Without Love," "This Moment in Time" and "The Last Waltz," Humperdinck says he favors romantic songs "because they inspire a more intimate response with the audience." Humperdinck will present one show at 8 p.m.

Reba McEntire, a country music popular vocalist will appear at the Music Circus at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 2.

Singer/songwriter Smokey Robinson, recently inducted into the prestigious Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame, will appear at the Music Circus at 8 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 3.

The first week of August will be completed at the Music Circus by Sergio Franchi and Pat Cooper Friday, Aug. 4, and Kenny Rogers Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 5-6.

For further information, or to order tickets by phone, patrons may call the Music Circus at 617-383-1400.

Conservatory public concert

A series of public concerts will mark the end of the 17th season of the South Shore Conservatory's music day camp, the Summer Wind Ensemble.

The program has developed the talents of junior and senior high school woodwind, brass, and percussion players.

The program is directed by Malcolm W. Rowell, Associate Professor and Conductor of Wind and Symphony Bands at U. Mass., Amherst. He conducts the Advanced Ensemble and Sally Tucker, area music educator, conducts the Intermediate Ensemble. The Jazz program is headed by Steve Massey, one of the state's leading jazz educators.

This year there are 90 students from 20 south of Boston communities who have come to the Hingham branch of the Conservatory to improve their playing skills.

Five days a week from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. they immerse themselves in music. The advanced students come for five weeks and the intermediate for three.

The culmination of the program is the final series of concerts, which consistently bring praise for their high level of performance. The programs are free and the public is welcome to the following concerts:

Tuesday, July 25 at 7:30 p.m. — Advanced Jazz Ensemble at the Scituate Library.

Thursday, July 27 at 7:30 p.m. — Advanced Jazz Ensemble and Intermediate Ensemble at Eastern Nazarene College in Wollaston.

Tuesday, Aug. 1 at 7:30 p.m. — Chamber Music Concert at The Cushing Center in Norwell.

Wednesday, Aug. 2 at 7 p.m. — Advanced Wind Ensemble at Cranberry World in Plymouth.

Friday, Aug. 4 at 10:30 a.m. — Final concert of Advanced Intermediate Ensembles at the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset.

Dorey races, Aug. 5

Dorey races will be held on Saturday, Aug. 5, starting at 2 p.m. The course will be approximately two miles, starting at the Cole Parkway Ramp, to the Coast Guard Station and back. Registration must be made in advance at the Harbormaster's office (no charge). Rowers may be of any age, and there may be any number of rowers —various categories will be established from the registration information.

For further details call Joe Lebherz, 545-6842.

"Minots light revisited II"

Sunday, August 6, is National Lighthouse Day, and the Cohasset Historical Society will feature one of the world's most famous, with an educational and fund-raising program centering on Minot's Light, the "I love you" beacon off our shore.

The program will be highlighted by hourly minicruises around the Light, with talks, displays, and a viewing of the reconstruction in progress of the watch room on Government Island in Cohasset Harbor.

This is a repeat of the popular Revisit presented last year when Minot's Light was "topless." Now the top has been restored so that passengers this year will have the opportunity to see and photograph the Light as it was for almost 130 years and will be for the future.

Tides limit the cruising period to the hours between 1 and 5 p.m., with four hourly cruises at 1, 2, 3 and 4 p.m. from Government Island.

Parking will be provided at St. Anthony's parking lot off South Main Street, with buses leaving 15 minutes before each hourly trip beginning at 12:45 p.m.

At the Lothrop House and at the construction rings on Government Island there will be detailed information about the original building of the Light and the reconstruction work of the past two years.

On the boat trip there will be a running commentary on the Light, its history, famous shipwrecks and a description of shoreline landmarks.

Refreshments will be served at the Lothrop House, 14 Summer St. next to the church parking lot.

Because of the tidal situation the group is limited to a total of 150 persons on the four boat trips. Be sure to reserve your tickets early. To the extent possible, preference for trip time will be honored and you will be notified of any need to change.

Heritage Days photo contest

The Annual Heritage Days amateur photography contest deadline for entries is Friday, July 28. Entries must be submitted to Rudolph Mitchell, 93 Maple Street, Scituate.

Judging will be Sunday, July 30, at the Little Red Schoolhouse. The judges are: Bill Brett, Globe photographer and executive photo editor John Goldie, commercial photographer, public relations and editorial work, Dan Sheehan, retired Globe photographer.

There will be a public judging at the Harbor Methodist Church Friday evening, Aug. 4, and Saturday, Aug. 5. Plaques and ribbons will be awarded Sunday, Aug. 6, at the Harbor Methodist Church, from noon to 3 p.m.

The two winning prints (juried judging and public judging winners) will be hung for one week at the Scituate Federal Savings and Loan Association, Front St.

For further information call Rudolph Mitchell, contest organizer, 545-2137.

It's happening

Oceanside Bike Fest

The First Annual Oceanside Bike Fest, sponsored by the Multiple Sclerosis Society, WLNE6 TV, and WATD Radio will be held Sunday, Sept. 24.

Cyclists of all ages and skill are invited to join the Century Bike Tour to raise funds for multiple sclerosis.

The Tour will take cyclists through area communities.

Beginning at Duxbury Intermediate School, riders will enjoy the rocky shores of Scituate and Cohasset, as well as the scenic country roads through area forests and parks.

Whether you are an avid or recreational cyclist, a route will be designed especially for you — 25, 50, or 100 miles.

Checkpoints will be set-up every 12-15 miles to supply the cyclists with energy as they "ride the distance" for MS.

Along the route will be donations from Papa Gino's, Pepsi-Cola, Tropical Banana and Quaker Oats. Also Village Cycles Bike Shop of Buzzards Bay will be on route for bike repair.

Every participating cyclist will receive a commemorative Oceanside Bike Fest '89 t-shirt and be eligible for exciting awards, including the grand prize: a five-day vacation for two with Vermont Bicycle Touring.

To participate in Oceanside Bike Fest '89 there is a $15 registration fee. In addition, cyclists are asked to raise a minimum of $35 in sponsored pledges.

Funds raised will provide vital support services to the 6,000 Massachusetts families struggling with MS and also help national researchers in the quest for the cause and cure.

To register, or for more information, call the Multiple Sclerosis Society at (508) 291-2169. If you are unable to ride, but would like to volunteer your services for the day, the MS chapter would appreciate your assistance.

K of C Carnvial

The Knights of Columbus Carnival is here. Cole Parkway, Scituate Harbor will be alive with games, fun and excitement from 7 p.m. to midnight Thursday, July 27 - Saturday, July 29.

Fireworks will be held at about 11 p.m. Friday, July 28.

The midway will feature amusements for all ages, including prize booths, refreshments and new rides.

The grand drawing for the major prize this year is scheduled for Saturday night at 11 p.m., when $15,000 in cash prizes will be given away, with a first prize of $10,000. Tickets for the major prize may be purchased at the booth at the entrance to the midway.

Heritage Day crafters

Attention Crafters! There are still a few spaces left for crafters at the Scituate Chamber of Commerce Heritage Days Celebration "street crafters fair" on Front Street, Scituate Harbor, Saturday, August 5, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

To reserve a space, at $40, call 545-4000.

At the South Shore Science Center

Ward off the dog days of August with a refreshing walk in the woods at the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell.

MONARCH BUTTERFLIES

Join butterfly expert Anne Torey for a walk and talk about the exotic, delicate Monarch butterfly, Saturday, August 5, 10 a.m. to noon. For children 7 years and up. Members/$6. Non-members/$9. Through slides, we'll take a close look at the life of a butterfly, including its incredible migration from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico. We will also examine an actual Monarch larva and chrysalis. Then, we'll go outside to observe these fanciful flyers in the wild. Please call the Science Center 659-2559 for registration information.

WALK THE GURNET

Join Science Center naturalists for a day at the Gurnet, a glacial moraine at the south end of Duxbury Beach, Monday, August 7, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Members/$15. Non-members/$20. Inaccessible to regular vehicles, the Gurnet is filled with diverse plant life and is surrounded by beaches and marshes. Its beauty is unparalleled. Bring a picnic lunch, and spend a day touring this jewel of natural history. Let us know at registration if you have an available 4-wheel drive vehicle. Call the Science Center 659-2559 for registration information.

JUDGE'S HILL, NORWELL

Science Center naturalists will lead a leisurely walk through Judge's Hill, Norwell, Wednesday, August 9, 10 a.m. to noon. Members/free. Non-members/$4. The highest point in Norwell, Judge's Hill hosts a boreal-type forest with hemlocks. Expect to see nesting warblers and thrushes as well as other current happenings. These informal walks are perfect for the whole family. Meet at the Science Center 659-2559 and register at the Main Desk.

PERSEID METEOR SHOWER

Rolf Egon, member of the South Shore Astronomical Society, will present a program on the Perseid meteor showers, a spectacular annual event, Friday, August 11, 8 to 10 p.m. There will also be a special viewing, Saturday, August 12, 4 a.m., when the shower is at its height. Members/$4. Non-members/$6. The whole family will enjoy the in-depth slide show focusing on the showers and double stars. Then, we will go outside for viewing through the observatory telescope. Call the Science Center 659-2559 for registration information.

ALLAGASH WILDERNESS WATERWAY

Science Center Education Director Ted Elliman and Professional Canoe Guide Russ Sears will lead a very special canoe and camping trip for teens ages 13 to 18 along the Allagash Waterway in Maine, Saturday, August 19, 7 a.m. through Sunday, August 27, 7 p.m. Members /$800. Non-members/$850. This 92-mile, nine-day adventure along a ribbon of streams, lakes, and ponds will provide the exhilaration of adventure, challenge and a first hand experience of the forests and wildlife of the northern woods. Swimming ability and some previous canoeing experience is required. Food, transportation, and major items of group equipment are provided. Registration deadline is August 11. Call the Science Center 659-2559 for more information about this once-in-a-lifetime adventure!

NATURE DAY CAMP

There are limited spaces available for the Science Center Nature Day Camp's one-week session beginning August 14. The four-year-old Chipmunk program, Morning Discoverer program for children entering grades 2 through 6, and All-Day Discoverer program for children entering grades 3 through 6 have some openings. Meeting days and tuition vary, so please call Bobbi Sullivan at the Science Center 659-2559 for more information.

The South Shore Natural Science Center is on Jacobs Lane, Norwell, just off Route 123 and less than a mile from the Route 3 interchange. Hours: 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday; closed Sundays in July and August. Call 659-2559 or drop by the Center for a complete list of summer activities.

Coast Guard cutters on display

Friday, Aug. 4, at 3 p.m., the Coast Guard Cutter "Cape Henlopen" (WPB 95328), a 95' patrol boat, Commanding Officer Lt. Steve Sawhill, will dock at the Scituate town pier with public tours scheduled.

Saturday, Aug. 5, the Scituate Coast Guard Station on First Cliff will be open to visitors at 10 a.m. Also, starting at 10 a.m., two Coast Guard boats will be displayed at the town marina until 5 p.m.

Also, on Saturday, there will be an exhibition of Coast Guard Rescue equipment at Saint Mary's Field which will include antique equipment. A breeches buoy will be set up and demonstrated with the public invited to participate!

Council on Aging director

With summer heat and prolonged periods of very hot weather — (HEATWAVES) we must begin to understand the physical battle that the body will struggle against.

Heat stress places a physical burden on the heart and blood vessels which is the most important part of the body's cooling system.

A hot environment can add a lot of heat to the body and working outside in the hot sun can add to the burden as well.

We must begin to understand that heat stress can result in a number of medical problems including heatstroke, heart failure and stroke.

It can also aggravate existing medical conditions such as congestive heart failure. Studies of heat waves show that the heart failure and stroke accounts for a greater number of fatalities than heat stroke during a heat wave.

What can we do and how can we prevent HEAT STRESS? There are several warnings signs our bodies give us to let us know we're heading for trouble.

Early warning signs include felling hot and uncomfortable, lack of energy and loss of appetite.

You should make yourself aware of these mild signs and unless they become worse or last for many days, there is no need for alarm.

Serious signs are diarrhea, dizziness, nausea, throbbing headache, dry skin (no sweating), cramps, chest pain, breathing problems and great weakness. If you notice any of these signs, seek medical advice immediately.

We can prevent heat stress by trying the following cooling techniques:

Air conditioning — In your home keep a room cool (below 90 degrees). It is not necessary to run the air conditioner all day. Go to an air conditioned facility such as a Senior Center, church, mall or restaurant.

Cooling with fans — at night use a fan to draw cool air into the house. During the day use a fan in the room you most frequent to keep air circulating.

Draw your drapes and shut your windows in the morning. This traps the cool air let in at night and keeps the hot sun out during the day.

Baths and showers — Take cool baths or showers during the day. Cool water removes excess body heat 25 times faster than cool air. Make sure your water temp is around 75 degrees.

WATER — drink plenty of fluids!!! Dehydration is one of the major contributors to heat attack and stroke. When you become dehydrated it thickens your blood and decreases blood flow which increases body heat.

When you drink plenty of water it helps thin your blood and helps the body to cool — so remember to drink water and not only when you feel thirsty.

Clothing — Wear as little as possible when inside. Wear light and loose fitting clothing when outside. If you go out wear a hat or carry an umbrella to shield yourself from the sun.

Salt & Alcohol — avoid alcohol entirely when it is hot. It causes the body to lose water an puts a strain on the heart. Do not take salt tablets without consulting a doctor.

Cooking and eating — cook in the early morning or late evenings when it is not so hot. Avoid eating hot meals, try to eat cold salads, sandwiches or soups. If you can, go out or to air conditioned restaurant, do so.

If you follow this advice and take it easy during hot weather you will be helping your body deal with the heat of summer. Slow down, keep cool, take it easy, you will keep healthy and enjoy a happy and safe summer.

If you have further questions about this, please call the COA office and ask to speak with Susan Connolly, Outreach Worker at 383-9112.

LUNCHEON IN SCITUATE — Lunch is served every Monday in Scituate & every Cohasset Senior is invited to lunch at the Scituate Senior Center on Brook Street.

Transportation is available to take you to Scituate via the ocean and meals are served at noon.

All meals are served with milk, tea/coffee, & fruit if you are diabetic. Reservations for lunch are necessary and can be made by calling the Center Office at 383-9112, on Friday the week-end before you plan to attend.

Do you enjoy traveling? Do you enjoy eating out at different restaurants? Do you enjoy planning for others? Well if you do — we have just the place to come to — You can join the new group called the "Day-Trippers Of Cohasset" Come to the first meeting Aug. 9 at 9:30 a.m.

We will discuss special interest for up-coming trips to be planned for the future. If you think you would be interested call Kathy at 383-9112.

"The Fish are a Jumpin" once again this year Don & Lyle Heap will again this year host "Bluefish Derby."

For Cohasset Seniors they will donate all cleaned fish that will be wrapped in plastic & ready to eat.

The group needs volunteers to help distribute the fish on Saturday, Aug. 5 at 2:30 p.m. at 60 Elm St. (Cohasset Housing).

Pleast call the Senior Center if you would like to receive a pice of Bluefish again this year.

FARMERS MARKET

Farmers Market coupons will be distributed Friday, Aug. 4 at the Cohasset C.O.A. for 10 a.m. to noon.

These coupons will be distributed for anyone 60 years of age or older and income eligible (recipients must be eligible for, or enrolled in programs that require income standards i.e., supplementary S.S.I., Section 8, housing, food stamps or energy assistance).

For further information contact coupon coordinator-Lisa Fitgerald-South Shore Elder Services at 848-3910, Extension 316.

The Hingham Farmers Market is located in the Station Street parking lot, Wednesdays and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

A Farmer's Market is like several roadside farmstands brought together in a city or town. The food is grown by the farmers who bring it to the market to sell directly to the consumer.

Coupons may be redeemed for any foods sold at the markets; shopppers are encouraged to buy fresh fruits and vegetables.

Coupons cannot be used to buy prepared hot foods sold at a few markets, such as cooked corn on the cob or hot dogs.

Coupons cannot be used to buy any non-food items such as plants, flowers or craft items.

HOW TO REDEEM COUPONS

Participants may redeem coupons at any participating Farmer's Market. They cannot be redeemed at grocery stores or roadside farmstands.

Each coupon is worth $2. No change is given for coupon purchases.

Participants may also use cash and Food Stamps to buy any foods sold at the Farmer's Market.

Coupons must be used by the end of October.

Lost or stolen coupons will not be replaced.

Vo-Tech School Committee reorganizes

By Anita L. Hill
Mariner correspondent

School Committee members from South Shore Regional Vo-Tech reorganized their committee structure last week.

Robert Molla Jr. (Norwell) was elected chairman for the next term and Lloyd Patriquin (Whitman) was voted in as vice-chairman. Members re-elected Robert Kelly Jr. as Secretary Treasurer.

SCHOOL PRIORITIES

Superintendent-Director Clifford Easton asked all members to review the results of a recent priority survey taken at the school.

Not wanting to refute those items on the survey, David Chittim (Cohasset) expressed his ongoing concern about absenteeism, drop-outs and the detention rate.

"I'd like to see attention given to these three areas." he said. Indicating he was appalled at rates in these areas, Chittim said: "To me these are priorities I'd like to see addressed."

School Committee Chairman Molla, however, shifted some responsibility away from the school. "I have to blame the parents somewhat," he said, "for not watching the students closer, and the reports that are sent home to them."

John Kosko, Director of the Abington campus, pointed out that, if anything, there was a need to solicit early involvement of parents at the freshmen level.

REPORTS AND EVALUATION

In presenting the school's yearly accident report, Easton said he felt the school was doing a better job, though student carelessness was always a major concern.

After discussion, members agreed that the accident rate, considering the school's equipment and size, was commendable. Easton then informed members of an upcoming on-site comprehensive evaluation scheduled for this fall. All Chapter 74 programs that receive state aid will under evaluation.

Because of the timing involved, things could prove to be hectic. "It will mean a mountain of data occurring right at budget time," said Easton.

OTHER BUSINESS

In other business, school committee members unanimously voted to 4:

Accept the resignation of Marine Tech teacher Richard Cason;

Appoint a list of teachers to the position of department head;

Renew the contracts of non-tenured teachers;

Approve grants for summer program positions;

Give permission to Supt. Easton to hire 1.8 aides through the Perkins grant;

Appoint extracurricular positions for the '89-90 school;

Accept the donation of a 1983 Ford Futura for educational dismantling within the shop;

Accept the proposal of low bidder Northern Waste Systems of Whitman for rubbish disposal;

Approval 6 warrants for reimbursement.

HHS Class of 1934 reunion

In addition to reunion celebrations every five years since 1934, the class has been meeting once every year for the past three years.

This year, at their 55th anniversary, the classes of 1933 and 1935 are invited to join them for a Sunday brunch, at noon Sept. 3 at the South Shore Country Club.

Anyone planning to attend should notify one of the following class representatives so that reservations may be made.

They are: Ann (Hamilton) Packard, 29 Hobart St., Hingham, MA 02043, 749-1687; Hiram Shorter, 72 Goden Street, Belmont, MA 02178, 484-8650; Virginia (Jones) Capo, 5 E Street, Hull, MA 02045, 925-0937; Charles Coleman, 219 Beechwood Street, Cohasset, MA 02025, 383-0161 or John Samuelson, 46 South Pleasant Street, Hingham, MA 02043, 749-6156.

Music Circus Registrations

The final Music Circus registration will be held Thursday, Aug. 3, from 9 a.m. to noon and again Thursday, from 6 to 7:30 p.m.

This registration is for the "3 Little Pigs," Aug. 17. Please contact your summer flier for all details. Checks for payment must be made payable to: "Town of Cohasset".

Jimmy Fund Softball

Again, the Town of Cohasset has accepted the challenge to play softball to raise money for the Jimmy Fund.

Most likely, there will be four towns involved this year, each town playing one another, at least once, and possibly two times.

Any Cohasset business or resident who woulu like to be a $30 sponsor of a town official is urged to call Jack Worley at the Recreation Office, (383-6791).

Any town official or employee who desires to play for the Cohasset team should also contact the Recreation Office, or Jack Worley as soon as possible.

The first game will be played Saturday, Aug. 5 at 1 p.m. on St. Mary's Field, Scituate Harbor.

Sponsorships and monies collected at the game will be given to the Jimmy Fund.

Building inspector crosses the border into new territory

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Don Robbins, Cohasset's building inspector for the past three years, had a good week.

He learned on a Friday that he had been made chief petty officer in the Navy Reserves.

Then the following Tuesday, he was appointed Hingham's new building commissioner at a salary of $35,082 a year.

"Those were two good things," said Robbins, 55, of Norwell, who will start his new position Aug. 14. "That's enough."

Hingham selectmen voted unanimously July 25 to appoint Robbins to the position which opened up when Richard Morgan left to take a job in the private sector.

Robbins had served as Hingham's deputy building inspector since 1985. He inspected buildings in that town on Friday afternoons when Cohasset town hall is closed.

He also covered for Morgan when he went on vacation, as Morgan did for him.

Ten candidates were interviewed after 29 resumes were submitted. Selectmen narrowed that number to three.

Robbins was nominated by selectman Kate Mahony, who noted his experience as the deputy building inspector for Hingham as well as his experience in Cohasset.

"I think with his experience, he'll move the town right along," said Mahony.

Selectman chairman Ed Lewiecki said Robbins' references were excellent.

"He can step right into the job with his experience," said Lewiecki. "He received some exceedingly high references."

"This is a natural progression for me," said Robbins, whose term in Hingham will expire in May of 1990. "I've worked in the town, and I think I have plenty of experience."

He said he will basically do the same job in Hingham that he has done in Cohasset.

"It's the same job with a different title," said Robbins. "Building commissioner has a little bit of a ring to it."

Robbins said the position in Hingham came up unexpectedly.

"So I applied for it," he said.

The salary is about the same in both towns, said

(See page 3)

Trash trade-off suggestion revived

A solution to the town's waste disposal problem may be found right nextdoor, according to the health board chairman.

Chairman William Baird was referring Tuesday night to an offer made by landfill owner Paul Barry of space for the town's trash in exchange for an end to litigation against him.

The litigation involves such things as liability insurance, said Baird.

"Maybe we could have an arrangement where we get our trash taken care of for nothing," he said.

Barry explained that he is seeking to expand area five by about 27 acres. He said that an environmental impact report is being done, and will take nine months to a year to complete.

Barry said that he hasn't noticed any change. But he added that odors are part of the landfill business.

"It's less detrimental to your health than carbon monoxide on Route 3A," he said.

Sullivan said that with an odor problem, expansion of the landfill could have a significant impact on Cohasset.

Health board member Sharon Beck said the EIR should address any odor problems.

Baird requested that Barry ask the Department of Environmental Protection to move as quickly as possible regarding the odors.

"I'd like us to consider what Paul has to offer," said Baird. "I'm not confortable sending our trash to

Local teens witness new lifestyle in Appalachia

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

A group of Cohasset teenagers who signed up for the Appalachia Service Project didn't really expect to like it or to get much out of it.

But that was far from the case, said the Rev. Gary Ritts, minister of Second Congregational Church which sponsored the work project June 23 to July 2.

"The kids saw a lifestyle they have never seen before," said Rev. Ritts, who travelled to eastern Kentucky with 13 teenagers and six adults for the home repair project. The APS selected the homes which needed work.

"The families really warmed up to the kids," he said. "All of them showed that happiness isn't based on material possessions and wealth. We both exchanged gifts in terms of friendship."

Making the trip were teenagers Nora McCarthy, Ted Graham, Matt Silvia, Bill Baird, Paul Ford, Matt Marks, Jeff Stone, Brian Conant, Erik Waal, Jim Yess, Mac Campbell, Dan DeMichele and Pam Haase.

In addition to Rev. Ritts and his wife, Judy, adults who went to Appalachia were Kearin Dunn, JoAnne Lehr, John Campbell, Suzanne Collins.

The ninth to 11th graders, who paid $100 each towards expenses for the trip, signed up for a number of reasons, according to Rev. Ritts.

"Some of the kids had gone before (on work projects) and wanted to try again," he said. "And several ninth grade boys were friends and talked about it as an experience they could do together.

"They all said they really had not expected to really like it, or to get much out of it. But I've heard nothing but good reports from the kids. One of the gals said she wants to be one of the staff persons for APS."

Wrote one teenager in an APS journal, "The 'matron' of our household seemed to be the happiest woman in the world despite her few material blessings.

"I'm happy to have been a part of this family's life. Even more, I'm happy that they have been a part of my life.

"I know that I didn't really want to come here at first, but after the experience I felt, I would never give up the opportunity to return."

The work project was not the first for Second Congregational.

Last summer, a group of seven teens and two adults from the church went to Maine to repair homes for the Micmac Indians.

"The Indians were very warm, friendly and happy," said Rev. Ritts at the time. "They gave us more than we gave them."

The work the group did for both projects was the same - odd jobs, said Rev. Ritts.

"But it was more beneficial this year," he said. "We had contact with other churches from other parts of the country, and the (APS) leadership staff gave

Cohasset's week

Regional plan discussed

Hull selectmen "enthusiastically support" efforts at regionalization of services with Cohasset and other communities.

In a letter to Cohasset selectmen, town manager Joseph Murphy, Jr. said the Hull board has designated the town's government study committee and town manager to discuss the issue.

Hull is the second town to respond positively to a letter from Cohasset's town government structure committee on the possibility of discussing regionalization.

Norwell's executive secretary said last week that she and possibly others would be inferested in talking with Cohasset officials.

Rock Rimmon variance

The health board told the developer of the proposed Rock Rimmon subdivision off Lambert's Lane Tuesday night, Aug. 1, that he will need variances for such things as a septic system in the flood plain.

Developer Charles Wills is proposing to construct 31, three-bedroom condominium units in the development.

Wills said he has been working on the plans for more than a year, and has spent more than $40,000 for such things as design, engineering and a hyrogeological study.

"I'd like to get going on it (the development," said Wills.

Health board chairman William Baird said that the board would have to decide on the variances based on environmental protection and hardship.

"We are trying to get a handle on an issue we think is complex," said Baird.

For two and a half hours, the board discussed different aspects of the project with Peter J. Ogren, president of Hayes Engineering, Wakefield.

Health board member Sharon Becker asked for information on nutrient loading of Straits Pond from the septic system and from fertilizer.

Baird asked whether water from the development would well up at the edge of the nearby swamp.

"I'd like you to address this issue," said Baird. "Will it create odors, be drinkable, swimmable, or a nuisance and public health issue?"

Litter closes beach

Sandy Beach was closed by the health agent Tuesday afternoon after litter was seen floating in the water and three dead seagulls were found on the sand.

"We asked people to stay off the beach," said health agent Dr. Joseph Godzik, who was called to the scene by a lifeguard about 2:30 p.m.

Godzik told the health board at a meeting that night that there was a "significant on-shore breeze" and that the litter might have been overflow from a sewage treatment plant. It could also have come from a ship, he said.

The litter included such things as tops from plastic jugs, and did not include medical debris, said Godzik.

The bacteria count at the beach has not been high, he noted.

Godzik said the beach was closed another day this summer because of turbidity which resulted in the water being unclear. Sandy Beach was reopened Wednesday.

Discussion on station fees

The health board has tentatively scheduled a special meeting Tuesday, Aug. 22, to discuss the transfer station at the town landfill which is scheduled to open in September.

Among the topics to be addressed are a new fee schedule.

Health board chairman William Baird discussed the possibility of having the town of Hull participate in the landfill operation.

Baird said if that were the case, the landfill might be able to remain open five days a week rather than three. And Hull might pay part of the construction cost of the landfill.

"We need to concentrate on our own town," said health board member Sharon Becker.

Baird suggested that members keep the idea in the back of their minds.

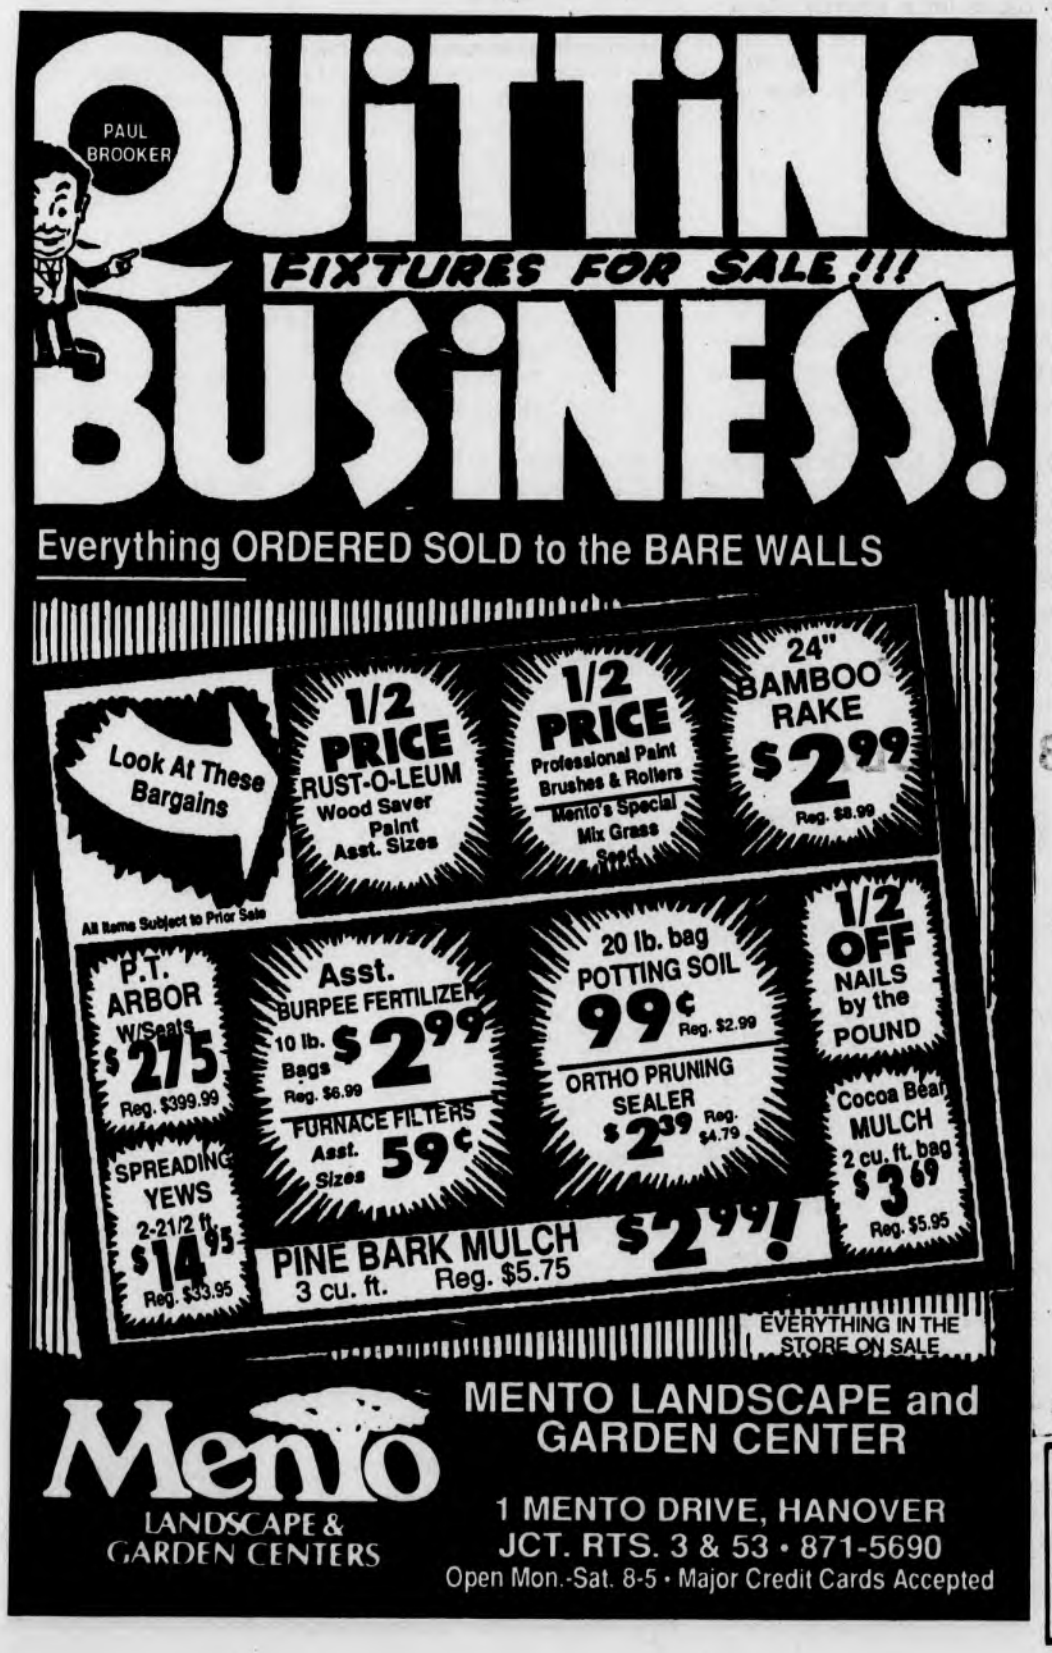
In a related matter, the board voted to send a letter to selectmen to delete loam and seed and one drain, and to reduce the paving at the transfer station which is under construction.

The cuts are being made because of a $30,000 discrepancy over the amount of ledge at the site at the Cedar St. Landfill.

Choosing a date

Selectmen have postponed setting a date for the special town meeting.

The agenda for the July 24 selectmen meeting had included a proposed date of Sept. 11 for the special meeting.



But during the meeting, executive secretary Greg Doyon suggested that the board postpone action "due to the money situation at the state level."

Selectmen agreed, and no action was taken.

Robbins decides to close the border

Robbins. But while he is near the top of the salary scale in Cohasset, there are five more salary steps available in Hingham with $43,000 the maximum, he said.

Robbins also said that such town boards as planning, conservation, health and zoning will be more accessible in Hingham, a town about three times as big as Cohasset.

He will also have access to a car in Hingham. As Cohasset's building inspector, he had a car allowance which was recently increased to $150 a month.

Robbins said he hadn't really been thinking of making a change. He said that he didn't apply for similar openings in other South Shore towns.

"They just didn't appeal to me," he said. "Maybe now the time is right to make a change. And Hingham is a nice town."

Robbins had been working in his own remodeling business for 27 years before he came to Cohasset as building inspector.

"I've worked very hard not to get my name in the paper," he said. "I'm more of a low profile person."

In addition to inspecting buildings in Cohasset, Robbins would sometimes become involved in such things as neighborhood disputes.

"The tough part of the job is when you have to go out and act as judge and jury," he said. "You know that when you leave, at least one of the parties is still going to be mad."

Commercial building will be a larger part of his job in Hingham than it was in Cohasset, according to Robbins.

"The only place left to build in Cohasset is on Route 3A," he said.

One of the biggest projects with which he has been involved as Cohasset's building inspector is the Super Stop & Shop on Route 3A.

Robbins was later sued by the developer of the Super Stop & Shop when plans for a nearby plaza were denied by the town.

"That's one of the hazards of the occupation," said Robbins. "It doesn't bother you. It's sort of like an occupational hazard. If people don't like your decision, they take you to court."

Robbins said he was also sued by Dwyer's Cleaning Spot, and by a trucking company. "You spend a good part of your time in court," he said. "It's one of the things you have to deal with."

"It was far longer in the court system than under construction," noted Robbins.

Another project was the addition to town hall,

Interior LifeStyles DECORATING
A Gold Mine In Your Home

You could be living in a gold mine for decorating ideas without realizing it.

Recycled collections and treasured heirlooms can be a charming addition to any style. The key is recognizing their decorating potential.

A collection of board games became decorating tools for one family. They framed the boards and fanned them across one wall. Adding accents in complementary colors completed the playful yet cosmopolitan design.

Countless jars of shells collected on summer holidays were transformed into another triumph. The owner of the collection lived in a suburban high-rise but the shells looked right at home on a raised platform. When bleached floors, rattan furniture, four-foot palms were added, a dark sitting room became a year round "Florida room."

Singular treasures, too, add originality, whether it's one of Aunt Maude's paintings proudly displayed on an easel or an antique quilt at the foot of your bed.

Your home has a wealth of treasures, "discovered" and "undiscovered," that can provide the nucleus for an entire design approach or a perfect accent to a room you'll enjoy.

us help in understanding what we were doing. They gave us encouragement, support and guidance.

"That way, we could spend more time on relationships. It allowed me not to worry about materials and food. They had done all that. It freed us up to focus more on the people and the tasks at hand."

The Cohasset group travelled to Kentucky in two rented vans. The $3,000 rental fee came from several sources including a yard sale held on election day.

The trip was also supported by other churches such as St. Anthony's Catholic Church, St. Stephen's Episcopal Church and First Parish Church.

Local merchants who offered gifts and support were Flemings, Kit & Kaboodle, Pat's Barbershop, Cohasset Jewelers, Colonial Pharmacy, Cards and Shards and Fleuri Home Fashions.

After a 19-hour ride, the group arrived in Kentucky.

"It was a mixed area," said Rev. Ritts. "At one end, there was a house with a swimming pool.

"At the other end, there could be a renter living in a home which may or may not have running water and indoor plumbing. There were outhouses.

"But they are used to it, and they are happy. They have the same kind of issues all of us have."

The Cohasset teens and adults were divided into three groups. Two worked on repairing porches, and the third replaced part of a roof.

"Our group took down seven layers of shingles," said Rev. Ritts. "It was 90 degrees - hot to be working on a roof. But we would joke and tease. It was fun.

"The kids were asking why it wasn't like doing a job at home. It was a good feeling relating to other people and doing the work we were doing.

"The difference was in location. Everything was different and new.

"If we stayed for two months, it wouldn't feel quite the same.

"It was also because of the dramatic nature of the experience. They slept on floors, worked in the heat every day for six to seven hours, all things they usually didn't do. It touched them deeply."

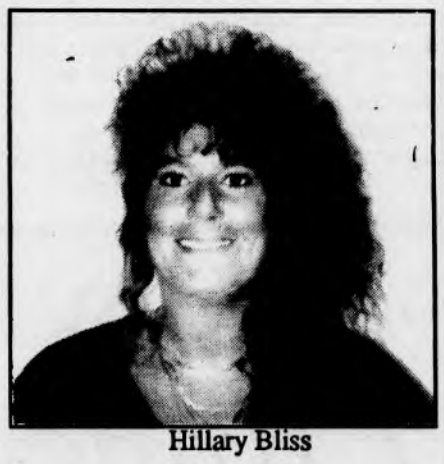
The house where Rev. Ritts and his group worked was occupied by a husband, wife and three children.

"They related with us, and sometimes worked with us," he said. "They would come up the ladder to offer us water. But they wouldn't come up on the roof. It turns out, they were all afraid of heights."

APS stressed sensitivity to the wishes of the families whose homes were being repaired, according to Rev. Ritts.

"We were told to remember that it was their home," he said. "You have to make things the way they want them."

The Cohasset group slept in local school buildings with three other church groups from Michigan, Maryland and Virginia.



"We would start the day with Devotions at about 7 a.m.," he said. "Then we would have breakfast and be at the work site about 8 or 8:30 a.m.

"We packed lunches at the center where we stayed. Sometimes the family's children would eat lunch with us.

"Around four or five, we would head back to the center and have dinner at 5:30 p.m.

"Each night, we would have some kind of activity, singing or swimming . One night, about 70 people including the family whose houses had been repaired, got together for a picnic at the park and swimming."

The church groups slept in the basement of the school on air mattresses. Uninvited guests included some bats, he said.

"The girls were freaked," remembered Rev. Ritts. "I wouldn't have liked to have run into the bats myself. But we lived with it. The kids realized what they were getting into wasn't anything like the Hilton."

Problems with heat and wasps at the work site were also overcome.

Rev. Ritts described the area as green and lush.

"It was almost a jungle feeling - steamy," he said. "There were also hills. It was pretty country."

Differences in accents and terminology emerged between the residents of Appalachia and Cohasset.

For example, said Rev. Ritts, "You don't have soda, you have pop."

But that didn't keep the local group from communicating with the residents of Appalachia, including a deaf youngster.

"He was a young fellow at the work site," explained Rev. Ritts. "He spoke very little, but he was so animated. I can picture him up on the ladder with two cups of water for us, and his father trying to get him down. The boy didn't hesitate at all."

When it came time for the local group to leave, the boy gave each member a small painting on a block of wood. So did his sister, who also made paper mice for her new friends.

The Cohasset group bought the family a rose bush, because the mother liked flowers.

"We all had mixed feelings about leaving," said Rev. Ritts. "We were sad to leave our new friends, anxious to get home and tell the story."

Wrote one teenager in the journal, "I don't think I'll ever forget when we left the work site on Friday, and our family's little 5-year-old put his arms up in the air so that I could pick him up.

"I picked him up and he gave me the biggest and one of the best hugs I think I've ever had. It was at that moment that I realized how much we mean to these people, and how much they mean to us."

Rev. Ritts added, "Parents said a lot of the kids were quiet when they came home, as if to absorb what had gone on. A lot of them talked about their struggles to leave."

In the fall, Rev. Ritts will start preparing for next summer's work program.

"We'll start fundraising and have a slide show," he said. "This year, Second Congregational pretty much sponsored it. We hope to make it a town-wide event and include everyone."

An adult adviser wrote, "This week was an experience I will never forget - plan to do again - and wish everyone could have.

"I hope that this journal and our slides and pictures we've all brought back will show the town that there are people in this country (even our own community!) that are poor and need our help, while at the same time so much richer than we ever dreamed."

A disposal alternative

SEMASS. If there is an alternative, I'd like to see that."

"I won't vote to add to the problem until the odors are solved," said Sullivan. "It's an issue for the town of Cohasset to be concerned about."

Sohier St. resident Robert Davenport said that he was concerned as a taxpayer about spending money for a transfer station if the rubbish will be taken to Cohasset Heights.

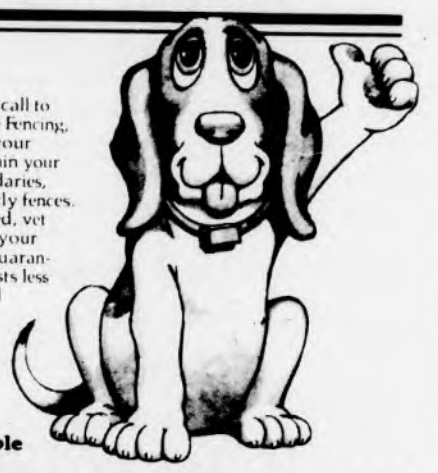
"We would have needed a transfer station anyway," said Baird.

Sullivan noted that the board is in the process of sending out requests for bids for five year contracts to haul the trash to SEMASS.

Health agent Dr. Joseph Godzik said that the contract would be on a per mile basis to any landfill.

"We would need a transfer station whether we send our trash to Barry Brothers or someplace else," agreed Baird.

Baird suggested that the board consider Barry's offer. No action was taken.



Local production firm completes video program

Horizon Teleproductions, Inc., of Cohasset, has completed phase one filming for Sail magazine's Fall video programs. The firm will be producing two full length videos for the Charlestown-based sailing magazine. The videos entitled, "How to Buy an Auxiliary Sailboat," and "How to Sell an Auxiliary Sailboat," will each be 90 minutes in length with the "buying" video available through direct consumer purchasing.

Horizon Teleproductions recently completed all production on a promotional video for Fortress Museum Quality Storage located off Interstate 93.

Recreation returns money

Cohasset's recreation commission returned to the town's general fund a total of $47,095 for fiscal 1989, according to a report submitted to selectmen.

That includes $23,139 from facility permits, and $23,956 from program fee deposits, according to commission director Jack Worley.

The commission also conducted an additional $10,000 worth of services for the town, directly serving 5,764 individuals, and another 3,000 to 3,600 residents with facility permits, said Worley.

Among the most popular programs are the soccer league, with a registration of 300 people, and basketball league, with 225, according to Worley. Aerobics is also popular with 150 people registered.

Free programs included band concerts, which attracted 710 people, and an Easter Egg Hunt for 500 people.

Worley noted that, according to general law, selectmen are to be informed of the commission's revolving account fund.

Troop 28 Boys Scout update

There will be 34,000 Boy Scouts and leaders attending the National Jamboree at Fort A-P Hill in Virginia.

Cohasset's Troop 28 will be represented by Michael Campfield, Earle Bestick Jr. and David Farrag. The Scouts will be seeing movie director, Steven Spielberg, who will be using two video screens and will conclude with a laser and fireworks display. Steven Spielberg, who was a Boy Scout, will be presented the distinguished Eagle Scout Award for continued service to "his God, country, and fellow man." He helped to introduce a new Merit Badge in cinematography for Scouting.

The Scouts will be camping at Fort A-P Hill and will be touring Washington D.C. This year's theme is "The Adventure Begins with Americas Youth."

Pack 38 Cub Scout News

Despite the summer heatwave, Pack 38 Cub Scouts enjoyed the July summer pack meeting cookout at the Deer Hill School. The main event the scouts participated in was archery. Many were surprised to have hit the target on their first shooting.

The Scouts who attended were: Greg Boyne, Frank Judge, Todd Bestick, Kevin Devito, Luke Caldwell, Mark Equi, Mike Baird, Mike Christoffel, and Christopher Laas. Troop 28 Boy Scouts assisting were Earle Bestick Jr. and David Christoffel.

Pack 38 Cub Scouts will be sponsoring a Bike Rodeo Saturday August 19, from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Deer Hill School. The cost is $1 to register and 50 cents for identification stickers to be issued by the Cohasset Police. (This will help to identify lost or stolen bikes). All Cub Scouts (or new interested "Scouters" from grades 2-5), friends, and others are invited to attend.

The RODEO will include Bike safety and Safety inspection of your bike by Cohasset Cycle Sports: Identification Registration with the Cohasset Police by Safety Officer, Clifford Jones: and the Events — the obstacle course, slow race, coasting race and slalom test.

For further information call Linda Farrag 383-9519. The rain date will be same time on Sunday, Aug. 20.

Impressive win by swim team

In a meet that was cut short by four races due to a thunderstorm, Cohasset defeated the Scituate Knights of Columbus team by a score of 324 to 216. Once again the depth of the Cohasset team as a whole and outstanding performances by individual swimmers led to an impressive win.

The swimmers winning first place blue ribbons were: Ted Reardon (2), Lauren deVito (2), Jonathan deLima (3), Jennifer Jackson (3), Chris Kondrat, Justin Golden (2), Megan Connelly (4), Doug Cameron (2), Becky Golden (3), Chip Anderson (3), Brooke Anderson (3), David Leahy (3), Greg Schultz (2), Robin deVito (2), Derek Bugley (2), Tom Greco, Heather Littlehale (2), Megan Staunton, Elizabeth Good, Tina Rousseau, Hillary Strong, John Brister, Tracey Reardon, Melissa Rousseau, Greg Bilton, Kaitlin Malley, and Maria Kierce.

Niffy Jackson broke the pool record for the 50 yard backstroke with a time of 31.25 seconds. The old pool record was held by Mary Bowker of the Scituate Harbor Yacht Club team.

In diving, Caroline deLima was first among 12 and unders. Alison Doherty was second in the 16 and under age group and Colby Lawrence was third.

Crossing the border to a new job

where some minor problems are still being worked out.

"Greg Doyon (selectmen's executive secretary) has taken over a lot of that," said Robbins.

Among the large projects he will be working on in Hingham is Elder Care, which will provide some 300 homes for the elderly.

"It should come up shortly," he said. "They are trying to obtain permits.

"You just break it down to the simplest point, and work with that."

Robbins said he will miss driving along Cohasset's coastline. "Jerusalem Road is very pretty," he said.

He will also miss the people with whom he has worked.

"They are good people who do a good job," said Robbins.

The feeling, apparently, is mutual.

"He's such a pleasant person, and we will all miss him," said Ellen Winn, clerk/receptionist in the selectmen's office.

In answer to a question, Robbins said he is not worried about accepting a job in Hingham, and then being laid off due to budget cuts a week later. That was the case with Janet Chalke, the former administrative coordinator in the Cohasset selectmen's office.

"I'm pretty familiar with the budget in Hingham," said Robbins,"so I don't think that is what will happen."

His advise to a successor in Cohasset is to be consistent.

"What you do for one, you have to do for all," he said. "People are willing to abide by decisions if they are sure it is not more or less than what others are doing."

The job also requires a "people-person" according to Robbins.

"You've got to be able to get along with people," he said. "If you're not a people person, you won't last.

"An accountant deals more with numbers. But in this job, you have to be judge and jury, and you have to enforce rules."

Robbins and his wife, Beverly, moved to Norwell 35 years ago from Dorchester.

Both he and Morgan are call firefighters in that town.

In his spare time, Robbins enjoys boating and fishing, playing golf and skiing.

He is also studying energy technology at Massasoit College.

Robbins notified Doyon that his resignation will be effective Aug. 11.

Advertisements for his replacement are scheduled to be published in newspapers soon.

Doyon, who spoke highly of the building inspector's work performance, said Robbins has indicated that he will fill in during his off hours until a replacement is found.

In the meantime, Robbins intends to tie up any loose ends before he goes to Hingham.

"And I'm going to try to see the top of my desk again," he said.

Women's Aglow Retreat will be held Aug. 17, 18, and 19 at Wheaton College of Norton.

GIVING KITCHENS A LIFT

A recent nationwide survey of professional appraisers points to a kitchen "facelift" as one of the top ten values in home improvement. This limited form of remodeling consists of a new floorcovering, sink, faucet, appliances, cabinet doors and drawer fronts, and paint. When this kitchen renewal is performed professionally, the appraisers estimated that an average of 73 percent of the cost of the job could be recovered at the time of resale. Not only does a kitchen facelift make the room look fresh and clean, but it offers the opportunity to change style and quality. For instance, a switch from a colonial motif to European contemporary can be made with the introduction of sleek-looking laminated cabinet fronts. A move to raised-panel cabinet doors suggests high quality. Each improves a home's image in the eyes of a buyer.

When it comes to kitchens, kitchen design associates know it all. We have the experience and the confidence to tell you which type of kitchen will be best suited for your needs. We have a variety of cabinets that will give you the quality you want and deserve. If cost is a major factor we can assist with the right plans to make your kitchen cost efficient and functional as well. There are ways to cut down on extras without cutting down on quality. It's time you worked with professionals at 962 Washington St., Rt. 53 in Hanover. Tel. 826-4121.

HINT: Generally speaking, houses under the age of 20 can get away with a kitchen facelift; rather than a remodel.

□ Deborah A. Stipa, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Blach, formerly of North Street, has been named a Collegiate All-American Scholar National Award Winner. This is a position of honor less than 10 percent of all young people can attain.

Deborah's picture and biography will exclusively appear in the appropriate volume of the All-American Scholar National Awards Yearbook, which honors America's outstanding students.

□ Sigrid Carey of 8 James Lane, a member of the South Shore Spinners Guild, won the "Silver Plate" award for spinning the most uniform yarn at the Barnstable County Fair's annual Spinning Bee. As well as this award for quality yarn, Sigrid placed second for quantity, spinning 294 yards of yarn in one hour.

□ Andrew Nelson Crossland, son of Margot Herzog, 82 Pleasant Street, received the B.A. degree from Oberlin's College of Arts and Sciences with a major in geology. He was awarded the College's George B. Wharton Prize in Geology and was elected to associate membership in Sigma Xi, the national scientific research honorary society.

□ Andrew Barton Armstrong, son of Mrs. J.B. Armstrong, 214 South Street, received the B.A. degree from Oberlin's College of Arts and Sciences with a major in history.

□ Brian Lincoln of 210 Hull St., recently received a Bachelor of Science degree in Business from Westfield State College.

□ Received an update from the Bird family, formerly of 4 Surrey Drive this week. The Birds lived on Surrey Drive from 1978 to 1983 when they moved to Wendham, New Hampshire and then to their current home in Wall,New Jersey in July 1985. K-mart transfers were the reasons for the moves for Mr. Bird. Suzanne Bird, ACHS grad of 1982 and UNH in 1986 spent 2 years at Trinity Dep in Providence. She is now in pursuit of a career in theatre in New York City. Maria graduated from Johnson and Wales University May 27 where she was a practicing fellow for 2 years. She has taken a position with Wyatt Cafeterias in Dallas, Texas.

Diet and nutrition program

The Hingham Recreation Commission will begin a four-session diet and nutrition program beginning August 8 at the Hershey House.

Sessions will be held from 7 to 8 p.m. Tuesdays through August 29 and are open to all South Shore residents. Topics that will be discussed include:

* Ways to lose weight without rigid dieting
* Eating for high energy, a healthy cardiovascular system and muscle strength when working out.
* How to cut down on fat and increase complex carbohydrates
* Maintaining body fluid balance

Joan Cundari, a registered dietitian, is coordinating the course. She is employed at the Children's Hospital in Boston and has a private nutrition consulting practice.

The cost is $32 for the full program or $10 per session. Pre-register by calling the recreation office at 749-1464 or Cundari at 749-0946.

Editorial

What's that you say?

Did anyone here happen to catch Monday evening's edition of "Chronicle" on Channel 5?

Our quaint village of Cohasset was featured on the popular television show, along with the towns of Duxbury and Scituate.

The lush scenery was beautiful as many of our coastal homes were featured, and it was interesting to see some of the local residents talk about their town. Robin Surhbier of South Main Street talked about her show business aspirations following her appearance in The Witches of Eastwick. Local service station owner Wayne Robbins also talked about life and business in Cohasset.

But the most interesting facet of Monday night's vignette on Cohasset was the appearance and the words of selectmen chairman Burt Pratt.

Mr. Pratt talked to a Channel 5 reporter about the history of Cohasset, and the people who comprise this community. Mr. Pratt is uniquely qualified, having lived in Cohasset all his life, with a long list of distinguished ancestors who lived and died here.

But our selectmen chairman did not complete his on-camera interview without stepping on a few toes. During the segment, he explained his version of the terms, "native," "townie," and a particularly bruising title for those who have been privileged to live here only a few years. He called those folks, "Johnny-come lately's," defining them as residents who have lived here from one to ten years, become a boisterous segment of the voting population, and then leave the town without looking back.

These statements were blatantly unfair to the many people of this town who were not privileged, as Mr. Pratt has been, to date their ancestry back to the founding days of this community. He has served his community well, as his brothers and family before him. But that is no reason to detract from the valuable contributions made by members of this community who moved here, worked hard for their town, and then moved on to another home in another municipality.

Perhaps his words were said tongue in cheek. But it sounds to us like foot in mouth.

Where would this town be without fresh, innovative ideas from the "new blood" in our neighborhoods? We have had the privilege of having many "new faces" serve this community. Jack Langmaid lived here only a few years, compared to some "townies" who have inhabited Cohasset for a lifetime. Yet his contributions to the public school system were tremendous during his short life, while some "townies" watched and complained from the sidelines.

Cliff Mitman is another "Johnny-come-lately" who has served on the personnel board and the board of selectmen and made many fine and thoughtful contributions to his new hometown.

Many of the members of our advisory committee are relatively new residents of Cohasset. Yet they have volunteered hundreds of hours of their leisure time to the service of their town. They do not receive a stipend, as Mr. Pratt does, and they do not champion their causes in front of the media. Their task is unassuming yet difficult. And they are not rewarded with any bureaucratic power, but simply act as advisors to a higher authority.

There is not a "townie" on the school committee, yet they have all worked toward a single goal of preserving the quality of the public school system. Politics take a back seat when it comes to fighting for a budget that will retain teachers and classrooms for the students of Cohasset.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson is no "townie," yet Mr. Pratt himself said no attorney would work harder for the town, and at such a bargain rate.

We have engineers, attorneys, teachers, brokers and bankers who have moved to Cohasset and later moved out. They were attracted to this beautiful town, purchased costly homes and paid their taxes. For a variety of reasons, prinicipally due to employment, some eventually leave.

And that is the crux of this entire argument. Every taxpaying resident of this town has the right to run for political office, attend town meetings and cast a ballot at the elections. That is not an exclusive privilege of the few "townies" among us.

Oh, and the taxpayers of Cohasset have another right. They can tell their elected leaders when to take a hike.

Drivers should have some rights, too

Letters

To the Editor:

This is an open letter to all joggers, walkers, bicyclists, and any other non-motor vehicle users of the paved road surfaces.

You write newspapers and request motor vehicle operators be careful passing, and yet you feel you can cross without looking, stay in the middle of the roadway or lane, face the wrong direction, and be side by side, not single file.

If you want motor vehicle operators to respect your rights, respect theirs.

Also, don't you realize how dangerous it is to be listening to your favorite music on a small stereo with earphones. You do not hear vehicles come up behind you.

Also, if you are walking or jogging, why do you feel you do not have to use the sidewalks that are provided at a great deal of expense to the taxpayer. Most roads are narrow enough, without pedestrian traffic in the vehicular travel portion of the road.

Bicyclists are to obey the same rules of the road as a motor vehicle, ie., signal turns, stop for stop signs, lights, yield rights of way.

The last comment I have is please do not have your dog running loose with you. I don't know how many times I have had to stop because an animal has been in the road. I have been yelled at by pedestrians because I have used my car horn in an attempt to get a dog out of the road, or signal pedestrians and bicyclists 2 or more abreast on the road, that another vehicle is coming in the opposite direction and I would like to pass in my own lane.

If you want respect on the roadway, which was designed and built for motor vehicle traffic, give respect back to the motor vehicle operator.

Osgood PSO says thanks to parents

To the editor:

As the outgoing PSO representatives at the Osgood School, we would like to thank all of the dedicated volunteers who have worked with us throughout the past year. These people have given so much of themselves to help enrich our children's educational experiences at the Osgood school, being called upon time and time again to serve in so many different capacities. The work of this outstanding group has been especially vital for the school in these years of severe budget limitations.

We would like to express our sincere appreciation to every one of the devoted mothers, fathers, teachers and community members who have given their time and talents.

Thanks especially to our wonderful Room Mothers, Artist-of-the-Month volunteers, Great Books leaders, School Improvement Council members and fundraising chairpersons for making our job so much easier and so much more productive for the school.

Sincerely,
Karen Devine and Kathy Walsh
PSO Representatives, Osgood School

Watercolor workshop at art center

Painting Flowers in Watercolor taught by Katherine Smit, will be repeated August 16 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Rd.

Emphasis of the workshop will be on the flower design itself, color and color patterns, and the emotions in painting the flowers. Beginners are welcome.

Other August workshops include Watercolor Workshop taught by Edward Minchin, Tuesday through Thursday, August 22 to 24 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and Monoprint Workshop taught by Berj Kailian, Wednesday and Thursday, August 30 and 31 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Handbuilding & Wheel in Clay taught by George Dalton will meet Saturdays for four weeks beginning August 5 from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Basic Handbuilding techniques (slab, coil & pinch) and basic wheel throwing techniques will be introduced to create both functional and decorative clay pottery. Finished pieces will be fired and glazed.

For a more unstructured atmosphere, there will be an Open Clay Studio Wednesdays from 7 to 9 p.m. starting August 2. The sessions will be monitored by George Dalton and clay will be included in the fee.

Other four week courses which still have openings are: Life Drawing taught by Rosalind Farbush meeting Saturdays from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. beginning August 5; Outdoor Watercolor taught by Virginia Avery meeting Wednesdays and Fridays from 9:30 a.m. to noon beginning August 2; and Monotype taught by Berj Kailian meeting Mondays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. beginning August 7.

Courses for August are filling and early registration is encouraged. To register or for more information, call the South Shore Art Center weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 617-383-9548.

Thursday is Mariner Day

The Fishing Line

By Bill Bowers

Team effort captures prize

Big-game fishing is a team effort.

Three local anglers captured, tagged and released a huge white marlin to win second place in the prestigious 21st annual Nantucket Invitational Billfish Tournament.

The marlin, over 7 feet long and estimated to weigh more than 100 pounds, was caught by Adams Tackle owner Bill Smith of Pembroke, Alex Clark of Norwell and Capt. Jim Smith of Plymouth.

The team made the catch aboard Clark's boat Fish Hawk, where tag and release is the rule for all marlin and tuna, reported Bill Bois at Adams.

Barney Mattie of Pembroke won a $20 gift certificate for bringing in the largest bluefish of the week, a 17-pound, 8-ounce monster he caught off Hardings Ledge near Hull.

Robby Dunn, 10, of Rockland weighed in another bluefish of 12 pounds, 15 ounces.

Another successful young angler was Stephen Whitney, 14, of Marshfield, who captured a 12-pound bluefish aboard the Bronco III out of Green Harbor.

And Jack Crowley of Weymouth had a 13-pound, 2-ounce bluefish from Point Allerton in Hull.

John Lease, Paul Felichko and Beth McAdams, all of Hingham, teamed up to catch a 48-pound, 4-ounce striped bass which fell for a mackerel chunk at Black Rock Beach in Cohasset.

The lean "racer" was 53 inches long but only 26 inches in girth, reported Mark Trask at Trask Tackle in Scituate.

Ted Abbadessa of Cohasset used a live pogy to fool a 48-pound, 2-1/2-ounce bass at World's End in Hingham.

Doug Lemish of Hanover fished a live eel at Third Cliff in Scituate to land a bass of 37 pounds, 3-1/2 ounces.

Bob Bennett of Cohasset showed great finesse, landing a 35-pound, 2-ounce striper on gossamer 10-pound line. The fish hit a Rebel plug.

Cohasset lobsterman Sheldon Sladen is currently leading the annual Trask Bigfish Bluefish Tournament with the 15-pound, 10-1/2-ounce chopper he caught on a Gibbs lure at Minot's Light.

Flounder fishing has been excellent at the bell buoy off the North River mouth, according to Jane Duffy at Mary's Boat Livery in Marshfield. Use seaworms or small squid strips for bait.

There are still schoolie bass in the river, especially between King's Landing Marina and the Union Street bridge.

There are rumors of keepers around the river as well, but successful anglers aren't giving away any secret locations.

Remember, all bass smaller than 36 inches must be released alive.

John Scagliarini of Plymouth won a $15 gift certificate for the largest striped bass weighed in during July, reported Bob Johnson at the The Tackle Shop in Plymouth. The bass weighed 39 pounds, 8 ounces.

Junior Wall of Plymouth won the bluefish entry with his 13-pound, 8-ounce chopper.

Doug Miranda of Plymouth caught a 5-pound, 8-ounce largemouth bass to win in that category.

The largest smallmouth bass was caught by David Walsh, 8, of Plymouth, and weighed 3 pounds even.

Robert Murdough of Sandwich weighed in the biggest pickerel, a 2-pound, 12-ounce monster.

Winner in the panfish category was Leo DeSouza of Manomet, who caught a 1-pound, 3-ounce calico bass.

And in the "one that got away" category is an unidentified billfish trolled up and subsequently lost by Dave Lynch and Bob Fisk, both of Scituate.

The escapee, estimated at 35 pounds, is armed with a sword and could be a broadbill or some kind of marlin.

May you be the one to find out what it is.

Keep those lines wet.

Johnston says he won't run for the senate

By David S. Cutler
Mariner staff

State Human Services Secretary Philip W. Johnston will not be a candidate for the Massachusetts State Senate next year.

Johnston told the Mariner this week that he wants to remain at his human services post for the final 18 months of the Dukakis Administration. A run for the Senate would require him to leave the Dukakis cabinet.

"This is a very difficult time in state government," said Johnston, "and I want to work to preserve the programs we have developed for the poor in Massachusetts.

PROGRAMS 'VULNERABLE'

"These human services programs are very vulnerable right now, and I don't want to leave in the middle of a serious budget crunch."

The Marshfield Democrat was confident he could have won the Senate seat had be chosen to run, and said he will remain active "in the politics of the region...not just in this race."

The Senate district, serving Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury, is represented by Sen. William Golden, D-Weymouth, who will be a candidate for lieutenant governor next year.

Johnston's decision not to run in next year's Democratic Primary leaves a three-man field, pitting State Rep. Robert Ambler, D-Weymouth, against Weymouth Selectman Brian McDonald and John Creed of Marshfield, a veteran member of the Marshfield School Committee.

NO REPUBLICAN YET

No Republican has, as of yet, announced a decision to enter the race.

With Johnston on the sidelines, Ambler, a longtime member of the Massachusetts House, appears to be the favorite despite his recent shift -- a cave-in, said critics -- on the controversial abortion issue.

In making the change from pro-life to pro-choice, Ambler said he was reflecting the will of the majority in the district. His announcement, however, was greeted with a virulent attack from the pro-life lobby.

McDonald is, and always has been, solidly pro-choice, while Creed, a former priest, has remained steadfastly pro-life, a stance which he insists makes him a conservative only on abortion.

As a fellow Marshfielder, Creed believes his candidacy is considerably enhanced by Johnston's decision not to run.

Ambler explains his flip-flop on abortion topic

By Robert J. Flavell
Executive Editor

The stridency between pro- and anti-abortion activists has reached ear-splitting levels in race for the Norfolk-Plymouth senatorial seat, with more than a year to go before primary day.

Rep. Robert Ambler, D-Weymouth, bit off a mouthful when he decided to respect the feelings of the large mjority of citizens in his district and announce a pro-choice position.

This not only set off the anti-abortionists, a vociferous lot if few in number, but drew knowing sneers from opponents, who spat the word "expediency" to the press at every opportunity.

Ambler has a long record as a pro-lifer, and while he remains personally committed to that stand, he says he cannot impose his personal view on the people in the district.

BRICKBATS FROM BOTH SIDES

That position brought brickbats from both sides, the pro-lifers feeling abandoned, and the pro-choicers being suspicious of their newly-added member's surprising conversion.

Dripping with moral indignation, as usual, were the right-to-lifers, who dispatched a dozen dead roses to Ambler's office and all but accused him of human sacrifice.

But the unkindest cut of all came from something called the "Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights," which blasted forth a press release all but calling for Ambler, a convert to Catholicism, to be excommunicated.

Now, there's a red flag if ever there was one.

"Abortion, in the eyes of the Church," the League indictment intoned, "is a crime punishable by automatic excommunication," adding that a Vatican Declaration denies Catholics any right to "take part in a propaganda campaign in favor" of abortion-rights laws, or to "collaborate in its application."

The League missive doesn't precisely say that those who merely speak in favor of abortion rights should be condemned; but it stresses "the penalty of excommunication" -- and not merely excommunication, but automatic excommunication, a distinction which evidently takes the matter out of temporal hands. And it warns that Ambler and similarly-inclined politicians "run the risk that, by their public statements and actions, they will cut themselves off from the life of the Church."

FORMER PILOT EDITOR

Were the League not operated by Phil Lawler, defrocked Boston Pilot editor and Operation Rescue proselytizer, this sort of religious bludgeoning might actually affect the Senate race.

As it is, the Catholic Archdiocese of Boston takes no credit or blame for the League, which is not an archdiocesan agency.

Lawler, who recently took the reigns of the local League chapter and is its only fulltime employee, admits to a 1,000-person membership in Massachusetts, and guesses at maybe 16,000 nationwide.

"The Catholic League does some fine work, but they are an independent agency, and Mr. Lawler does not speak for the archdiocese," a spokesman said, adding that Cardinal Bernard Law has made the Catholic position on abortion clear, and "there is no necessity at time time to go any further."

Lawler resigned as Pilot editor after what he describes as "a decision by the archdiocese that the Pilot needed a different kind of editorial leadership." Translation: he was too strident there, too.

VATICAN DOCUMENTS

He confirms that he issued his "Issue Analysis"," entitled "Catholic Politicians Risk Break with Church," himself without consulting any sort of board of higher-ups, but feels he was "well within my rights, since I was quoting Vatican documents.

"I was not trying to call for excommunication," Lawler says despite the evident import of the release. "I was trying to illustrate that this is a serious matter."

Serious it is, if one little guy in Needham can determine bell, book and candle for Ambler's soul.

There is a danger in self-righteousness, and in self-interpretation of official Vatican musings. There is an even greater danger, politically, for self-styled Catholic spokesmen to cast their religion in what may prove to be an embarrassing position.

After all, Cardinal Law hasn't called for Ted Kennedy's banishment from Mother Church, nor damned the eternal soul of Frank Bellotti -- both pro-choicers.

OTHER CONSIDERATIONS

Is Lawler making his church appear hypocritical? Or are there other considerations he simply does not understand, like the complex niceties of Canon Law, which bans "procurement" of abortions, not freedom of speech.

Or the reality that this country is a democracy, not a theocracy.

Or the purely political realization that condemnation from the pulpit is perhaps the fastest way to get a candidate elected. The late Cardinal Humberto Medieros tried his hand at political interference when Barney Frank ran for Congress -- and an annoyed public promptly elected Frank. Yankees, Catholic or otherwise, are a stiff-necked lot who don't like to be told how to vote, when they have to wear seatbelts, how high the Legislature can jack up their taxes -- or whether they can have abortions.

But what of politicians who sincerely change their minds -- is it allowed? Is it possible? Or will jaded voters simply dismiss any change of position as political expediency?

Ambler says -- and there's no reason to doubt it -- that he agonized over the abortion issue, holding long talks with advisers, family and friends. Eventually, he decided on his pro-choice position based on a number of considerations, not the least of which was the strong public resistance to government interference in the abortion decision.

Ambler says clearly that he is personally pro-life. He says just as clearly that he won't vote to restrict the abortion decision for those who want the choice. Is that so hard to accept, or is he simply having his cake and eating it, too?

Time will tell. But if politicians couldn't ever change their minds, we'd still have slavery.

Youth baseball tournament

The first Youth Baseball Tournament ever held in the Town of Hingham will take place this weekend, August 5 and 6, 1989, at Haley and Hersey Fields.

The Dean Witter 10 year-old Invitational Baseball Tournament will be featuring the top 10 year-old All Star teams from Eastern Massachusetts, including teams from Hyde Park, West Roxbury, Braintree, Norwood, Dedham and Cohasset, as well as the host Hingham team.

Opening games on Saturday feature: Hingham vs. Hyde Park — 10 a.m. at Haley Field; Mike Melling (Parkway) vs. Braintree American — 10 a.m. at Hersey Field; Norwood American vs. Dedham — 12:30 p.m. at Haley Field; Norwood National vs. Cohasset — 12:30 p.m. at Hersey Field.

Dean Witter Vice President, Bill McAuliffe, was optimistic that the success of this year's tournament will lead to the Dean Witter Tournament being an annual event for the Town of Hingham in future years.

A great post season for local All-Star team

By Brian Fahey
Special to the Mariner

A star-crossed 11/12 Little League All-Star team has just completed a month of post-season play comprised of three tournaments. The boys were 1-2 in the Scituate Tournament, 1-1 in the International Tournament, and 0- for the North River Tournament.

This month-long baseball odyssey gave the players a chance to compete with teams from Hingham, Scituate, Norwell, Marshfield, Pembroke, Hanson, Halifax, Kingston, Plymouth, Carver and Falmouth.

Post-season play began in Scituate in late June in a tournament made up of the host team, Hingham, Norwell and us. We opened against eventual winner, Hingham and got a great pitching performance from Greg Stevens for three innings before he turned the game over to Jim Magner in the fourth. The kids hit the ball sharply and rang up seven hits, highlighted by Chris McKenna's home run. A quirky defense and solid hitting by the Hingham squad proved to be Cohasset's undoing as a tight, well-played 7-4 game became a 14-4 rout in the top of the sixth.

Game two went to the host in a 16-14 thriller. Cohasset opened with a five run burst in the top of the first, an effort that was countered by a nine run Scituate surge. The host team added four more in the second before our defense settled down and played great for the next three innings. The stage was set for a dramatic comeback. We scored five times in the sixth to tie the game and had two out with the bases jammed — Jimmy Magner at the plate. Jimmy crushed the ball on a line, but right at the right fielder to put an end to the rally. Scituate bounced back to score in their half and that was that.

The next day Andy Fitzsimmons spun a masterpiece from the mound, got some late help in relief from Nick Welz, solid defense and timely hitting throughout the lineup in a textbook 11-5 win over Norwell.

The North River Tournament opened Saturday, July 6 versus Kingston at home. In a methodical well-played game we came out on the short end of a 10-3 score which seemed to set the tone for our play in the tournament. The next day we fell to Halifax 10-6 in a game similar to our effort against Scituate. In this case we tied the game in the fifth at 6 but let it slip away in the sixth after two were out. Curiously, we had nearly identical games with Hingham, Carver and Marshfield later in the tournament. We were tied or leading late in games but betrayed ourselves with poor defense. In short we just didn't quite know to win and thereby realize our potential.

In a sense several times we did not show up to play — another curious pattern. Dull efforts produced embarrassing losses to Hingham, Scituate, Pembroke, Marshfield and Hanson.

The season concluded in Kingston on an upbeat. In a well-played game under the lights Kingston got the better of us by a 12-3 score which was very deceptive. The game was 6-3 in the fourth with two home runs that just eluded the grasp of Neven Bunstein accounting for three of those runs. Led by the hot bats of Ben Redfield, Jim Magner and Eric Henry, we had threatened repeatedly, but Kingston managed to cut down several runners on the bases with exceptional defense. And just when we seemed to have momentum gathering behind us, a bobble on a force play at second with two outs opened the flood gates for six unearned runs, and a chance for victory eluded us — again.

But I save the best for last. Somewhere in the middle of the North River muddle, the real character of this team of all-stars shone ever so brightly — not once, but

A great season for Cohasset's All-Stars...

twice — in curious antithesis to their North River effort. In the International Tournament (i.e. the road to Williamsport, PA [the home of the Little League World Series]), these stars rose up and thrashed Scituate when it counted most. In a game reminiscent of their encounter in the Scituate Tournament, the lead changed hands five times and was tied twice before Michael Riley drove a line single into right field to score Ben Redfield in the bottom of the sixth to make a winning pitcher out of Nicky Welz. Solid offense was provided by Jim Magner, Brendan Kinchla and Kenny Leahy — all with two hits. Greg Stevens, Eric Henry, and Nicky Welz each contributed key singles. The defense played exceptionally, anchored by Kinchla and Redfield at the corners. Kenny Leahy had three putouts in center and Welz an assist in right before he relieved Jim Magner late in the game to help seal the victory.

And so we proceeded to Plymouth to face Falmouth in an effort to progress toward Williamsport. We were derailed there in one semi-tragic moment, but not for lack of effort. Ben Redfield started and sailed through two. In the third with bases loaded and none out, infield in, we got a ball to Ryan Freeman at short. He fielded the ball cleanly and threw to the plate to force the runner, but Michael Riley's mask got hung up on his glasses. The distraction caused the ball to carom off his glove and permit two runs to score. Three more scored before Redfield put the fire out. Greg Stevens pitched the final three in his best effort as an All-Star and limited Falmouth to just a single hit the rest of the way. We scored two and threatened continuously, but the Falmouth defense was superb because we only had two strikeouts.

Maybe our team spirit ebbed a little in Plymouth that night. Nonetheless, I salute the All Stars:

Michael Riley and Neven Bunstein, the catchers who were magnificent behind the plate. Michael was solid with bat all the way and provided the highlight to the season. A year from now Neven will be the top catcher in the league.

Ben Redfield and Andy Fitzsimmons split time at first with equal proficiency. Both did the job on the mound. Andy had the best individual effort of the season vs. Norwell.

Ryan Freeman, Brendan Kinchla, and Jim Magner. These three are to be commended with their consistent defense and solid bats throughout the tournaments and have been selected to play in an All-Star/All-Star game this Saturday as a reward.

Eric Henry, Kenny Leahy, and Tommy Greco are all only 11 years old and were vital contributors to the team effort. Kenny and Eric were fixtures in center and left and provided many thrills at bat and on the bases. Tommy is one of the silkiest fielders I've ever seen at his age. This trio could be next year's All-Star/All-Stars.

Matt Higgins and Kevin McKenna shared third base. Matt had a great game in Carver when he went three for three and nearly won the game single-handedly. Kevin is fearless at the plate and in the field. He could be a dominant power hitter next year.

Nicky Welz and Greg Stevens were the primary right fielders because of their strong arms and got a lot of work on the mound. Greg has the talent to play anywhere, but will be dominant on the mound next year.

Chris McKenna rotated among the outfield positions. His home run was the highlight of the first Hingham game.

Pat Reynolds was the guy that spelled everybody else at second, third and left. Definitely our most exciting baserunner, a Kenny Leahy lookalike.

Brian Riley, Matt Rossi, and Jeremiah Hawke were three kids that gave us a hand when some older boys were away at various camps. Nobody got down the line faster than Lefty Riley. Matt Rossi is going to be a fine all-around player. Jeremiah has a fabulous right arm, but he's moving to Ohio and won't be around to help us next year.

Jamie Kondrat helped us at second whenever we needed him and pitched superbly in one effort against Pembroke. Jamie, I hope you realize you were the one bright star that Sunday on an otherwise overcast night.

And Grant Emde. You are last, but in no way the least. You are the embodiment of a coach's dream. If I could have captured your enthusiasm and doled it out to your teammates, I think we would have won every game. People, this guy has a Major League nasty look on his face when he pitches and a very live arm. Watch this guy next year.

And finally, I would like to thank my assistant coaches, Rick Kondrat and Jim Magner. We set out to have fun and teach the kids some of the finer points of baseball, and I think we achieved both. Mr. K., your humor was constantly buoyant. Mr. M., your insights and strategies proved invaluable. Together, I hope we can get that round of golf in before the Patriots break camp.

Special thanks to John Kinchla, David Leahy, Dick Stevens and Roy Fitzsimmons. They are the primary movers and shakers of the league — the organizers who get the paperwork done that enables us older kids to go out and play with the younger kids.

I should include Kevin O'Connor among this group as well. Kevin organized the umpires this year and did a magnificent job. And while I'm at it, thanks to all you umpires. You kids made a hard job look easy. Don't forget the infield fly rule!

And finally I want to thank the parents of all my players (Red Sox and All-Stars) for helping with concessions and driving.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
NORFOLK DIVISION
DOCKET NO. 89P1827GM
NOTICE OF GUARDIANSHIP OF MINOR

To ANTHONY M. VIERA of PARTS UNKNOWN and ANTHONY M. VIERA, Jr., of COHASSET and to all persons interested in the estates of ANTHONY M. VIERA, Jr., in said County, minor. A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that DORIS L. GOULD of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK be appointed Guardian of minor with custody with surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before ten o'clock in the forenoon on October 11, 1989.

WITNESS, ROBERT M. FORD, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, this twentieth day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighty nine.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 89P1830E1

Estate of FRANK J. SJOGREN late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will and codicil of said decedent be proved and allowed and that WILLIAM A. HURLEY of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK be appointed executor named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on August 30, 1989.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the twentieth day of July, one thousand nine hundred and eighty nine.

Fiscal picture not that bad

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The bad news from Beacon Hill is not quite as gloomy as town officials anticipated.

In fact, there is a possibility that if some town fees are increased, further budget cuts may become unnecessary.

State aid receipts are down $294,387 from last year and state assessments have climbed by $51,000. That has resulted in a net deficit of $354,618 in state aid for fiscal 1990, according to the cherry sheet figures released last week.

But some good news was delivered Tuesday night to town officials when Town Accountant Mary Matthews explained that other revenue sources uncovered within the town's budget could lower that deficit to $104,343.

According to Matthews, extra revenue can be found in a 1987 excess lottery account for $14,879 and $78,905 in an overestimation of the 1990 county pension costs. That would bring the net effect of the reduced state aid to $104,343 - a number that could possibly be offset by an increase in town fees such as mooring, landfill, water, or ambulance.

And in fact, she noted, some local revenue receipts are up over last year. Motor vehicle receipts are $122,000 higher this year than anticipated, due primarily to the purchase of more expensive cars, and a new system which speeds up the collection process.

At their meeting Monday night, selectmen

Alzheimer's center 'do-able' part of Curtis plan

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

A day care center for Alzheimer's patients at the former Curtis mansion on Jerusalem Road appears to be the most "do-able" idea that has been proposed, said a member of the citizens' group studying possible uses.

"It's the most 'do-able' proposal, and an extremely worthy proposal," said Joseph McElroy, co-spokesman of the Curtis Estate Action Committee which has discussed proposals ranging from affordable housing to a shelter for the homeless.

"I'm very enthusiastic about it," said McElroy. "And the community seems to be very enthusiastic about it."

That enthusiasm was evident last week at a meeting of the action committee also attended by members of other town boards and committees. The town officials voted to support the proposal.

Architect Chia-Ming Sze, who has been studying possible uses for the 53-acre estate with a $9,000 state grant, said that the mansion would require an addition to accomodate 18 to 24 patients during the day. He said it could also be used on weekends as a respite care facility.

Sze said that the other plans proposed by the town, which also included housing for the mentally retarded and the elderly, would not be feasible because the soil cannot support any more septic systems.

The other two houses on the property could be renovated and rented at market rate to help pay for operating the day care center, he said.

The assistance of South Shore Alzheimer's Support Group has been secured, he said, as well as that of Sherrill House in Boston which is affiliated with New England Deaconess Hospital and has been running a model Alzheimer's program for two years.

Sze expects to submit the finished proposal to the state attorney general's office before the Aug. 17 deadline.

Growing membership celebrates building a church 25 years ago

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Many people in town still remember what the corner of Summer and South Main streets looked like when it was home to a local school teacher and her sister.

But for the past 25 years, that land has been occupied by St. Anthony's Church, the local parish for more than 750 Catholic families in Cohasset.

On August 13, members of that parish will be celebrating the 25th anniversary of the church which now stands as a landmark for visitors traveling into Cohasset Village.

But as many residents can recall, St. Anthony's did not start out on such a grand scale. The original St. Anthony's was built as a mission church of St. Paul's in Hingham in 1876. It was a small, white, wood-framed structure on South Main Street located across the street from the present church rectory. "It was a fraction of what this church is now," Keating recalled. The parishioners were well aware of their swelling numbers and the increasing inadequacy of their church.

"It had a winding stairway to the choir. It was very narrow and steep," longtime parishioner Anna Abbruzzese stated. Keating also noted that many a choir member fell victim to the dangerous passageway into the church loft.

There was a large basement containing a stage for church and community pageants. Keating noted that was one feature that sadly could not be included in the new building.

As he recalled, members of the church's Knights of Columbus, Council No. 1676, surveyed the building needs of the parish. They decided that a larger church was indeed a requirement. The original church had been built to hold 300 families. The parish was more than double that figure by 1958.

They formed a fund-raising group called the Cohasset Columbans, and after several months,

Recycling news update

A temporary glut of newspapers has forced towns to pay $40 per ton to have newspapers removed. The Board of Health does not have money in the budget for newspaper removal at this cost. Citizens are asked to put papers in the rubbish bin when the newspaper bin is full.

Brush may be accepted soon if cooperation of Tree and Park is secured.

Glass – Please rinse out glass bottles and remove caps. The glass recycling effort has been a success and a source of revenue.

"Boutique" – Please leave usable items in the recycling shed. Clean, usable clothes are acceptable, as well as books.

The Recycling Committee reminds that once the transfer station opens traffic backups and slowdowns may occur, especially if the budget constraints require closing the station another day. At this time the days of operation are Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Both the Board of Health and Recycling Committee will be working to ensure a cost effective and smooth operating Recycling Transfer Facility. We appreciate the cooperation of the townspeople during the construction phase of the transfer station.

Four members of the Cohasset Rotary Club were honored this week with Paul Harris Fellows for their outstanding service to the organization. The recipients included: Wayne Robbins (left, front row), Arne Gjesteby (right, front row), Ronald Goodwin and Albert Livingston (left to right, back row). Participating in Monday night's ceremony were Mark Cirone, president of Cohasset Rotary (second from left, front row) and Charles Melano, Rotary district governor (third from left, front row).

Committee vacancies

There are currently four vacancies on the Cohasset Advisory Committee. This is the board that reviews and recommends annual town budgets which are then voted by town meeting.

If anyone is interested in serving on this committee, contact the selectmen's office at town hall at 383-9900, ext. 101.

Betsy Millard, a member of the Cohasset Advisory Committee for the past four years, recently resigned from that board.

In a letter to selectmen, Millard said she was resigning effective Agust 1 because of increased employment demands.

"It has been an honor to serve on the advisory committee and a challenging experience to grapple with the nearly impossible fiscal dilemma with which Cohasset and, indeed, all Massachusetts towns are faced," she stated in her letter of resignation.

Pratt angry about station changes

Sayng the town has been a victim of "robbery," an angry Burtram J. Pratt, selectmen chairman, suggested the town pursue legal action against Sanitary Engineers & Associates Inc., and Sciaba Construction Co. over work performed on the trash transfer station at the Cedar Street Landfill.

SEA, the project's engineer, initially estimated a cost of $5,500 to blast ledge at the site. Sciaba, though, recently informed the board that they have removed 650 cubic yards of ledge at $100 per yard for a total cost of $65,500.

Selectmen asked Sciaba to check their figures, hoping for a cost reduction, and Sciaba came back with a figure of $68,000.

The board already voted to pay $30,000 for the blasting. Pratt said Monday night that the town should not have to pay the balance for removing ledge that could have been detected by "any damn fool who was in there before they started construction."

"Ladies and gentlemen, I'd prefer that we go to court immediately and sue SEA and Sciaba Brothers," Pratt fumed. "I mean like tomorrow morning."

At the suggestion of Anson Whealler, chairman of the Transfer Station Building Committee, the board moved up their executive session scheduled for 8:30 p.m. to discuss strategy for possible litigation.

The board voted to delete loam and seeding and asphalt paving at the site for a combined savings of $17,100.

The board also voted to pay Sciaba $61,180 for undisputed work.

Pratt and other board members also were irate over other fees being charged the town. Referring to Sciaba's figures, Pratt said, "If you analyze some of these, it's just padding. They're charging us for 20 hours at $100 an hour just to meet with us. They charged their overhead figure twice. They even charged us for 24 hours at $95 an hour for a computer analyst. That's crazy. And they charged us two weeks additional overhead at $2000 a week. Who delayed the job for two weeks? Certainly not the town. This is a ridiculous statement for them to present to the town of Cohasset."

Referring to Sciaba's statement, Pratt said to Whealler, "Anson, I don't see why you're sitting there accepting this garbage."

"I didn't say that I accepted it," Whealler responded. "And I believe that it might be wise to consider at this time going into executive session, so that we could discuss this matter, because it potentially could lead to litigation."

The board then went into executive session for about an hour.

Taking the big plunge is illegal

Every summer swarms of teenagers, most from out-of-town, flock to Cohasset to jump from scenic Mill Bridge on Border Street.

And every summer police have to cope with the nuisance that the youths create for residents.

Police sargeant Brian Noonan said this summer is "one of the worst years I can remember. It's been terrible. We've been getting call after call."

Noonan said residents complain about the teenagers blocking traffic, using foul language, and sometimes "mooning" passing motorists.

But Noonan and Police Chief Joseph Kealey said their biggest fear is that someone may be seriously injured. The river's banks are rocky, and the tide moves in out very quickly, often attracting kayakers to the spot. Noonan said in the past a few people have been injured on the rocks, but no one has been hurt in the past few years.

Jumping off the bridge is against a town bylaw, and is punishable by a $25 fine. The prohibition against jumping is posted, but the youths often steal the sign, Noonan noted.

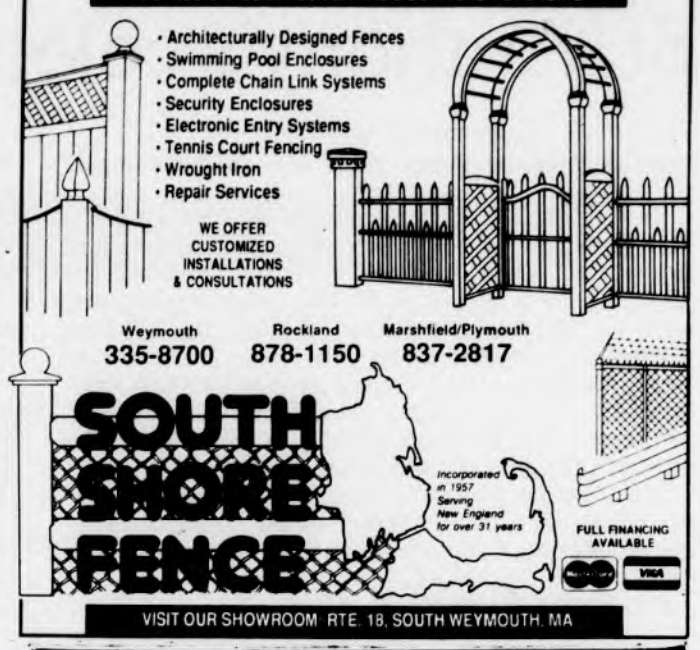
Both Noonan and Kealey said most of the teenager find about the bridge through photographs published in area newspapers.

"On a hot, humid day it's a strong temptation to want to jump off that bridge," said Kealey.

Kealey said because one cruiser is responsible for all the beach areas in town, it's impossible to keep the youths away from the bridge.

"As fast as we clear them out they just keep coming back," Kealey said. "They usually scatter when the cruiser shows up, but as soon as he's gone they're back. He'll stay there if it's real bad, to discourage the kids from returning."

Kealey said that police ticket the cars parked illegally at Government Island or on the street.



"We tag them as fast as we can. We try to hit them in the pocketbook, figuring they can't afford to pay $15 to come jump off the bridge," Kealey said.

So far this year, two teenagers were notified by summons to appear in court. Kealey said most of the youths will not defy the officers, but that a few will jump off the bridge right in front of them.

"It's against the law and it's very dangerous, but it's a problem that's not going to go away," Kealey said. "It's one of our biggest nuisances, but we just have to live with it."

St. Anthony's celebrates anniversary

they decided to begin their search for suitable property.

The Columbans approached Miss Kitty McMahon, a former Cohasset school teacher and her sister, Mrs. Genieve Hill, who owned the property at 2 Summer Street. After negotiating with a church committee consisting of Tom Anderson, Joe Kealey Sr., Francis Gunville and Roger Corcoran, the women decided to sell their land. An adjacent parcel of land was donated to St. Anthony's by Dr. Fred O'Brien, a member of the church's Knights of Columbus.

The local church now owned the property from the corner of Summer Street to the brook dividing the McMahon property and that of Dr. Edward Schott.

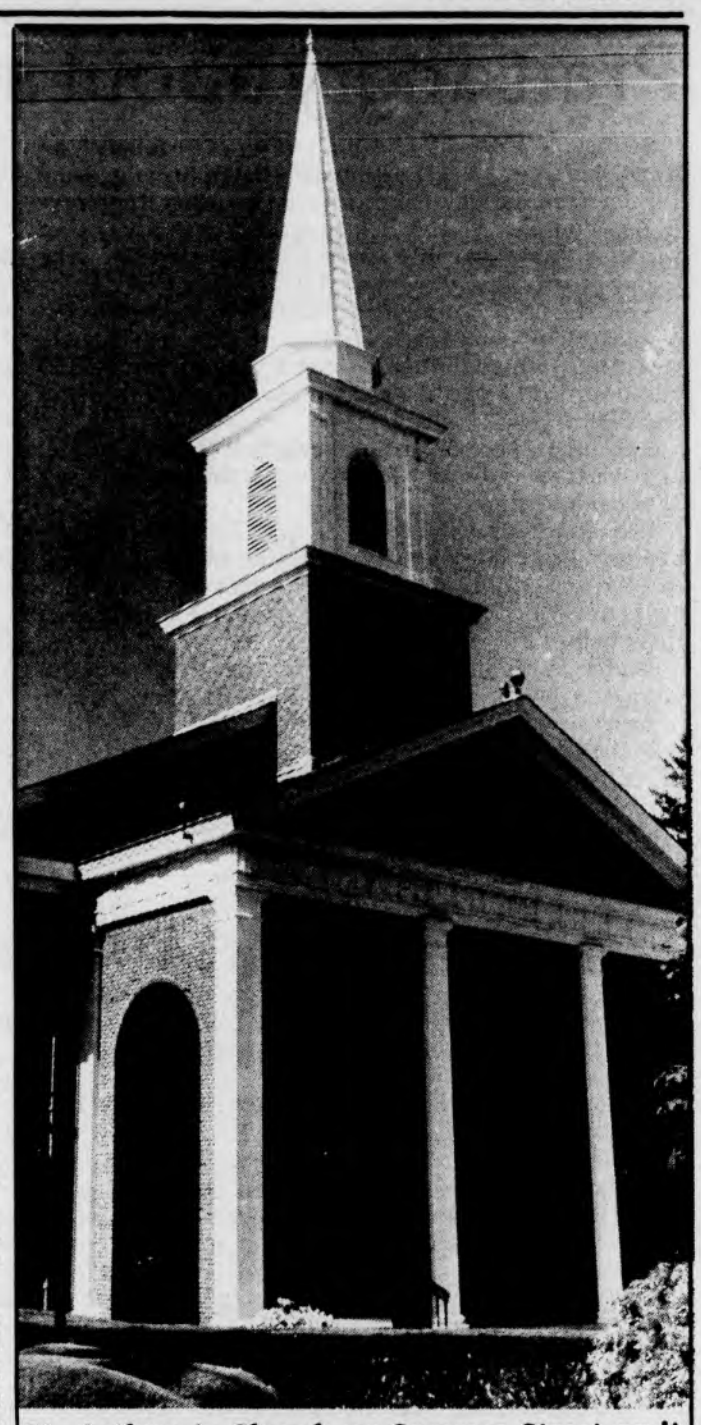
Father Joseph Brennan, pastor of St. Anthony's at that time, traveled through the area surveying different churches and comparing architectural styles. His favorite, according to Keating, was located in a New Hampshire town. It was a Congregational Church, and after touring the entire structure, Fr. Brennan told the Columbans he had found the perfect church for his parish.

Chester Browne, a member of St. Anthony's and a local architect, was selected by Fr. Brennan to complete the drawings. Browne will serve as a co-chairman of the 25th anniversary celebration.

In October, 1964, the church was completed, and the cornerstone was laid by Cardinal Richard Cushing. The first Mass was celebrated by Fr. Brennan on October 17, 1964.

According to the church records uncovered by Fr. John Keohane, the first wedding held in the new church was for Arthur and Nancy Leah Pompeo on October 19, 1964. The first Baptism was for Patrick Joseph Broderick, which Fr. Brennan performed on October 18, 1964.

The first anniversary event will be held Sunday, August 13. Cardinal Bernard Law will make his first visit to St. Anthony's when he celebrates the 9:30 a.m. Mass. There will be a Continental breakfast reception following Mass on the rectory grounds, 129 South Main Street. Clergy and parishioners from all of Cohasset's churches have been invited to the celebration.



One of St. Anthony's longtime parishioners, Mary Fleming, will serve as co-hostess for the anniversary.

Fr. Keohane, who figures he was probably in the Navy when St. Anthony's was constructed 25 years ago, will be an integral part of the anniversary celebration. Although he was not a part of the church-building process in Cohasset, he has seen the parish grow and the programs expand.

St. Anthony's, he noted, is now an active participant with the other Cohasset churches, in the annual Christmas Village Fair. The CCD program is active in its own Christmas gift-giving program, and there are several parishioners who volunteer their services to the Pine Street Inn and Rosie's Place in Boston. Several church members also coordinate the church's contributions to the MaryMartha Learning Center in Hingham.

If there is one thing St. Anthony's is still lacking more than 100 years after it became a parish, it is a church center. "It would be a big undertaking," Fr. Keohane admitted, "but that's what I'd like to see for this parish. Every other church in Cohasset has one, and we really need a center, too."

The anniversary celebration will continue this fall when St. Anthony's will host a dinner-dance in October.

Senior Vice President David T. Sargent on Trust Services.

"SOME BANKS CAN REALLY CRUNCH NUMBERS. UNFORTUNATELY, THEY OFTEN TAKE THE SAME APPROACH WITH PEOPLE."

"Many banks are going through merger mania. It's good for profits. And generally bad for customers—especially in high-service areas such as trust.

"Rockland Trust is different. We've remained independent. Our trust department is growing. Yet we treat every customer as if they are our only customer.

"Our financial planners will tailor a retirement program just for you. They manage investments,

IRA/Keogh plans, employee benefit plans and, of course, trust, tax and estate services.

'RAD'ical group pursues reading in summer

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner Staff

The last thing most youngsters want to do during the summer is crack open a book.

But that's not the case with members of the RADS.

The group of sixth-going-on-seventh graders meets Mondays, 7 to 8 p.m. at the Paul Pratt Library to discuss books which have been read during the previous week.

And they have a lot of fun doing it.

"This has just sort of developed and grown," said Marjorie Murphy, a librarian at the Deer Hill School who developed the idea for the summer discussion group.

"Sometimes when children get to the sixth or seventh grade, they start to fade away from reading," said Murphy.

"I thought if there was a reading and discussion program, they would enjoy coming and talking about books.

"They are the ones suggesting a book; they are not given a list to read. They have a tendency to back away from that.

"So, we said let's come together. If you are interested, I will be there Monday nights. We'll sit down and talk about books."

The third week of summer vacation, two children showed up. Now there are seven, she said.

"Seven kids is excellent," said Murphy. "We've also had some younger kids ask if they could do it, too. We can always do that on a different night."

Members of the RADS are Ann Dane, Kathy Smith, Jason Crossman, Tom Greco, Nicole Vasseur, Kendra Gray and Liz Corcoran.

Suzanne Terry and Kathleen Hickey are children's librarians at the Paul Pratt Library who also particpate in the program.

"The children were all good readers to begin with," said Terry. "It's interesting to listen to what they all have to say. The discussions are pretty lively.

"They are very comfortable with Marge. She has a very good way of drawing them out. She is very enthusiastic."

The setting is informal, according to Terry.

(Staff photo/Dave Sullivan)

During the first week, the group chose Christopher Pike's books to be read and discussed the next week.

Ann Dane had read his books before and found them suspenseful and thrilling, according to Terry.

"The group members left eagerly to begin reading," she said. "At the second meeting, they had much to tell Ann about Christopher Pike's books.

"They told her that they did enjoy them, that they grabbed your attention immediately. They were thrilling and suspenseful, but they also felt that the author took adult themes and tried to put them into teenage situations.

"Tom Greco also felt that the author went into overkill by the end of the book."

Robert Cormier and Lois Duncan were selected as the next authors.

"We decided that Robert Cormier was a brilliant, detailed descriptive writer," said Terry. "His plots have the tendency to be complex. His adults are usually irresponsible, despicable characters. The young adults can be conniving and revengeful.

Reading group continues through the summer

"Our other group, who read Lois Duncan, was still enthralled by her writing. They felt she can hold you in suspence yet also make it seem so realistic."

Murphy said that some weeks, RADS have read not just one book, but four books.

"It's been fun," she said. "I've enjoyed it tremendously. I'd love to see it develop a little more. You just want to keep them reading. It's so important.

Murphy said she loves the name of the group.

"We just said, 'what are we going to do? Read and discuss. Let's make up a name for ourselves. Mrs. Hickey said the RADS."

Murphy added that it is not too late for others to join the group.

"It really turns out to be a discussion group," she said. "It's not a time for socializing. They really discuss their books.

"Libraries are a very creative place," noted Murphy. "They are not as confining as a classroom. A library is a place where you can do all sorts of wonderful things and be very creative.

"I look at a library as a place where children can feel very secure, and can be themselves.

"That's very important for a child to feel secure. And they can have a ball while they are being secure."

Recreation program schedule

The Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a band concert on Cohasset Common, Tuesday, August 15, 7:30 p.m.

The public is cordially invited to hear the 30-piece South Shore Concert Band perform, under the direction of Richard P. Whitmarsh.

Concerts are free of charge and have been made possible this year from a grant from the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc. and the American Federation of Musicians.

Please bring either a blanket or lawn chair to sit on, and insect repellent if necessary.

SOCCER CAMP

The Cohasset Recreation Department's Summer Soccer Camp will begin Monday, August 14, at 1 p.m. at the Deer Hill School field. If you have not yet registered, call the recreation department office at 383-6791. The cost for the week long camp is $80 for the first child and $75 for the second and $70 for all subsequent children in a family. The program is open to boys and girls ages 7 through 18 years.

Housing is needed in Cohasset for two of the soccer camp Coaches who are traveling from Great Britain the week of August 13. Please contact Jack Worley at 383-6791 if you can help out with housing.

SUMMER PLAYGROUND PROGRAM

The Cohasset Recreation Department's Summer playground program will end Friday, August 18 with a cookout at Barnes Little League Field, starting at 10 a.m. All participants may attend but pre-registration with Ted at the playground is required.

YOUTH TENNIS LESSONS

Recreation youth tennis lessons end Friday, August 18 after seven weeks of instruction. Please check with Derek or Frank at the courts about entry into the N.E.L.T.A. Sponsored Beginner's Tournament.

❑ Get everyone together, friends, family, your pet dog, and get prepared for the first annual Juvenile Diabetes Foundation, Bay State Chapter WALK, which is scheduled for October 29, 1989 at the D.W. Fields Park in Brockton. Registration will begin at 11 a.m. and the WALK will conclude at 5 p.m. This is daylight savings time so remember to set your clocks! No matter what time you get there, just start walking. Our goal is to reach $30,000. Lets go for it! At least 350 walkers and sponsers are needed; it isn't too early to start rounding them up. It's easily within reach, but they want to start the tradition with a bang!! There will be entertainment, food, and guest speakers. It will be a fun day for all. If you can't walk, come and man a checkpoint or just come join the festivities. If you would like to serve on the WALK committee or are able to help in any way, please call your Cohasset representative, Karen Corcoran at 383-6767 or the chapter office at 890-6066. Meetings are being held at Thayer Academy at 7:30 p.m. Call to find out when the next one is being held. Don't forget, mark October 29 on your calendars, and do your part in supporting the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation.

Special to the Mariner

This week the Chamber of Commerce would like to use this space to let all of you know what is coming up in the near future. All of the events listed here are open to the public, free of charge, and we invite all of you to join us for these programs.

September 20 at 6:45 p.m. at Hugo's Restaurant, a panel discussion featuring Cohasset School Superintendent Steve Hart and School Committee members Chris Ford and Barbara Bliss. The topic for the evening will be "Cohasset Schools — the next five years."

We are asking that all questions for the panel be submitted by August 15, and we urge all those who have concerns or questions about our schools to send us your questions, so that they may be answered publicly on that night. Please note, this is a change of date from that first announced.

Drop your questions off at Goodale Insurance Agency or Cards and Shards in Cohasset Village, or at Kimball's Motel in the Harbor. Or, if you choose, send it to the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, P.O. Box 336, Cohasset, Ma. 02025. You may sign your questions or submit them anonymously, as you see fit. Either way, no names will be used on Sept. 20, and no names will be submitted to the panel beforehand with the questions.

So don't miss this opportunity to get the answers from the "Horse's Mouth." Send us your questions, and join us at Hugo's on Sept. 20th to get the answers.

October 21 — The annual Cohasset Chamber of Commerce Auction. This is our only fund raiser of the year, our chance to raise money for scholarships, the Junior Class Tea at Graduation, the July "Picnic on the Common" and Band Concert, the Savings Bonds for the third grade winners of the "Bill of Rights Poster Contest," and all of our other yearly donations and expenses. Join us for a Franks and Beans dinner from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., and for the auction at 7:45 p.m. You may preview the items up for bid during the dinner hour, and we assure you that there will be something for everyone to bid on. The food is great, the company delightful, and the price unbeatable.

Also scheduled for this year, the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will be compiling a directory of member businesses, by category, which should be available to the public in early 1990. This will be an easy reference guide for everyone when you need to know where to go, in Cohasset, to find what you need or want. Until this directory becomes available, you can still call the Chamber of Commerce at 383-1010 if you have any questions regarding our businesses here in Town.

around town

❑ Cohasset has a real thoroughbred in our midst, one that was born and raised here to boot!! The horse is owned by Lee and Dotty Cisneros, and recently won the two year old filly driving pleasure class contest. This took place at the biggest and oldest Morgan Horse competition The Cisneros' live at 312 King Street.

❑ Our town will surely miss Building Inspector Don Robbins, as he leaves his post for the same one in Hingham. He is to be commended for doing a fine job while he was here, and Hingham's gain is our loss!! By the way, he is to be congratulated for his being made chief petty officer in the Navy Reserves. Good luck to a fine man.

❑ Hope all of you saw our town on Chronicle last week; it was grand to see the town looking so pretty. Also encouraging to hear Mr. Pratt say that the duck pond would be ready by Labor Day. A lot of people were glad that they did't get into the override issues, and what that will do to this wonderful town. . .the students and parents weren't glad though!!

❑ A standing ovation goes to the following young men, all of whom were members of the All-Star team. If you could see them out there on those hot days practicing so diligently, you would clap even louder. Andy Fitzsimmons, Grant Emde, Kevin McKenna, Nick Welz, Chris McKenna, Jim Magnew, Ryan Freeman, Brendan Kinchla, Tom Greco, Kennie Leahy, Ben Redfield, Jamey Kondrat, Mike Riley, Eric Henry, Greg Stevens, Brian Riley, Matt Higgins, Pat Reynolds, Matt Higgins, Jeremiah Hawke, and Matt Rossi. Of course we salute all of the coaches, without them there would be no program.

❑ Speaking of teams, our swim team has been very impressive this summer (again) Good Work!!!!

❑ Hats off to Ted Abbadessa, who caught a 48-pound bass recently! That's a large fish!

❑ While most of you were lazing at the beach last week, Dean Volungis was attending a program at the Science Museum in Boston. The name of the program was Lego Logo Amusement Park. The "campers" has to design an amusement park ride out of Legos, figure out how to make it work, build it, and then program the computer to make the ride move. Dean chose to design a merry-go-round that goes around while the horses go up and down. It also has flashing lights and plays music.

If any of you are visiting the Science Museum during the next few weeks, you can see Dean's merry-go-round in the window of the computer place on the second floor.

A sound alternative

Taxpayers in this town can breathe a little bit easier this fiscal year, thanks to some fancy mathematical footwork by our town accountant.

It appeared that Cohasset would lose a total of $345,618 because of the combined loss of state aid and the increase in our state assessments. But Town Accountant Mary Matthews found some possible sources of local revenue for Cohasset that will help diminish that deficit. The most significant factor was a $78,000 overestimation of our county pension costs.

Our total budget deficit now stands at $104,343. Although it would be great not to have a deficit at all, that number is a lot less than many neighboring towns are looking at.

Right now, town officials are trying to determine who they can make up that deficit without cutting further into a depleted town budget. As we can all remember so well, our town department budgets have already been cut to the bone. Any further reductions will certainly mean loss of personnel and a decrease in town services. If town officials can find an alternative solution, we would all welcome it.

Selectmen began this quest Monday night when they discussed the possibility of raising fees for certain town services. They quickly surmised that an increase in the harbor mooring fees could net about $25,000 more in revenue each year. As many town officials have said before, the harbor is a luxury few can afford to use. It should not be run as a deficit business for those relatively few residents and non-residents who use it. Raising the mooring fees will not bring a profit to the operation of the harbor, it will simply mean it is running more efficiently.

Harbor committee members have notified selectmen they are willing to raise the fees, and it could be implemented quickly to generate immediate revenue for the town.

We endorse a proposal to raise fees for the town's landfill. Most towns require a separate fee for the landfill and the beach. Cohasset should consider this alternative. The time for cost-cutting measures to accommodate the taxpayer is over. We must all share the burden of placing this town on a more cost-effective course. The more revenue we can pull in, the less we must rely on the generosity (or lack of) of the state.

Why not increase the landfill sticker to $30 per vehicle? This is not an outrageous amount, as most towns will testify. It is still a lot cheaper than hiring a private disposal firm. It's a once-a-year cost, but it could bring in about $65,000 in revenue each year.

Why not issue separate beach stickers and raise that fee? It's a luxury tax for residents who want to use our resources. Increase that fee and the town has another ample source of revenue to count on each year.

We congratulate selectmen for undertaking the unpleasant but necessary task of reviewing service fees. No one wants to pay for services that once were supplied for free. But times have changed and we can afford that luxury no more. We can think of no better way for the town to raise revenue receipts in a more equitable manner.

Paying for a dump sticker once a year is certainly a better alternative than losing a classroom teacher, a police officer, a firefighter or an entire town department.

We applaud the initiative of selectmen and their executive secretary who has worked hard to calculate the amount of revenue that can be raised through these fee hikes. It's a solution Cohasset should consider, and certainly other towns will follow our lead.

Experiences of AFS students

Letters

To the Editor:

First, Cohasset extends a warm welcome to Carol Biaggi who has just arrived from Sierre Switzerland. For the next ten months Carol will be living with her host family — Richard, Gail, Jim and Michele Rourke. We hope that you all will take the time to get to know this delightful young lady.

Kristin Martin and Michele Rourke who are spending their summers in Malaysia and Denmark respectfully, share the following news with family and friends in Cohasset. We are all anxious to hear the unedited version of their adventures upon their return around August 20.

Hvordan har du det? Danish for, how do you do? Hello to all! I live on the countryside of Denmark on the small island of Fyn. That is the island in the middle. It is very beautiful where I live. It's funny because there are many cows on the back field behind the house I live in and sometimes late at night I can hear the cows. Recently my host family took me to see Copenhagen. I found Copenhagen very exciting and very busy with tourists. I was able to see the little mermaid, the Queens Castle, many shops, a jazz festival and tivoli. It was a fun and exciting time for me. I must add that the summer weather here is not warm but despite the cooler weather I am having a successful experience. I miss you all!

Yours
Michele

My first day in Kuala Lumper, the capital, was super. We took a walking tour of the city and then we had our first Bahasa Malaysia language lesson. Today we started the day with soft bread for breakfast (yesterday was hard bread and a raw egg), then we went to a Malaysian all girl's school for a tour. Everyone was so nice. Two girls showed me around the school and if I waved to the students in their classrooms they all giggled and waved back because they so rarely see Americans. They treated us to coffee and cakes and when we left they gave us their annual book and a pin. The two girls who took me around even promised to write me in Pinang. This evening after dinner monkeys came to our dorm! There were millions of them and I couldn't stop taking pictures.

I love Malaysia. The countryside is just beautiful, with green mountains, palm trees and waterfalls. My family is great. Everyone in the family speaks English even my one year old sister, Jesse. I want to learn the language, though, so I go to the market almost every afternoon with my mom. Last night we had chicken feet for dinner, a real Chinese treat. I didn't find them that tasty. My mother is a wonderful cook. We have rice daily. We pile it on our plate and then put vegetables, meat and fruit on top. They do not drink water or milk with meals, which was hard for me to get used to, because I am always thirsty while I eat.

I do not go to a convent school. I attend the Bukit Mertajam High School where my father teaches. I have him for geography. All of the girls are really friendly and I've already made a lot of great friends. One girl even invited me to her house for a party after knowing me only a matter of minutes. Four of my Malay friends had me over for a holiday last Thursday. We ate all day! Every house is neat and very different. One friend's house is even on stilts! All of the kids speak English because it is a required language over here. At first everyone stared at me, but I am getting used to that! Yesterday I had to give a speech in front of the whole school. There are 3,000 students. I was so nervous!

It is so very hot here my family bathes three times a day. Here's how you shower-you dump water over yourself from a tub of water.

The school Buddhist Club was organizing a field trip to some Buddhist temples, so I took the opportunity so I could meet more kids, and see some places my family probably wouldn't take me. The temples were beautiful and I took lots of pictures. Two of the younger boys took me around the temples and helped me bargain for souvenirs. One of the boys even bought me a present. They were so sweet.

Navanita, my best friend at school, took me to her friend's house for lunch. She is Indian (so is her friend, Rama). We went to his house so I could see an Indian wedding. His older brother was married last year, and they had the wedding on video tape. The ceremony was really beautiful. His family was so very hospitable. His mother cooked a wonderful spicy Indian lunch and afterward I got dressed in a sari and they took pictures of me. Later Rama (my host) gave me these lovely brass candle holders (an Indian relic) as a remembrance. He went all the way to Pinang to get them for me.

As you can see I have kept myself very busy. While my sisters have Gymnastics and other commitments, I do things with my other friends. It works well. Six of my Malay friends are taking me to the Botanical Gardens on Pinang Island on Sunday. The gardens have waterfalls and wild monkeys. I'm having the best time!

I went to Longaw — one of the most beautiful island with fabulous beaches — for my midway orientation. For two days I stayed with a Malaysian family in Perlis, a state six miles from Thailand, to experience village life. It was fascinating. There were chickens, cows, goats and boa constrictors living right outside my door. I got very attached to the family. The mother spoke no English, but guess what, I understood her when she spoke Malay to me!

Please watch the Mariner for news of upcoming dates and events as AFS gets underway in the fall. Jack Buckley and Scott Newkirk will be assuming the leadership of the high school AFS club along with Jodi Wood when school opens. We will miss George Fortin's guidance which has been the cornerstone of the club for so many years. George has stepped aside to devote more time to educational issues facing Cohasset teachers today.

We are hopeful that AFS can offer a forum for a better understanding of international relations and the very complex geopolitical issues which face our world today. If you have ideas or comments, we welcome your input.

Assessors explain property valuation

To the Editor:

The Board of Assessors would like to clarify the misconception that a Town's spending limits are related to valuations.

Assessment of property, whether at 50% or at 100% of Full and Fair Cash Value has absolutely no bearing on the spending limitations of the Town. Proposition 2 1/2 clearly states that the spending limit from taxation can be no more than 2 and 1/2 percent greater than the previous years spending limit from taxation with the exception of new growth. So that whether all properties in Cohasset are valued at 50% or at 100% of Full and Fair Cash Value has no bearing on our spending limits. It reflects only on the Tax Rate.

For instance, let us assume a Town's valuation was at 50% of Full and Fair Cash Value and the total Town Valuation was $550,000,000.00 and the tax rate was $18.60. If the same Town's valuation was at 100% of Full and Fair Cash Value the total Town valuation would be $1,100,000,000.00 and therefore, the tax rate would be $9.30.

And further, whether the assessment is at 50% or 100% would not substantially change the amount of taxes paid on an individual home. For example, a home valued at $200,000.00 at 50% assessment with a Tax Rate of $18.60 would pay $1860.00 in Real Estate Taxes. ($200,000.00 x 50% x $18.60 = $1860.00). The same home valued at $200,000.00 but assessed at 100% with a Tax Rate of $9.30 would pay the same $1860.00 in Real Estate Taxes ($200,000.00 x 1 x $9.30 = $1860.00). Exactly the same amount of taxes would be generated from this home, irregardless of whether the valuation was at 50% or 100% of Full and Fair Cash Value.

What does impact our spending limits yearly is the addition of New Growth. And New Growth is defined in two categories. 1) The addition of new properties (residential, commercial and industrial), subdivisions of properties and properties never before appearing on the tax rolls. For instance Wheelwright Farms (residential) and the Stop and Shop (commercial). 2) Properties which have added more than 50% valuation from the prior years assessment from renovations, additions or reconstruction.

Needless to say, here in Cohasset, buildable lots are at a premium and therefore the future for increased spending limits from New Growth appears bleak. As a matter of fact, in a report written by the Department of Revenue, Division of Local Services in February 1989, entitled "Revenue and Expenditure Forecast" and presented to the Board of Selectmen, the prediction for New Growth will fall from an estimated $206,000.00 in additional revenue in FY90 to $93,000.00 in FY94.

Keeping in mind, the only increase in spending above 2 and 1/2 percent of the prior years spending limit is New Growth and that it is forecast to decline drastically, it appears any increase in future Town spending limits will not be enough to keep pace with departmental cost increases.

The Fishing Line

By Bill Bowers

Catch of the week

Two local anglers have won prizes for catching huge Mako sharks in the prestigious Boston Big Game Fishing Club Monster Shark Tournament, held Aug. 4 and 5 at Oak Bluffs on Martha's Vineyard.

John Hoss of Scituate, fishing aboard his boat Equis, took the largest Mako of the tournament, a true monster of 317 pounds.

The captain was Joe Donnelly, also of Scituate.

Jack Drysdale of Plymouth weighed in another Mako shark of 130 pounds that came aboard his boat Pilgrims' Progress, reported Bill Smith at Adams Tackle in Pembroke.

Drysdale took the toothy critter on a mackerel fillet with rubber skirt while drift chumming about 30 miles off the island.

Joe Composto of Marshfield and Bob Fisher of Fall River caught an 893-pound bluefin tuna while trolling at Stellwagen Bank.

Composto is part owner of J &B's Bait and Tackle in Green Harbor.

And Capt. Tom DePersia of Marshfield, skipper of the charter boat Big Fish II, caught another bluefin of 750 pounds while chumming, also at Stellwagen.

Kenny Bartley, 12, of Marshfield won a $20 Adams Tackle gift certificate for weighing in the biggest largemouth bass of the week, a beauty of 4 pounds, 2 ounces.

The fish came from a Marshfield pond and was released alive after weigh-in.

And Ron Adler of Pembroke won the weekly $20 gift certificate for the 15-pound bluefish he caught at Hull Gut.

Also at the Gut, Mark Kelly of Hingham caught a 34-pound, 12-ounce striped bass on a live eel.

Mike Giampaolo of Duxbury weighed in another bass of 44 pounds, 10 ounces.

Ted Abbadessa of Cohasset is having a terrific fishing season, having caught two trophy bass in one week, reported Harry Trask at Trask Tackle in Scituate.

Abbadessa took a 48-pound, 2-1/2-ounce striper at World's End in Hingham July 29. He nearly matched that catch Aug. 5, with a 48-pound, 1-ounce fish that hit a live pogy (menhaden) near XYZ Street in Hull.

Plenty of anglers are weighing in bluefish for the Trask Bigfish Bluefish Tournament, which runs through Labor Day.

Donna Malone of Cohasset caught a blue of 15 pounds, 2 ounces from a boat off Hull.

Ben Robbins of Scituate had another of 14 pounds, 7 ounces. John Arrico of Cohasset caught one of 13 pounds even at Hoghead Rock off Hull.

Bob Stravinsky of Norwell took an 11-pound, 13-ounce blue at Minot's Ledge.

Steve License of Hingham had one of 11 pounds, 8 ounces.

There are plenty of school-size striped bass from 20 to 30 inches long in the North River, according to Jerry Duffy at Mary's Boat Livery in Marshfield.

The young bass have been eatting seaworms and small live eels. The Union Street bridge area is a good spot to try, as is the bend just upstream of King's Landing Marina.

Don't forget, all bass smaller than 36 inches long must be released alive.

Flounder fishing near Damons Point and off the river mouth has been uncharacteristically slow of late, but look for that to change at any time.

Bottom bouncers have often had good results at Damons Point fishing seaworms of small squid strips on the incoming tide.

There will be a free fishing clinic from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 19 at Charge Pond in Plymouth's Myles Standish State Forest.

Fishing license requirements will be waived for the day. Expert instruction will be available on knot-tying, casting and filleting from members of the Urban Anglers Club.

For more information call George Wilson or John Dyer at (508) 866-2526

Have any fishing news to report? Contact Bill Bowers at Mariner Newspapers, P.O. Box 682, Marshfield, Mass. 02050. Telephone (617) 837-3500.

You won't catch a thing unless you have a line in the water. Good Luck.

Field trip to museum

The Paul Pratt Library will sponsor a field trip to the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston for participants in this summer's reading program, "Asian Adventure."

Students will be given a special tour of the museum's outstanding Asian collection, followed by a celebration in the courtyard garden.

The date of the trip is Friday, August 18. We will meet the bus at the Cohasset Common, in front of the Town Hall. The bus will leave at 9 a.m., and will return to the same spot at about 1 p.m. Children are asked to bring a bag lunch; dessert will be provided.

Children who plan to go on the trip are aked to please register at the library before August 15, by signing up at the library or calling the Children's Room at 383-1348.

Teen dance Aug. 12

The Cohasset Community Center will be sponsoring a Teen Dance for kids in grades 7 through 12 on Saturday, August 12 from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m.

A live deejay and light show will be featured. Admission is $5 at the door.

For further information call Cohasset Community Center at 383-0088.

Dance classes for kids

The Cohasset Community Center is now accepting registrations for Duxbury Dance Shoppe classes for children ages 3-12.

The following classes are available:

Creative Movement: for children ages 3-4, Monday 1:15 to 2 p.m., Tuesday 11:30 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. and Tuesday 12:15 to 1 p.m. All classes are $15 per month.

Pre-School Ballet and Tap: for girls ages 4 1/2 to 5, Tuesday 10:30 to 11:30 p.m. $20 per month.

Ballet and Tap: for girls ages 6 to 10, Monday 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. for new students, and Monday 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. for experienced students. All classes are $20 per month.

Tap and Jazz: for girls ages 8-12 or third year dance students, Monday 5:30 to 6:30 p.m., $20 per month.

The philosophy of the Duxbury Dance Shoppe is enjoyment through dance: children gain confidence and a sense of pride in their work regardless of their level of expertise. A gala performance is scheduled in June where kids can proudly display a year's worth of accomplishment. A costume fee will be charged to those students who wish to participate.

All classes begin September 11. Students must be members of the Community Center to register: an individual membership costs $10 and a family membership costs $20.

To register or for further information call the Cohasset Community Center at 383-0088.

State park free programs

The Wompatuck State Park's Summer Interpretive Program offers a fun way to learn about nature and wildlife, and is absolutely free.

Everyone is invited to participate in these 1 1/2 to 2- hour long "classes" which are lead by Scituate teacher Jerry Flaherty.

This week's schedule is as follows:

*August 4: Bike tour; "Wilds of Wompatuck", Visit some little used corners of the park-1 p.m. Talk-walk; "Birds of Prey", learn about the secret life of hawks and owls, call for time.

*August 5: "Shorebirds", Travel to a local migration staging area to watch the spectacle of migration, 12 p.m.

*August 6: "Shorebirds", 12,p.m.

*August 9: Bike tour; "Wildlife Foray"- See how lucky you can be as you search for fox, opossum, raccoons, hawks, and owls, 5 p.m. Astronomy, 8 p.m.

All programs begin at the Visitors' Center. Walking shoes and appropriate outdoor clothing is suggested.

Wompatuck Sate Park is located off Route 228 in Hingham.

For directions and schedule information, call Jerry Flaherty at 749-7160.

Nursery school open house

The Spring Tree Nursery School is having an open house on Saturday, August 12 from 10 a.m. to noon.

This is an opportunity for all interested people to see this new facility and meet Julie Hassan, the owner, and the teachers.

The school will be opening September 11 and still has openings for two, three and five days a week for three and four year-olds. The school is featuring a four-hour day from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Children must be 2 years, 9 months old by September.

The school is located at 497 Beechwood Street in Cohasset. Call 383-1354 if you have any questions.

Minot's Light relighting

The United States Coast Guard has announced that Minot's Ledge Lighthouse, the beacon of which has been darkened for two years by a major renovation project, will be relighted Sunday, August 20.

Minot's famous 1-4-3 signal will resume with appropriate ceremony to be held that afternoon at Cohasset's Government Island, site of the light's former Shore Station facility.

The schedule of events being planned for the Government Island relighting ceremony is as follows: 1 p.m. — Presenting the Colors, by the U.S. Coast Guard Color Guard, to be followed by speakers including Burtram J. Pratt, Chairman of Cohasset Board of Selectmen; Admiral Rybecki of the Coast Guard's 1st District; Representative Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset, Senator William Golden, and Cohasset's long-time resident Herbert Jason, whose association with Minot's Light has covered many years. 2 p.m. — A rowing contest, followed by a close-order drill by units of the Sea Scouts, a demonstration of breeches buoy rescue operations and helicopter sea rescue, and water safety demonstration. 2:30 p.m. — The lighting of the lighthouse lantern, to be signalled by the firing of Very Flares ashore and at the lighthouse. 3 p.m. — A Blessing of the Fleet.

Among those invited to the event are Senators Edward Kennedy and John Kerry, U.S. Coast Guard Consulting Engineer for the Minot's project Joe Tully, and Eric Peter, owner of Gayle Electric Co. of Whippenny, N.J., prime contractors for the project.

All Cohasset town employees are invited, and the ceremony is open to the general public.

Alzheimer's center is 'do-able' part of plan . . .

He also said that some 40 acres of unbuildable land could be sold for conservation land.

Town officials agreed to work toward a compromise with trustees of the estate and to present a united front when a hearing is held in early fall at Plymouth County Probate Court.

The trustees have petitioned the court to break the will of George E. Curtis who died in 1931. His will stipulated that a home be established for the "needy, indigent and feeble."

Trustees James DeGiacomo and Evan Crosby want to sell the estate and add the proceeds to the property's over $2 million in liquid assets and distribute the income to charities.

For more than a year, the town has been trying to block the trustees' plans by developing a plan more in line with Curtis' will.

According to McElroy, the state attorney general emphasized a year ago that the provision of the will regarding "needy, indigent and feeble" had been strictly adhered to.

McElroy said that according to dictionaries from Curtis' time, feeble is defined as "mentally, morally or physically weak."

"We didn't realize they would put such emphasis on the strict definition in the will," said McElroy. "Alzheimers falls within that definition."

A second major consideration was that state funding has deteriorated, he said.

"We had to look at alternatives not totally dependent on state funds," said McElroy.

Money for the center would be based on a combination of funding sources, he said.

The people who could afford to pay, would," he said. "There would be provisions for those who couldn't pay.

South Shore Alzheimer's Support Group is very interested in the proposal, said McElroy.

"We're not certain of the role of Deaconess. They have expressed an interest. Sherrill House would be the lead operating entity," he said.

McElroy said he wasn't sure of the physical requirements for the day care center.

"The patients would be at a stage where they don't require intensive care," he said. "They would be living at home with their families. It is an interim stage."

But he did say that the mansion would require "fairly extensive repairs."

"Work would be needed on the septic system and water service as well as renovation of the home and landscaping," he said.

Housing authority chairman John Muncey said that the full board voted to endorse plans for the day care center.

"I think it's a good idea, a tremendous idea," said Muncey. "The need is being recognized, and they are trying to do something about it."

Muncey noted that a Cohasset man afflicted with Alzheimer's had to go to Bedford, Mass., for care.

"There is no other place around here," he said. "This would be ideal, once it is cleaned up. It has a circular driveway for pick-up and discharge. It should work out."

Muncey said that a proposal for affordable housing at the estate had two strikes against it.

They did some percolation tests and the results weren't good," said Muncey. "And the money situation with the state has gotten worse."

He said that the housing authority didn't apply to the state for money for affordable housing at the Curtis Estate.

"When you make application," he said, "you have to have a site. We don't have title to the Curtis Estate."

He noted that the town has received $1.4 million in funding for 12 units of affordable housing on Route 3A, and about $700,000 for housing for the retarded on Elm St.

Muncey said he isn't disappointed that affordable housing is not being pursued at the Curtis Estate.

"It doesn't bother us," he said. "We are open to anything as long as it is used properly. Whatever they say, is fine with us."

The Rev. Gary Ritts, minister of Second Parish Church and a former member of the Curtis Estate Action Committee, said he thinks the day care center is a good idea.

Now a member of the Housing Partnership, he said that committee has not dealt with the Curtis Estate.

"We deal basically with affordable housing," he said.

McElroy said that town moderator William Weeks, also a member of the South Shore Alzheimer's Support Group, and Sze will talk with trustee DeGiacomo next week about the proposal.

"I'm not sure what the reaction of the trustees will be," he said. "We will all be interested to see whether a compromise is reached. It's a very good proposal.

"It would be a tremendous asset to Cohasset and beyond, the first one on the South Shore as far as I know.

Watercolor exhibit at the art center

"Madiera, My Dear" is a collection of watercolor images brought back from the island of Madiera by a group of artists and students led by Virginia Avery.

The exhibit will be in the Dillon Gallery at the South Shore Art Center through August 18.

Each year, the South Shore Art Center offers an opportunity to combine the pleasures of travel and art during the month of February. This year, the group chose the island of Madiera off Portugal. The focus of the trip was on capturing the light, color and life on the tropical island where Winston Churchill spent his vacations with brush in hand.

Daily guidance from artist Virginia Avery helped to produce a series of vibrant watercolors. Much of the work is for sale and may be viewed Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., and Sunday from 1 to 4 p.m.

For more information, call the South Shore Art Center at 383-9548.

Fiscal picture not as bleak as expected

estimated that increasing mooring fees could bring in an additional $25,000 each year. Tuesday night, the discussion centered on whether the board of health would vote to raise landfill fees. Doyon suggested that because the water department still owes the town $350,000, an increase in water fees would also be justified at this time.

"Raising fees may be the solution to the budget crisis other than losing personnel which would greatly reduce the efficiency of this town," school committee chairman Barbara Bliss commented.

But advisory committee chairman Jane Goedecke noted that even if some jobs are salvaged this year, they will very likely fall victim to similar budget problems next year.

"While we are agonizing over losing jobs this year, we must remember they'll be gone next year," she stated.

Complicating the budget-setting problem is the need to send out tax bills in order to pay this fiscal year's bills. At this point, according to assessor chairman James Lagroterria, the town anticipates sending out estimated bills once they receive approval from the state. But there would be a major disadvantage to sending out estimated bills this fall, he explained. Because it is a revaluation year, residents would receive the combined blow of their property revaluation plus the effect of the fiscal 1990 override vote in their spring bill. Lagroterria predicted his office would be flooded with calls for abatements with people unprepared to pay the huge difference between their estimated bill this fall and the actual tax bill in the spring.

"The spring bill could be a killer with the override and the new valuations. We have to address this problem, because it's going to be dumped in my lap with the abatements," he told town officials Tuesday night.

He noted it would take an all-out publicity effort to educate the public about the difference between the two tax bills.

Town Treasurer/Collector Elizabeth Ripley noted that town department heads have been told to slow down spending in the beginning of this new fiscal year. Because she does not anticipate receiving tax revenues until November, she said there is little money to cover expenditures being made right now.

The dilemma is further complicated by the need to schedule a special town meeting. In order to finalize the fiscal 1990 budget, taking into account the reduction in state aid, a vote of town meeting is necessary.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon warned that officials need as much time as possible to clearly establish new fees and to calculate how much revenue would be produced. They would also need time to figure how budgets would be cut if the fee increases do not cover the total deficit amount. Every affected budget must be ratified by a vote at special town meeting, he said.

He recommended a town meeting date of September 25, noting that would leave precious little time to calculate the effect of increased fees, or prepare budget cuts in the event those fees are not increased.

Goedecke warned that if the revenue is not produced by the town, cuts in personnel will be made to make up that $104,343 budget deficit. It is imperative that town officials decide quickly what fees can be raised and what revenue will be produced.

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt was optimistic that $25,000 can be raised by increasing mooring fees, and that the remaining deficit can be covered by escalating other town fees. "If we work hard we can find $104,000 in increased fees. Basically, I don't like the idea. But we're up against the wall," he said.

Goedecke said town officials should begin calculating how as much as $75,000 can be raised by increasing local fees. At the same time, the advisory committee will have to prioritize cuts that must be made if those fees are not hiked.

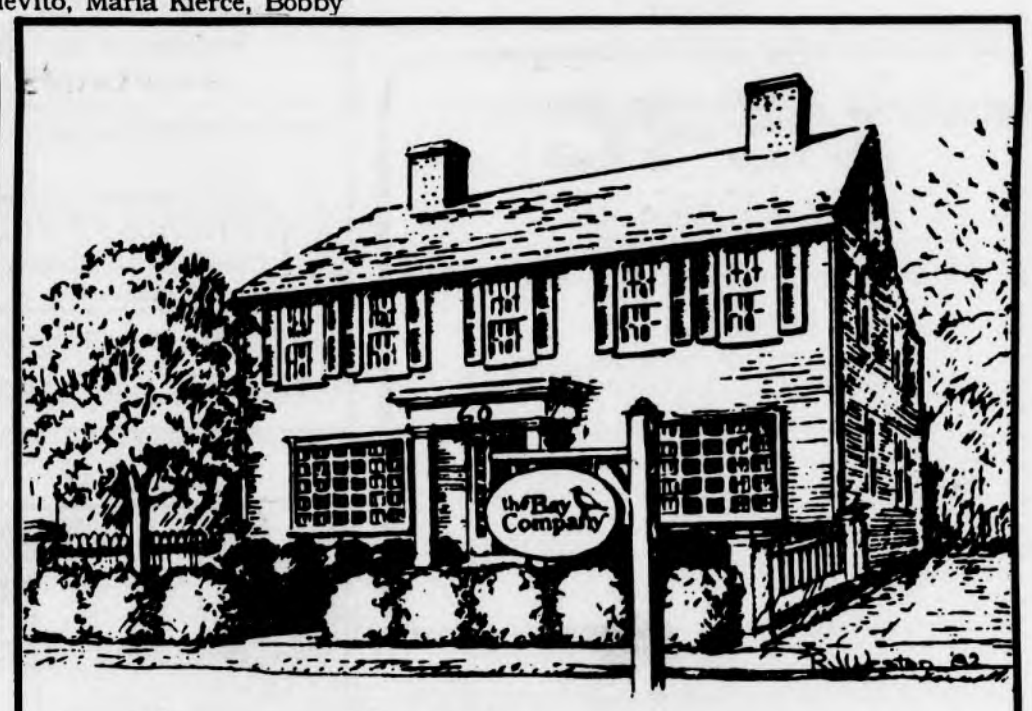
Selectman Martha Gjesteby warned that the state might not be finished with their budget cuts. During conversations with state legislators last week, Gjesteby said she learned that more reductions may be made by the state in the fall.

Swim team winds down its season

The Cohasset Swim Team finished its regular season undefeated by outscoring Hanover 345 1/2 to 284 1/2 on August 4 at Hanover. Once again the depth of Cohasset's team and consistent performance by team members helped Cohasset to victory.

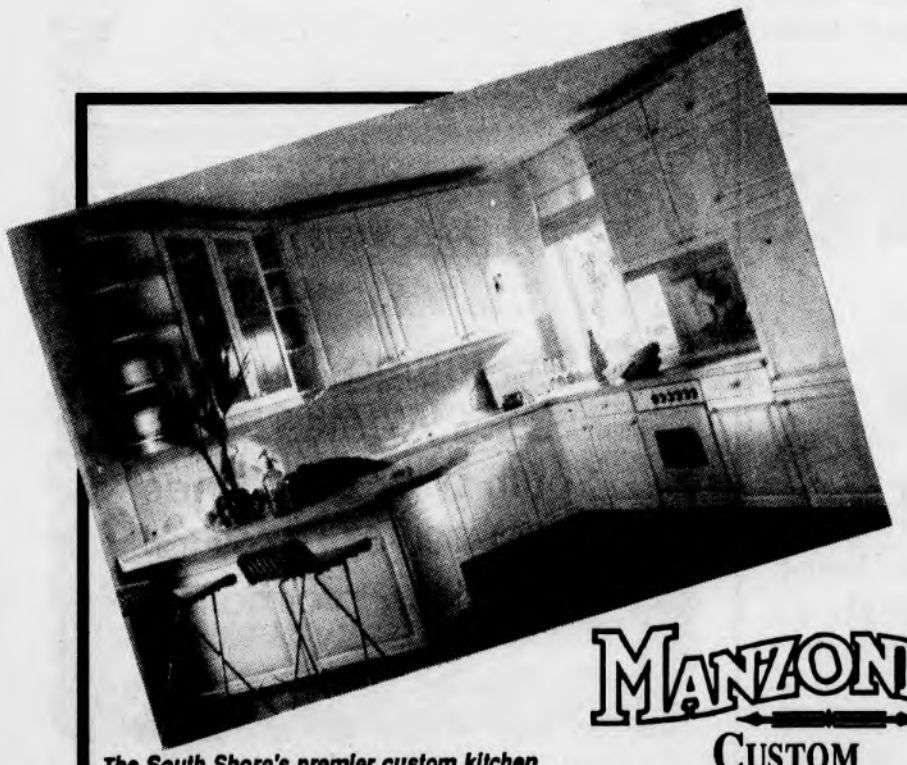
Those swimmers winning first place blue ribbons were: Lauren de Vito (3), Jonathan deLima (3), Jennifer Jackson (3), Chris Kondrat (2), Justin Golden (2), Megan Connelly (4), J.L. Williams, Caroline deLima (2), Becky Golden (3), Chip Anderson (4), Brooke Anderson, Heather Littlehale (4), Derek Bugley (2), Doug Cameron (3), David Leahy (3), Bill Baird, Aimee Theriault (2), Meredith Equi, Kerry Hart, Mark Connelly, Katie Carroll, Jillary Strong, Caitlin Malley, Burke Davis, Tom Forbes, Kittle and Topher Henderson.

Swimmers winning ribbons for second, third and fourth place finishes were: John Kissell, John Brister, Melissa Rousseau, Mike Equi, Ali Welz, Cortney Schultz, Tracey Reardon, Robin deVito, Maria Kierce, Bobby Meehan, Scott Theriault, Mark Equi, Andrew Singleton, Nick Welz, Kerry Tarzia, Dan Baird, Becky Hackenburg, Mo Long, Maren Cameron, Brie McKenney, Cara McKenney, Jamey Kondrat, Dawn Meehan, Jessica Jenkins, Catie Campbell, Mike Rossi, Mike Baird, Trisha Peterson, and Lindsay Tibbetts.



In diving, Backy Golden was first among 12 and under divers and Dawn Meehan was third. Alison Doherty placed second among 16 and under divers.

On Saturday, August 12, Cohasset will compete in the area championships against Hanover, Duxbury Aqua Dux, Duxbury Harbor Yacht Club, Scituate Harbor Yacht Club and the Scituate K of C team. The meet will take place beginning at 9 a.m. at Duxbury Harbor Yacht Club.



The award ceremony for this year's swim team will be held at the Cohasset Swim Center beginning at 4 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 12. All swimmers and their parents are invited.

Schedule at the Music Circus

Singer/songwriter Paul Anka will appear at South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset Wednesday, August 9, followed on Thursday August 10 by the musical revue "An Evening at La Cage." Showtime for both attractions is 8 p.m.

Paul Anka has written approximately 700 songs, recorded by a diverse group of artists ranging from Buddy Holly to Frank Sinatra.

"An Evening at La Cage," being presented on August 10, is an evening of celebrity impersonation. Offering such "illusions" as Marilyn Monroe, Judy Garland, Michael Jackson, Bette Midler, Dolly Parton and Julie Andrews. An Evening at LaCage features spectacularly staged salutes to Broadway and Hollywood. From Atlantic City to Las Vegas, London, Hawaii and Toronto, the La Cage company has become known as a "must see" attraction.

For further information, or to purchase tickets with a major credit card, patrons may call the Music Circus box office at 617-383-1400 any day after 10 a.m.

South Shore Music Circus executive producer Edward R. Kasses has announced the cancellation of "Memories of Motown" at the Cohasset summer theatre.

Originally scheduled to appear Saturday, August 12, the show has been dropped from the theatre's schedule because several of the acts involved in the show have been missing scheduled performances on the current tour.

Refunds will be issued at the point of purchase. For further information, patrons may call the Music Circus at 617-383-1400.

Obituaries

Virginia Hill

A memorial service will be held September 13 at 10 a.m. at Marsh Chapel at Boston University for Virginia Hill.

Mrs. Hill, 80, died August 2 at a Beverly nursing home. A well known landscape and portrait artist, Mrs. Hill lived in Cohasset from the late 1930's until 1953.

She was a founding director of the South Shore Playhouse Associates and was a member of the Amateur Gardeners Club of Cohasset.

Born in Highland Falls, N.Y., Mrs. Hill lived in Boston for many years. She moved from Cohasset in 1953 to New Hampshire.

Mrs. Hill had many paintings exhibited in Boston galleries, including the Copley Society, of which she was a member. She was a former executive secretary of the Back Bay Association of Boston, and was an assistant manager of the Childs Gallery in Boston.

Mrs. Hill had served as an assistant to the Small Business Association of New England, and was a public relations consultant to the South End Historical Society.

She was most recently employed by the First Church of Christ Scientist in Boston, where she was an active church member for 40 years.

At one time, Mrs. Hill taught and lectured on floral arranging and home decorating on the South Shore. While she lived in New Hampshire, Mrs. Hill was president of the Durham, N.H. Garden Club and was a board member of the New Hampshire Federation of Garden Clubs.

She leaves two sons, Robert J. Hill Jr. of Andover and Gregory W. Hill of Somerville; and a daughter, Virginia H. Dodge of Marblehead.

Funeral arrangements were completed by the Full-Spychalski Funeral Home in Salem.

Herschel LaFlamme

Funeral services were held Wednesday, August 9 at the Second Congregational Church for Hershel M. LaFlamme. Mr. LaFlamme died Monday, August 7 at Quincy Hospital.

Mr. LaFlamme was employed by Bethlehem Steel and retired in 1973.

He was a member of the Masons.

He leaves his wife, Velma I. (Barnes) LaFlamme; three sisters, Regina Charleston, Merle LaBrake, and Audrey LaFlamme, all of Massena, N.Y.; and several nephews and pieces.

Donations in Mr. LaFlamme's memory may be made to charity.

Funeral arrangements were completed by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home of Cohasset.

Max M. Munro

A funeral service was held Aug. 1 in Puritan Lawn Cemetery, Peabody, for Max M. Munro, 92, of Cohasset, who died July 29 at his son's home.

Mr. Munro was a former principal and teacher.

A former Peaboy resident, he was also an avid golfer and established a senior golf tourney in Lynn and Salem.

Born and raised in Bridgeton, Nova Scotia, he was graduated from Arcadia University. He served in the Canadian Army in World War I.

In 1926, he came to the United States.

Husband of the late Althea M. (Marshall) Munro, he is survived by a son, Max Munro of Cohasset; two grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

Arrangements were by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home of Cohasset.

Donations may be made to Hingham Visiting Nurse, 10 Downer Ave., Hingham.

Clean water legislation

Legislation which will save Massachusetts ratepayers from skyrocketing water bills, was signed into law Tuesday.

The Clean Water bill authorizes $1.4 billion in bonds to help communities pay for construction or upgrading of wastewater treatment plants.

The bill provides for capture of federal matching

Cohasset worship...

First Parish services

Rev. Edward T. Atkinson, Minister, Parish House (617) 383-1100, 23 North Main Street.
SUMMER SERVICE SCHEDULE — August 13, Linc Bloomfield, "Ethics in World Relations"; Augsut 20, Peter Sexton, adaption of "Midday Prayer" from Common Prayer, King's Chapel, 1984.

This short liturgical service (25-30 minutes) from the Christian Unitarian tradition is held weekly on Wednesday noon at King's Chapel, Boston. King's Chapel is the oldest Unitarian church in the United States (1785). Unlike First Parish, Cohasset, which was originally a Puritan/Congregational church, King's Chapel was Anglican from its founding in 1686 until 1785.
August 27, Chartis Langmaid; September 3, Chuck and Madeline Olney.

Summer services begin at 9 a.m. Car Circle Coordinator for August: Ann Churchill, 383-0435.
PARISH NEWS:

Congratulations to Dick and Sally Wheeler on the birth of their grandaughter, Emily Kathleen Wheeler, on July 20.

The Music and Worship Committee will meet on Thursday, Sept. 14 at 8 p.m. in the Parish House.

OUTREACH — HOMESHARE NEWS:

Excitement is building as we look forward to the fall when we will be able to share our church home with those in need. The building permit has been obtained and volunteers and professionals are being organized to complete the renovations. Your help is needed to make our church home a welcome refuge.

We are looking for donations of good quality used furniture and household goods. If you are able to donate any of the following: hide-a-bed sofa; roll-away cot (2); dresser or wardrobe (2); upholstered arm chair; floor lamp (2); wall mirror; clock; coffee maker; pots and pans; fry pan and cooking utensils; call Donna Mayberry at 545-8175.

There is carpentry and finish work to be done. If you can help in any way, please contact Donna Mayberry or any member of the Outreach Committee.

St. Anthony's parish

SUNDAY MASSES: 7, 9:30, 11:30 a.m.; Saturday: 5 p.m.; Daily Mass: 7 a.m.; Saturday: 8 a.m. followed by Novena & Rosary; Sacrament of Reconciliation: Saturday from 4:15 to 4:45 p.m.
BANNS OF MARRIAGE: Patricia Bowen — Edward Fontaine; Diane Skerpan — Kevin Mahony; William Roy — Stephanie McGurrin.

Public notice

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 88E0114-P1

To Denise Yess of Cohasset in the County of Norfolk, Norfolk County Trust Co., and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Jeanne Mahon of Chula Vista in the State of California representing that she holds as joint tenant an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Cohasset in said County and briefly described as follows:

SOUTHWESTERLY by Ledgewood Drive, one hundred twenty-five (125) feet;

NORTHWESTERLY by lot numbered 28, shown on the plan hereinafter referred to, one hundred sixty (160) feet;

NORTHEASTERLY by lot numbered 29, shown on said plan, one hundred twenty-five (125) feet; and

SOUTHEASTERLY by lot numbered 26, shown on said plan, one hundred and sixty (160) feet.

Said parcel is shown as lot numbered 27 on a plan drawn by Edwin A. Young, Surveyor, dated March 31, 1962, June 21, 1965, and March 9, 1967 as modified and approved by the Land Court, filed in the Land Registration Office as No. 31599A, a copy of a portion of which is filed in Norfolk Registry District with Certificate No. 84452, Sheet 3, Book 423.

There is appurtenant to the above described land the right to use said Ledgewood Drive and Brewster Road shown on said plan, to and from Chief Justice Cushing Highway, shown on said plan, in common with all those lawfully entitled thereto.

So much of the above described land as lies within the limits of said Ledgewood Drive is subject to the rights of all those lawfully entitled thereto, in and over the same.

The above described land is subject to the restrictions set forth in an Indenture of Restrictions and Protective Covenants made by Ledgewood Estates, Inc., dated March 18, 1960, duly recorded in Book 3803, Page 348.

The above described land is subject also to a Covenant between Ledgewood Estate, Inc., and the Planning Board of the Town of Cohasset, dated June 21, 1961, duly recorded in Book 3938, Page 491.

The above described land is subject also to an Agreement made by Ledgewood Estates, Inc., with the Planning Board of the Town of Cohasset, dated June 21, 1961 duly recorded in Book 3948, Page 139.

The above described land is subject to an Agreement made by Ledgewood Estates, Inc., with the Planning Board of the Town of Cohasset, dated December 20, 1961, duly recorded in Book 3956, Page 423.

The above described land is subject to the easements set forth in a grant made by Ledgewood Estates, Inc., to Brockton Edison Company and New England Telephone setting forth that she desires that all of said land may be sold at private sale for not less than two hundred and fifty thousand dollars and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the sixth day of September 1989, the return day of this citation.

Witness, ROBERT M. FORD, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this twenty-seventh day of July 1989.

Thomas Patrick Hughes

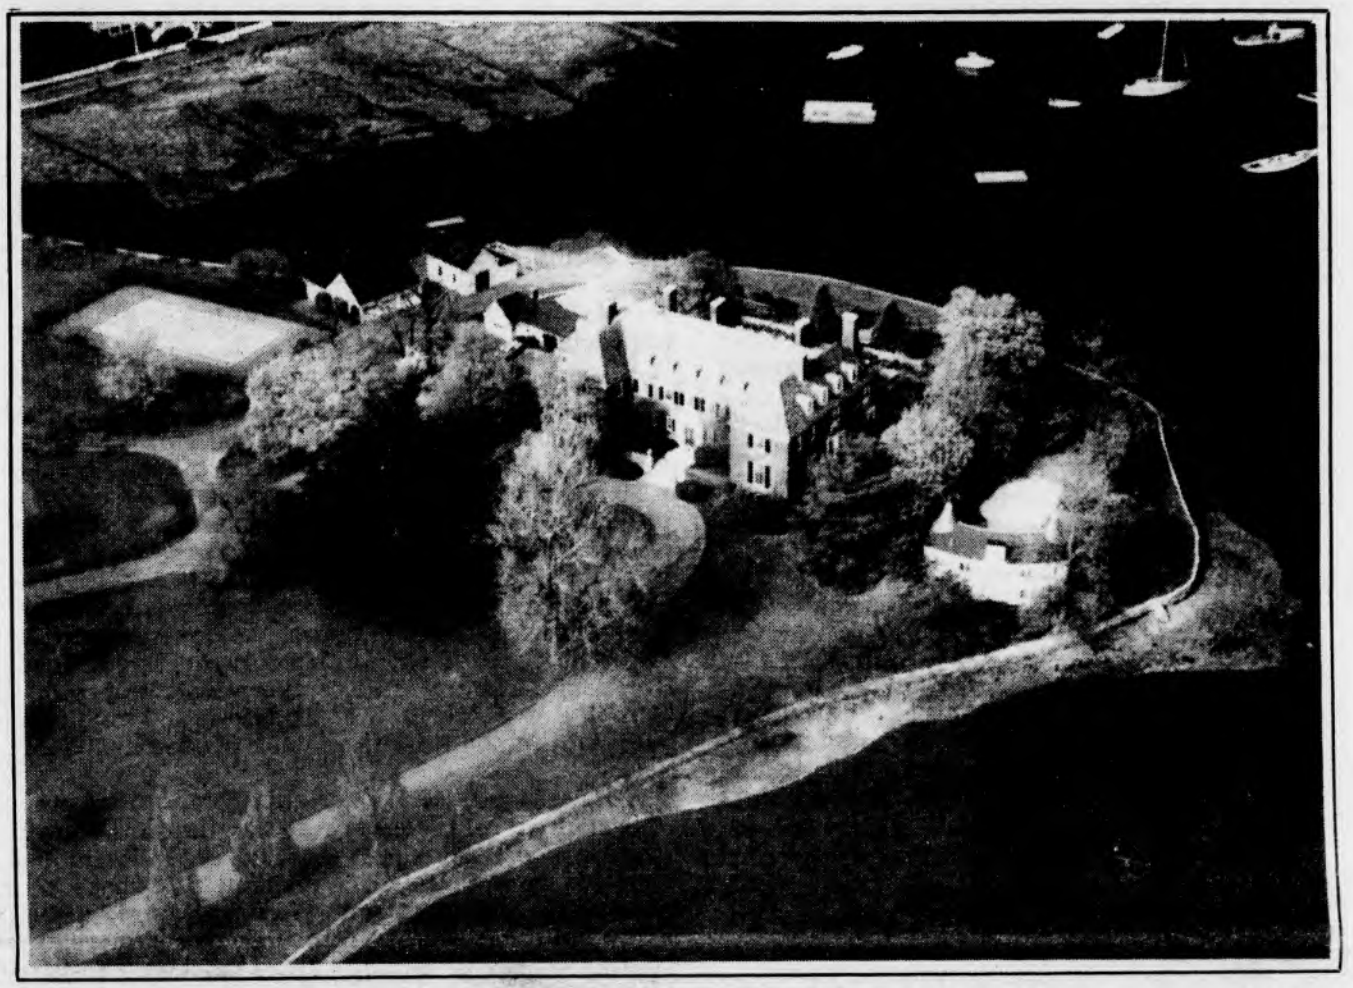
Local man makes an offer for harborside home

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Peter Roy, a member of one of the most prominent families in Cohasset, has signed a purchase and sale agreement to buy The Oaks, the harborside home built 60 years ago by millionaress Jessie Cox Bancroft.

The 55-room mansion, which was converted to a luxury office building when it was acquired in 1983 by Yankee Companies, Inc., will be used by Roy as a residence, although that will "not necessarily" be the only use of the building, according to Hunneman and Co. realtor Janice Crowley. The local realtor put together the deal, which she said is subject to several contingencies, and could therefore be terminated at any time.



As a result of the impending sale, the town's interest in obtaining the property has been put on hold.

Roy, 38, and his wife Susan, are residents of Linden Drive. He is vice president of Intercontinental Energy Corp, a family-operated company with offices in Hingham which specializes in the development of co-generation plants. The company recently received financing for plants in Bellingham, Mass. and Sayerville, N.J.

According to Crowley, a purchase and sale agreement for the home was signed by Roy and an offer was accepted by the owners, MTC Associates III. Although she would not specify a price, The Oaks is on the market for $3.7 million. Crowley did confirm that the transaction, if successful, would be the largest residential real estate deal completed in Cohasset.

MTC Associates III bought the Cohasset Harbor property in 1987 for about $2.3 million. They planned to convert the former corporate

Fundraising group holds concert to keep sports

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

In an effort to combat the impending school budget crisis, a group of residents has formed what they hope will be a strong fundraising arm of the athletic department.

Friends of Cohasset Schools Sports Inc. is planning the first in a year-long series of fundraisers which will begin August 31. Their hope, according to member Clark Chatterton, school athletic director, is to minimize the amount which must be financed by students who participate in sports. Right now the school committee is considering a user fee for each student participating in an athletic program. That fee could be as high as $100 per sport for each student.

School officials figure there will be a large drop in participation if that maximum amount is approved. "To be confident that a total athletic program will be offered, there is some concern with the cost. If you have two kids and three sports, it will be a considerable amount of money," stated Supt. Stephen Hart at Monday's school committee meeting. "If we can get a guarantee from this group, we will base our user fee on that difference."

The organization, which now includes teachers, administrators, a school official and parents, hopes to raise about $30,000 this year - more than half of what has been cut out of the athletic budget for 1989-90.

The first fundraiser will be a concert by rock stars David Crosby and Graham Nash, August 31 at the South Shore Music Circus. Executive Producer Edward Kasses has consigned 500 seats in the first eight rows to the group, which will now sell those seats for $40 and $32.50 each. All the profits from the sale of the tickets will go to the Friends of Cohasset Schools Sports Inc.

"The difference between success and failure," according to member Terry Kahn, "will mean $40 a person to sit in the front row, or $100 a kid to sit on

Minot's to be relighted August 20

By Bill Leitch
Mariner correspondent

"It should be a big moment. The townspeople are proud of their lighthouse and now it's going to be working again," said Noel Ripley, chairman of the Historical Society.

The big moment he was referring to will be 2:30 p.m. this Sunday, Aug. 20 when the switch will be thrown, relighting the solar battery-powered lantern in Minot's Ledge Lighthouse. And then the light will resume flashing its 1-4-3 signal, familiar to seafarers and landlubbers alike since the lighthouse was completed in the fall of 1860.

Dedication ceremonies for the event begin Sunday at 1 p.m. at Government Island. An honor guard will present the colors, and then Ripley will give the welcoming address.

Also speaking at the ceremony will be local fisherman Herb Jason, selectmen chairman Burtram Pratt, State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and Coast Guard Captain Joseph Bernard.

At 2 p.m. there will be a rowing race. A Coast Guard fly-by will take place, and the Coast Guard's 41-foot cutter from Scituate will be in the harbor.

The Scituate Sea Scouts will then perform a close order drill. A Breeches buoy demonstration also will be held. A Breeches Buoy was used by onshore

Deck Point must make repairs

By Bill Leitch
Mariner correspondent

The Conservation Commission voted unanimously Tuesday to file an enforcement order requiring Deck Point, Inc., of East Sandwich, to correct drainage and siltation problems at a site on Rte. 3A near the Cohasset Heights landfill.

Last year, the company had proposed building a low-income housing development at the site, but was denied state funding. They were granted a comprehensive permit by the zoning board, which contained several conditions. Deck Point has not moved on those housing plans since that time.

Large amounts of material at the site were excavated, leaving several large mounds and pits. Some of the pits are about 15 feet deep, according to ConCom members. The commission notified Deck Point as far back as December 1987 that siltation was flowing from the site into Sanctuary Pond across Route 3A.

"There's no growth on the property, so when it rains everything just washes down and covers the soil, kills plants, gets into culverts, and flows into the pond," chairman Jeff Waal said.

Silt has also been observed flowing into James Brook, which feeds three town drinking water sources, the commission noted.

Deck Point was required by the Board of Health to Getting set for bills

In accordance with regulations set by the state Department of Revenue, the board of assessors has advised selectmen that they are getting set to mail estimated tax bills.

The assessors will work with the town accountant, the treasurer-collector and the executive secretary to facilitate an early mailing date, according to chairman James Lagroterria.

The assessors would have been ready to set a tax rate by late August or early Sepetmber, Lagroterria said, but that it not possible until town meeting ratifies the 1990 fiscal budget. A balanced budget is a requirement before a tax rate is determined, he noted.

A matter for tri-town

Hingham selectmen have responded to Cohasset's suggestion to regionalize services by recommending the subject be reviewed by the tri-town commission.

Cohasset selectmen made the suggestion in July, noting that regionalization of certain town services may be one way to ease budgetary constraints in neighboring towns.

Hingham selectmen suggested the matter be discussed at the next meeting of the tri-town commission, with representatives of Cohasset, Hingham and Hull in attendance.

Waal named chairman

Jeffrey C. Waal was elected chairman of the conservation commission at their July 11 meeting.

Veneta Roebuck was named vice chairman. Members of the commission include Patricia Buckley, Willima Parmenter, Merle Brown, John Bryant and Thomas Callahan.

Offers to impeach

The Wichendon Board of Selectmen has solicited the help of Cohasset selectmen to begin impeachment proceedings against Governor Michael Dukakis.

"Ironically, the authority to impeach rests with the same legislative body which supported his presidential bid and at the same time perpetrated this inevitable fiscal dilemma," they stated in the July 27 letter to selectmen.

"Audaciously, the governor has refused to pare the bureaucracy he has built and instead now is using us," the Wichendon officials stated, "the cities and towns of Massachusetts, who are already impaired by Proposition 2 1/2, to get his way. All of us know that the waste is at the state level, and not in our municipalities. The fact remains, your constituencies want the entire revenue shortfall to be exorcised from the state budget, not their communities.

"Whatever happened to the 'Massachusetts Miracle' and the 'hands on manager?' We believe these phrases were contrived political rhetoric and a cover up of the real mess took place to heighten the governor's presidential ambitions."

The Wichendon selectmen asked Cohasset to join them in support of the impeachment "on the grounds that he breached the public trust by his dishonest representation of the fiscal standing of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts." They asked that Cohasset selectmen contact their state legislators stating their support of the impeachment proceedings.

MBTA to increase parking

The MBTA announced plans this week to purchase property in the Hingham Shipyard in order to construct a $3 million parking lot for use by commuter boat riders.

According to Senator William Golden, the MBTA is currently negotiating a purchase price with Paul X. O'Neil, owner of the former GSA building at the Hingham Shipyard. That property will be razed, signaling a start to the proposed $60 million shipyard rehabilitation project by owner Paul Neelon.

Although the MBTA originally intended to construct a parking garage at the shipyard, they scrapped those plans in favor of the street-level lot. Shipyard owner Neelon, a resident of Cohasset, intends to construct ten office buildings, 200 condominium units, a refurbished commercial fishing pier, two restaurants and a hotel on the Rte. 3A property.

Late last summer, Sen. Golden initiated negotiations between the town of Hingham, shipyard owner Paul Neelon and the MBTA to locate suitable property for a larger, permanent commuter boat parking lot. The MBTA is working to select an engineer to design a new lot, a new dock and an improved passenger waiting area.

Currently, the MBTA provides 400 parking spaces on state-owned land, and leases more than 800 additional spaces from two private property owners at the shipyard. The new lot will include those 400 spaces combined with 1,600 spaces where the GSA building is now situated.

Ridership on the Hingham-to-Boston commuter boat has increased over the past four years from under 800 to nearly 2,500 passengers each weekday. The parking lot was frequently found to be inadequate.

According to MBTA General Manager Thomas P. Glynn, the construction of a consolidated parking lot for the commuter boat riders will allow commercial development to begin on the land now leased by the MBTA.

The present parking lot will continue to be used while the new permanent lot is being constructed. The new lot is expected to be completed in two years, according to an MBTA spokesman.

Rate increase hearing

The MBTA will hold a public hearing Wednesday, Sept. 6 regarding a proposed commuter boat fare increase.

The hearing will be held at the Hingham Town Office Building, East Street from 3:30 to 6:30 p.m.

The MBTA is considering raising the fare to $4 per trip from Hingham to Boston. The fee is curently $3 for a one-way trip.

A second public hearing is scheduled Thursday, September 7 at South Station in Boston from 3 to 6 p.m.

Rte. 3A breaks investigated

Police are investigating a series of breaks along Rte. 3A that were reported Sunday and Monday mornings.

According to Sgt. Robert Jackson, there were seven breaks reported at businesses along the state highway. According to Sgt. Jackson, a small amount of cash was taken from all businesses except one in which $1000 was stolen. "They just took the morning cash boxes," Sgt. Jackson said.

Police said in each instance entry was gained by breaking a pane of glass. Fingerprints have been taken from the premises, and Det. Brian Cogill is investigating the cases which police believe are related.

A car reported stolen from Randolph was recovered in the vacinity of JJ's ice cream shop Sunday morning. Police believe the car may be related to the series of break-ins.

According to Sgt. Jackson, the breaks occurred only at businesses along Rte. 3A. No homes were involved.

Ambulance fee proposal

Fire Chief Daniel Brock has recommended that Cohasset's ambulance fees be increased by $60 to an amount more in line with what area communities are charging.

In a survey of neighboring towns, Chief Brock found that Cohasset currently has the-next-to-lowest ambulance fee in the area. The ambulance service is provided by the fire department EMTs to Cohasset residents for $90.

Only one other community is lower, but Scituate is considering an increase from $85 to $125.

Hull and Norwell charge $150 and Hingham charges $180 for their town-operated ambulance service.

Chief Brock also suggested that the town establish a third party billing service with insurance companies. If fees are not paid on a third notice, then a tax lien or a collection agency could be used.

"The proposal should at least double our ambulance receipts with the least direct impact to the residents of Cohasset," the chief stated in his recommendation to selectmen.

Firearms license hike

The police department has increased the firearms license fee to $20.

According to Police Chief Joseph Kealey, the fee increase should double the amount of revenue generated by the licenses this past year. He estimated that thirty-seven firearms licenses will be renewed this year, and about 20 new licenses will be issued.

According to the police chief, by increasing the fee from $10 to $20, the amount of revenue from the licenses should amount to $1,140 - double last year's total. The new fee became effective July 1, 1989.

Assessments are set

The new real estate and personal tax assessments are available for inspection at the assessor's office until August 22.

The state Department of Revenue has reviewed the town's revaluation figures and has granted assessors preliminary approval.

Residents may review the assessment figures at the assessor's office in town hall from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays. The information will not be made available over the telephone.

The tax rate will be set after the assessment process has been finalized and approved by the state and voters have approved all fiscal 1990 budget changes at the October special town meeting.

Pets must be licensed

According to Town Clerk Frances Marks, 113 dog owners have not registered their pets. If they are not registered by August 24, the owners will face a $25 fine.

The fee for a spayed or neutered dog is $6; and $10 for all others.

Town Clerk Marks noted that all money from the registrations will go directly into the town's budget. Previously, the town was a member of Norfolk County Animal Control and all fees were directed to that account.

Light shut off protected

Several Bailey Road residents complained to selectmen about a proposal to shut-off street lighting on private ways throughout town.

In a letter to selectmen, the residents explained that Bailey Road is in a wooded area without lighting. There is only one street light on the road, which provides drivers with ample warning of on-coming cars, they said.

The light is also a deterrent to crime in the darkened neighborhood, they stated. According to the residents, Bailey Road has had a street light for the past 30 years, and the road has always been paved and snow plowed by the town.

"We feel it is unjust to take the service of the light on Bailey Road away, as we all deserve to benefit from our tax dollars at work," they wrote in a letter to selectmen.

Special town meeting set

There will be a special town meeting October 10 at 7:30 p.m. to adjust any budgets that may be affected by the reduction of state aid.

The meeting is needed to balance the fiscal 1990 budget in order to set a tax rate. Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon suggested the October date, noting that time is needed after the meeting to set a tax rate so actual, rather than estimated tax bills can be mailed this fall.

The warrant for the special town meeting is now open and will close at 4:30 p.m. Monday, August 21. Petition articles require signatures of 100 registered voters. All other articles will be inserted into the warrant at the discretion of selectmen.

Forecasting — The Colors in Your Future

From the emerald Atlantic to the azure Pacific, the steely Great Lakes to the sugar sands of Florida, color trends emerge and change. But what makes a shade popular one year and passe the next?

Color is an industry where professionals predict trends.

The Color Association of the United States forecasts clothing colors and three year color cycles for furniture, appliances and automobiles.

The leader in color prognostication, the Color Marketing Group (CMG), identifies popular colors up to ten years in advance.

Predictions comprise three categories: established (grays, mauves), ascending (blues, reds) and forecast (yellows).

CMG 's represent nearly every industry, all hoping to avoid stagnant inventories and keep abreast of trends.

Among the many influences on color is television. Just as darker, more serious colors have replaced Miami pastels, baggy white suits have given way to no nonsense, L.A. pinstripes.

Today jewel tones replace dusty shades. Look for salmon, yellow, rose, clear pink and Federal blue. Green refreshes clothes and homes alike.

Use your imagination to make the most of the color in your life.

School committee wants more revenue, no more cuts

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The school committee will pass along a message to the advisory committee - make additional budget cuts only as a final resort.

At a meeting last week with various department heads, Town Accountant Mary Matthews reported that a decrease in state local aid will result in a net deficit to Cohasset of about $104,000. But advisory committee members and selectmen figured a large portion of that deficit could be wiped out if town service fees, such as beach, landfill, and ambulance fees were increased. Selectmen already decided that by hiking the mooring fees they will bring in an additional $25,000 which would automatically cut the deficit to about $75,000.

If more local revenue is not found, advisory committee members said they will begin to prioritize cuts within the town budgets. Those budget cuts would then be voted upon by special town meeting. If the standard measurement is followed, the school committee will have to swallow about half the deficit, or about $37,000.

At their meeting Monday night, school committee members reiterated the importance of finding other sources of revenue rather than continuing to cut departmental budgets. "It would be more and more difficult to make these cuts," according to Supt. Stephen Hart. "We've (already) cut supplies, capital purchases. There aren't many areas left."

The committee decided to "take a strong stand" and urge the advisory committee "to do all they can to identify sources of revenue, other than cutting the operating budgets."

In other action Monday night, the school committee voted to hike the school lunch price by a quarter to $1.25. They also voted to hire a new food service management company to operate the school lunch program beginning next month.

With the increase in lunch prices, Canteen Corp. figures to bring in about $254,000, a vast improvement over this year's total of about $147,000. This year, the school's in-house lunch program ended with a small deficit, according to Supt. Stephen Hart. There was something to be desired in the variety of offerings this year, which lead to the declining number of students who bought their lunches, he added.

The corporation expects there will be a profit for the school system in the first year of the program because of the increase in the lunch price and the expected rise in student participation.

According to Supt. Hart, the menu is diverse and innovative, offering many unique features such as homemade soups, several a la carte selections, an attractive salad bar, afternoon snacks and an assortment of breakfast foods.

During the past year, less than 30 percent of the student population bought school lunches. Canteen Corp. expects to double that figure this year, Supt. Hart noted.

Although the company will supply its own manager, essentially the same cafeteria staff will remain this year, he added.

Only one other company bid on the school lunch contract, but Canteen's proposal was more diverse than the one offered by Service America, the superintendent stated. He talked to several school officials where Canteen is currently operating the lunch program. He was encouraged by their opinions.

The contract, which will be immediately negotiated by Supt. Hart, will take effect September 7.

In other action, the school committee voted to hire a school accountant as part of their central office reorganization plan.

Jeffrey Feingold was unanimously approved by the committee as the business office accountant. He comes to Cohasset with the highest professional credentials, according to Supt. Hart, having worked for one of the largest accounting firms as an expert on corporate taxes. "He wanted a change in venue," according to the superintendent, who said Feingold received excellent recommendations.

Feingold will receive a salary in the mid-20's, according to the superintendent.

Nancy Magnusson was hired as a sixth grade teacher at the Deer Hill School. A former Chapter One tutor in Cohasset and Hingham, Magnusson is also a former Hingham classroom teacher.

Seven people were interviewed by a sub committee, although more than 200 applications were received for the position. The first choice of the sub committee and Supt. Hart, was Magnusson.

The position was created this year, he noted, because of the increase in sixth grade students this year. There will be more than 90 sixth grade students this September. Currently, there are three sixth grade teachers at the school.

The school committee approved a tuition hike for non residents who attend Cohasset schools this year. That rate was increased from about $3,600 to $3,885 which is the recommended level set by the State Department of Education.

According to Supt. Hart, there are at least two tuition students expected in Cohasset this year.

Committee member Nancy Sandell suggested that in order to increase needed school revenue, a larger increase would be justified. But chairman Barbara Bliss noted that all tuition received by the schools goes directly into the town's general fund and not into the school budget.

The school committee will review a proposal by the high school administration to increase the number of credits necessary for promotion and graduation. Even if the new plan is implemented, it will not go into effect this year.

According to guidance director John O'Leary, a senior graduating from Cohasset High should accumulate 100 points. That total is now set at 80 points, but most graduate now with more than 100 credits.

At the high school, students will take five major subjects each semester worth five points each, plus other subjects such as gym worth two points. Accumulating the necessary credits for graduation is not an unreasonable expectation, according to Leary.

Supt. Hart said it might be better to begin the program with the Class of 1991. He noted that if there are additional budget cuts in the future and subjects are dropped from the curriculum, it may be increasingly difficult for students to participate in those minor subject areas where they accrue two credits per class.

The committee will vote on the proposal at its August 31 meeting.

Drama club to use town hall

At their meeting last week, selectmen approved a request by the Cohasset Drama Club to use the town hall auditorium for their fall production of "Musicman."

Ronald Massa, vice president of the drama club, requested use of the auditorium for dress rehearsal dates of Nov. 5-8, and for play dates of Nov. 9-11, 16-18.

The board informed Massa of the work that needs to be done to make the auditorium useable. Chairman Burtram J. Pratt said that $700 worth of plumbing work is needed, and that the floor is warped and buckling. The auditorium also needs cleaning, and the heating system has not worked properly since construction began on the new wing of town hall, Burtram further noted.

Selectman Martha K. Gjesteby moved that the board approve the request pending negotiations and establishing an appropriate user fee with the drama club. But Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle said the board had never had any problems with the drama club, a long-time tenant of the auditorium, and suggested a simple vote of approval. The board voted approval, 4-0, with Ned Tebbets absent.

In other business, the board:

• announced that the dedication ceremonies for the restoration and relighting of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse will be conducted on Sunday, Aug. 20, at Government Island, beginning at 1 p.m.

Selectmen said that Senators John Kerry and Edward Kennedy as well as Rear Admiral Ryback will be invited to speak at the ceremony.

The relighting of the light will take place at 2:30.

• Discussed increasing various fees to help raise more revenue. Executive Secretary Greg Doyon suggested that mooring fees be increased. The board agreed to consult Harbormaster Irving Gadow on the matter. Selectmen voted to increase the fee for obtaining the town's voting list for mailing purposes from $75 to $100, and to raise the cost of using the town hall's copy machine from 10 to 25 cents a copy.

• Voted to let stand the parking ban on Robert Jason Road. The Board was asked to consider rescinding the ban on Sundays to allow churchgoers to park on the street. The board noted that the parking prohibition is posted but that it's difficult to enforce because churchgoers are in the habit of parking on the street. Selectmen unanimously voted to abide by the safety officer's recommendation that the ban remain in effect.

Coalition to discuss waterfront rules

The South Shore Coalition and the state office of Coastal Zone Management have scheduled a public forum on proposed regulations which will affect future development along waterfronts throughout Massachusetts.

The forum will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 17, at Norwell town hall on Route 123. Representatives from the Department of Environmental Protection and the coastal zone management office will present a summary of the comprehensive regulations.

Chapter 91 is the waterways licensing statute adopted in 1866 and is the oldest law of its kind in the nation, regulating activities both along the coast and inland.

The act has been amended twice in recent years, and the proposed regulations would toughen it further, taking jurisdiction over construction, dredging, filling tidelands, ponds and certain rivers and streams.

• The proposal would not allow fill and limits new structures in areas of critical environmental concern.

• The definition of water-dependent projects, such as marinas which need land for parking areas, would be expanded.

• A license for projects only 200 feet seaward would be required. Activities on filled tidelands would still require a license.

• Extensive public access benefits would be required.

• Long-term dockominiums would be allowed, as long as they be matched one-for-one with a seasonal slip.

• Yacht clubs would be required to provide public access, such as offering community boating programs.

• Slips and moorings would be required to be assigned fairly as they become vacant – by the harbormaster, not the state.

• The proposal would raise all fees.

Public hearings have been scheduled in at 7 p.m. Sept. 11 at Lipke Auditorium at the Science Center at UMass/Boston and Sept. 14 at Cape Cod Community College, Route 132, Barnstable.

Local man makes offer for harbor mansion headquarters into residential condomiums, but there was a public outcry against their plans to construct a 100-boat marina around the perimeter of the property.

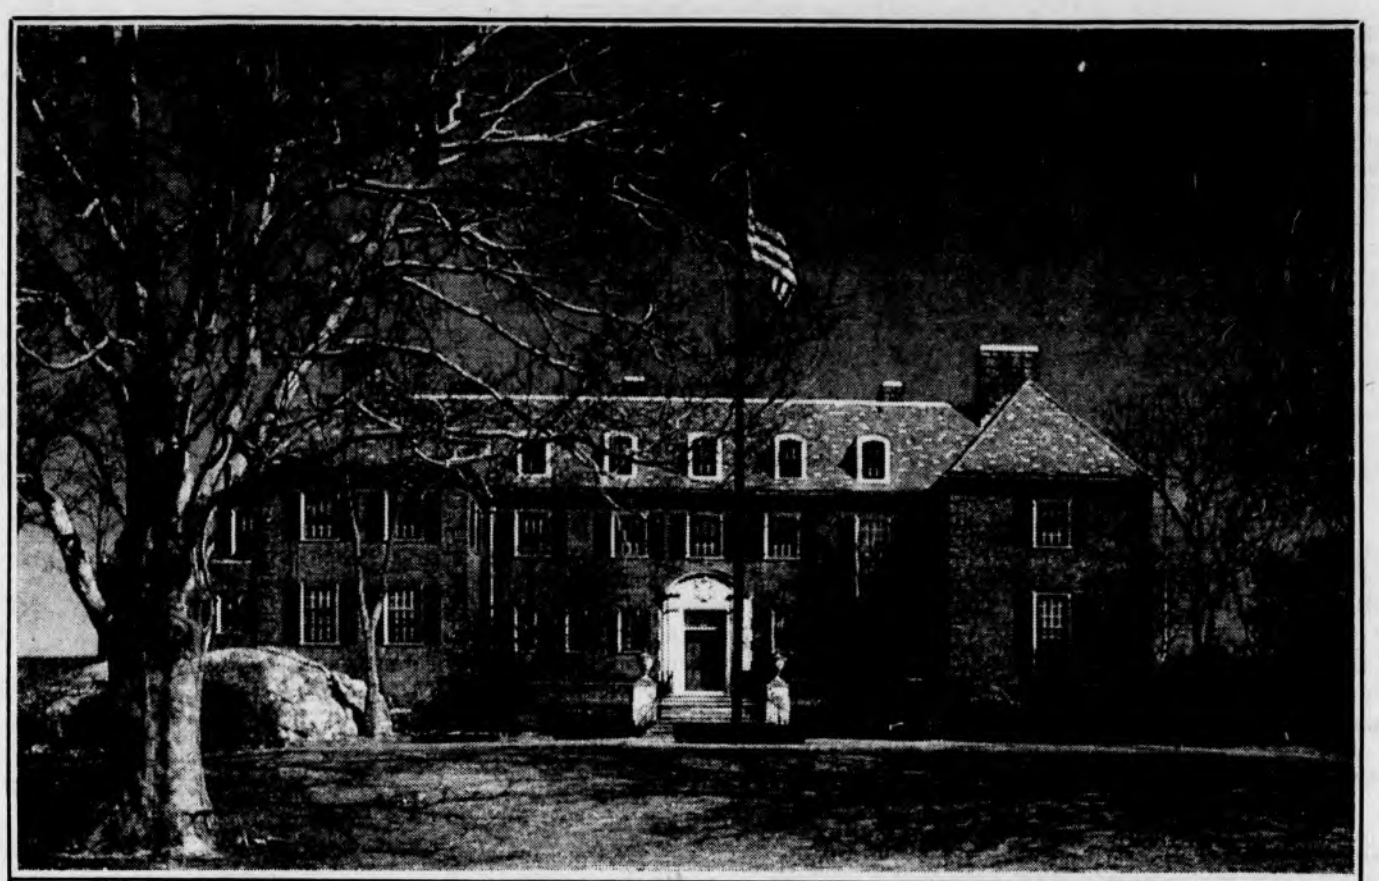
At that time, the owners offered to donate the house and the grounds to the town of Cohasset if they were allowed to go ahead with the marina plans.

Ultimately, the plan went down to defeat when town meeting rejected a private marina development within the harbor. Soon afterward, the owners offered the property for sale.

The town has maintained a strong, but distant interest in obtaining the property, and a study committee was formed to investigate ways the town might gain title to the Georgian-style mansion.



Edward Atkinson, a member of the Cox Estate Planning Committee, was told "unofficially" that Roy had signed a purchase and sales agreement for the property.

"If the sale does go through, then I would assume the committee will disband," he said, noting he will convey that information at the group's first meeting scheduled for Wednesday, Aug. 16. "I think what we will probably do is to recess, and wait to see if the sale goes through."

Gregory Doyon, the selectmen's executive secretary, heard reports that the property is under agreement with Roy, but selectmen have never received any official information.

"I did pass on what I had heard to the planning committee," he stated.

Efforts by The Mariner to contact Peter and Susan Roy, MTC Associates III were unsuccessful.

Run-off concerns at subdivision

By Bill Leitch
Mariner correspondent

Conservation Commission members Tuesday expressed concern over the potential impact to wetlands from increased water run-off at a proposed residential subdivision at 56 Church St., owned by Joseph Carbone.

Carbone is proposing to build five homes on the five-acre site. He plans to remove his existing home at the site and to move into one of the five new homes in the subdivision.

Paul Mirabito and Kurt Hulteen, of Ross Engineering Co., of Norwell, said that there will be no net increase in the run-off from the site. They said that they propose to construct a grass drainage swale and drainage outfall which will divert all the run-off to a small stream. A pipe will divert run-off from flowing into a catch basin on Church St.

ConCom members said they didn't understand how there would be no increase in flow if more water is diverted to flow into one area. Mirabito said that the rate of flow will be slowed by the swale and by grading the site to a slope of .5%. Board members said that the rate of flow may not increase, but that the volume will, and that they were concerned about the effect more run-off might have downstream.

Mirabito presented the board with drainage calculations showing that his proposed drainage system would ensure that there would be no net increase in flow. He said that the swale would absorb much of the flow, and that because the land was nearly level, water would not run off rapidly or in large amounts.

In other business, the commission:

— discussed erosion problems at Lots 11, 12 and 21 Heather Drive where a four-bedroom house is under construction. The property is owned by Guy J. and Judy M. Scarpaci, who inherited the current problems at the site when they purchased the property. Norman Levin, an engineer, told the board that the erosion problem is being remedied as quickly as possible.

The commission asked Levin to present a proposal with his plans to correct the problem, and to clean up the siltation caused by the recent heavy rains. At that point, the commission will close the public hearing.

— held a public hearing with John S. Dean, who is proposing to build a single family residence on Lot #33B, Meadow Lane, owned by Helen E. Dean, of 42 Atlantic Ave. ConCom members expressed their concern over a 15-foot retaining wall which will support a swimming pool to be constructed on ledge. The commission asked Arthur Munro of Perkins Engineering, Hingham, to have a registered engineer stamp the drawing, guaranteeing that the wall will not fail.

— met with Roderick Gaskell of SITEC Engineers and with James and Ann Whelan to discuss alleged erosion and drainage problems at 153 Beach St., which purportedly is flooding the adjacent Whelan property. James McLaughlin, owner of the property at 153 Beach St., has built a house at the site which he allegedly is trying to sell for well over one million dollars. Whelan claims that the builders hit water 18 inches below the surface, and that they regraded the land using clay, which causes rainfall to run off onto his property, where he has had a successful perc test and plans to build. He also says that large quantities of water are being pumped from the basement of the new house onto his land.

Two drywells have been constructed on the site. Commissioner Veneta Roebuck said that she observed water bubbling up and overflowing out of one of the drywells.

Gaskell asked the board to lift the enforcement order which they filed. He said that he would work to have the drainage problems corrected.

Chairman Jeff Waal said that he would leave the enforcement order in place. He said that it was valid because drywells had been constructed and were being pumped into.

Gaskell claimed that the ConCom had no jurisdiction over the site, saying that the owner has not altered a resource area. He said that if the case went to court, the commission would have no jurisdiction. He also told Whelan that no water was flowing onto his property from McLaughlin's land.

Although Gaskell feels that the ConCom has no jurisdiction over the site, he agreed to meet with the commission and with the Whelans again at the Sept. 5 meeting, saying that he hopes a solution can be worked out without going to court.

Caroline DeLima received the coveted trophy for most dedicated diver at the swim team's award ceremony last weekend.

□ Congratulations to Betty Maree, on her 30th anniversary as secretary to the Cohasset Water Department. She started working there August 17, 1959, and is still going strong. All her co-workers, friends, and family wish her the very best and hope she stays for another 30 years.

Congratulations Betty, again, for 30 years of excellence and dedication. We love you, Betty!

□ While attending a church service on Government Island last Sunday, an unusual sight took place. Polly Laugelle Litchfield walked by with her matched luggage, the biggest one being on wheels. For a moment, we all lost track as to where we were, we could have been at Logan Airport! We always knew you traveled in style, Polly, and that proved it!!

□ Next Sunday is the official lighting of Minot Light, and there promises to be lots of festivities. One of the celebrations will be the "Blessing of the Fleet," conducted by all of the clergy in Cohasset, which is scheduled for around 3. Don't miss it!

□ We sure want to wish Tara Pompeo and "the love of her life" Rich Wesenberg a long and happy marriage . . . they are going to be married this weekend, here's to a perfect day for a perfect couple!!!

□ Spec. Scott A. Patrolia has completed a tracked-vehicle repair course, Aberdenn Proving Ground, Maryland. During the course, students were trained to repair engines, transmissions, and the fuel, electrical and hydraulic systems of the Army's tracked vehicles. They also learned to perform recovery operations for abandoned, damaged, disabled or mired vehicles. Scott is the son of Michael and Ellen Patrolia, 15 Cushing Road, and a 1986 CHS grad.

□ Happy birthday to Bill Ripley!!

□ It's here . . . the Marshfield Fair, that is! All we see "around town" are people reading the racing forms . . . may all Cohasset residents that have horses running be winners!!

□ Congratulations go to four members of the Cohasset Rotary Club that were honored recently: Al Livingston, Arne Gjesteby, Wayne Robbins and Ron Goodwin were the gentlemen that were singled out for their outstanding service to the Rotary Club. We salute you!

□ The Cohasset Swim Team gets a well-deserved standing ovation. They finished their regular season undefeated! We cannot wait to hear the results of the area championships, here's hoping they win the whole thing!! One thing is for sure, they certainly will try their hardest!

□ Carla Lucas was named to the dean's list for the spring semester at Wheaton College, in Norton, Mass. where she graduated May 20.

She is the daughter of Mr. Thomas J. Lucas of Cohasset.

□ Jessica Hamilton was named to the dean's list for the spring semester at Wheaton College, Norton, Mass., where she graduated May. 20.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Hamilton III of Cohasset.

As most know, there was a large celebration last Sunday, honoring the anniversary of the building of the "new" St. Anthony's Church. You may have read that Patrick Broderick was the first baby baptized in the new church. His Mom, Rita, wrote a note to tell those who are interested how the fates have handled his first 25 years! Patrick graduated from CHS in 1983 where he actively participated in sports, playing football, basketball and baseball. He entered New York Maritime College at Ft. Schuyler, New York where he was a member of the varsity football team and rugby team. He graduated in 1987 and received his B.S. in Naval Science. He entered the US Navy upon graduation and has recently been promoted to the rank of Lieutenant (jg) and is the Communications Officer of the Fast Frigate U.S.S. Paul whose homeport is Mayport, Florida. Patrick has completed courses at the Surface Warfare School in Newport, Rhode Island, a six month tour of duty in the Mediterranean, he is currently in port and will return to the Med. in early 1990. Wouldn't Father Brennan be proud of the new St. Anthony's "First Baby"!

□ Best wishes go to William Roy and the new Mrs. Roy, Stephanie (McGurrin). Although the weather wasn't made in heaven on their wedding day, we are sure that their marriage will be! Congratulations.

□ Joseph and Janet (LeClair) Campbell of 14 Pleasant Street, are the parents of a girl, Alyssa Jane, who was born July 17 at Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

Grandparents are Ann Campbell of Scottsdale, Ariz., Joseph Campbell of St. Clair Shores, MI, and Joyce LeClair of Saco, Maine.

□ Michael Alton White of Forest Avenue, was named to the Dean's List for the spring term at the University of Delaware.

□ Linda Johnson and her sister Debby Gentile purchased The New American Image hair salon three weeks ago. They want to assure their customers that it is business as usual at The Cushing Plaza, Cohasset salon.

Deck Point ordered to correct drainage

install fences at the site, but ConCom members say they are ineffective in alleviating the drainage problems. The deep pits remain a safety hazard as well, they say.

The commission requested from Deck Point plans as to their intentions with the property, but the company responded that the commission already has their plans. But the only plans the commission has are those of the housing project which the company had to abandon.

ConCom members have written to Deck Point on several occasions since December 1987 requesting that the drainage and siltation problems be addressed. Asaf A. Qazilbash, an attorney representing Deck Point's engineers, has responded that there is no erosion problem at the site, and that the ConCom is being "unreasonable" in its demand that Deck Point do more to control erosion. The commission invited Qazilbash to attend their Sept. 5 meeting.

Board members have been photographing the site after heavy rains. At Tuesday's meeting, John Bryant showed photographs taken last Sunday, after the weekend of heavy rains. The photos showed fast-moving streams of muddy water flowing along the property and into Sanctuary Pond, which had turned muddy.

"It's a running river of liquid clay, with real waterfalls," Bryant said.

The ConCom had no jurisdiction over the site before any work was done, because the property is about 105 feet from Sanctuary Pond, which is outside the 100 foot buffer zone. But since siltation is now flowing into the pond, the commission has "after-the-fact" jurisdiction, which gives them power to file an enforcement order.

The commission thinks that Deck Point intends to sell the property. Members voted to file the enforcement order to prevent the land from being sold until Deck Point addresses the problems at the site.

Law firm appointed special counsel at no cost to town

The Boston law firm of Roache, Carens, and DeGiacomo will represent the zoning board of appeals at no cost in the appeal of their decision to grant a comprehensive permit for the Crystal Woods development.

The law firm will act as special counsel at no fee, with Town Counsel Richard Henderson serving as co-counsel.

In June, the appeals board granted a comprehensive permit to developer Jack Hurley to build a condominium development off Ledgewood Road which is to include a number of affordable housing units.

Two weeks ago, a group of abutters, including the Ledgewood Neighborhood Assn., filed an appeal of that decision. They asked the superior court to annul the decision, saying "it is not consistent with local need, because of an adverse effect on the health, safety, and valid planning objections to the development and therefore exceeds the zoning board's authority."

Selectmen voted Monday night to accept the pro-bono services of the Boston law firm in order to defend the zoning board.

Rep. Murray co-sponsors water-sewer state bills

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray has recently co-sponsored several pieces of legislation.

Rep. Murray worked on the recently-signed water-sewer legislation along with main sponsor, Rep. Robert Emmett Hayes of Whitman. The clean water bill will provide additional aid to cities and towns for water and sewer projects.

"I have been a co-sponsor of the clean water bill for two years, and am very pleased that this is now law. Each of the towns in my district should be able to benefit from this law," Representative Murray said.

Rep. Murray has repeatedly filed bills against drugs and pushers for the South Shore-based concerned Citizens Against Drugs. She has also co-sponsored many such bills.

The latest such bill which became law in July states that the license of a person convicted of a drug offense be suspended for a period up to five years. If the person is a minor without a license, the law would prohibit the attaining of a drivers license until the age of twenty-one.

Murray said, "I am very pleased that the Criminal Justice Committee and the members of the legislature have recognized the necessity of penalties for drug users. It is my hope that more legislation to rid society of this terrible scourge, will be established as law in the Commonwealth. Law enforcement officials should have teeth in our drug laws to help them bring drug users and more especially, drug pushers to a proper punishment.

Landfill fee discussion Aug. 22

The board of health will discuss all aspects of the landfill operation at its August 22 meeting.

At that time, the health board will consider an increase in residential disposal fees. Selectmen have encouraged town departments to raise service fees as an alternative source of revenue to offset the town's $104,000 budget deficit.

At its August 22 meeting, the health board will also discuss construction of the landfill transfer station, who will be hired for the hauling of trash,

Editorial

Begin with respect

It's August 1989. The filing deadline for the 1990 state election is eight months into the future. Already, though, extremists are lining up to the right and to the left.

A number of major occurrences have prepared the way for what is shaping up as an unpleasant election year.

– Governor Dukakis began 1989 by announcing he would not run again.

– The state's fiscal problems continued to multiply until they reached crisis proportions.

– The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority took on the guise of Frankstein's monster, waxing out of control and threatening to squeeze the last dollar out of communities unfortunate enough to come within its grasp.

– And the Supreme Court threw the abortion issue back into the laps of the state government.

Consequently, in a year when lawmakers should be striving to come up with solutions to fiscal woes that will inflict the least harm on the most vulnerable citizens and communities we're already on a collision course with the "Know It Alls" in our midst.

They know that Governor Dukakis is a bum. Therefore all Democratis are bums. And all politicians are bums.

They know that the folks we've elected to run state and community governments are on the make, in it for what they can grab, up to no good.

They know the bums at Town Hall and Beacon Hill only care about protecting their seats and their rear ends.

They know that anyone who decides to have an abortion is a murderer.

They know that anyone who has reservations about using abortion as a birth control device is opposed to women's rights.

They know that black is black and white is white and if you don't agree with them you're on a one way road to hell – and good riddance to you.

It's remarkable that anyone wants to run for office in an environment that brands you as a hack as soon as you walk through the door at Town Hall, the State House, Town Meeting.

In a democracy we rely on our fellow citizens to step forward and offer to represent us. Most of us don't want to do the work or take the heat ourselves.

If we're going to have effective government – government that represents all the people and not just those who can scream the loudest – we have to begin with respect.

We have to acknowledge that we live in a land where everyone has a right to an opinion – and usually has one.

We have to respect the fact that a lot of folks don't share our point of view, let along our fundamental beliefs.

That's where sanity comes in. We're going to need all we can get of it in 1990.

Minot's to be relighted on Sunday

lifesaver workers to rescue shipwreck survivors off the New England coast.

The Boy Scouts will be serving hot dogs, hamburgers and chowder.

The completion of the restoration project coincides with "American Lighthouse Bicentennial Year," marking the 200th anniversary of the first lighthouse built in America.

Minot's Light has been repaired and renovated with great care taken to duplicate the original work. Any parts that were in good condition have been retained for the renovated lighthouse. The Watch Room was rebuilt from granite blocks which were copied from the originals by stonecutter John Buratto of Milford New Hampshire. The original blocks are now located on Government Island where the Historical Society is in the process of building a replica of the lighthouse.

Gayle Electric Company of Whippany, N.J., contractors for the project, have reinstalled the original deck plates, railings, mullions or window frames, and the copper dome. Workers had to replicate materials such as the granite blocks and the curved bricks used to line the inner wall of the Watch Room.

Workers have also had to face the same dangers that confronted the original crews, which built the lighthouse from 1855 to 1860.

The lighthouse is only accessible by small boats during calm seas, and the only way to the light is a small exterior ladder. Workers even had to ride out a storm this past winter, while waves smashed against the tower as hign as the 90-foot parapet, upon which the men stood. They said that they could feel the lighthouse "shudder" under the waves' impact. But the lighthouse's miraculous design has enabled it to withstand storms for 130 years.

It is fitting that the dedication ceremonies will be held at Government Island. It is there that the lighthouse was assembled before being transported to Minot's Ledge. The Historical Society has set up an historical marker at the sight of the two circular granite pavements where the stones were first fitted together. The lighthouse's original bell is also at the sight, as is the brick shed which was used for kerosene storage for the lantern.

Ripley said the lighthouse is not just a wonder because it has endured rough seas for so long.

Minot's Light as it appeared last summer during its major renovation project.

"It's an amazingly beautiful structure," he said. "I visited it when I was about 16, but I couldn't appreciate it then. But it's really very, very beautiful."

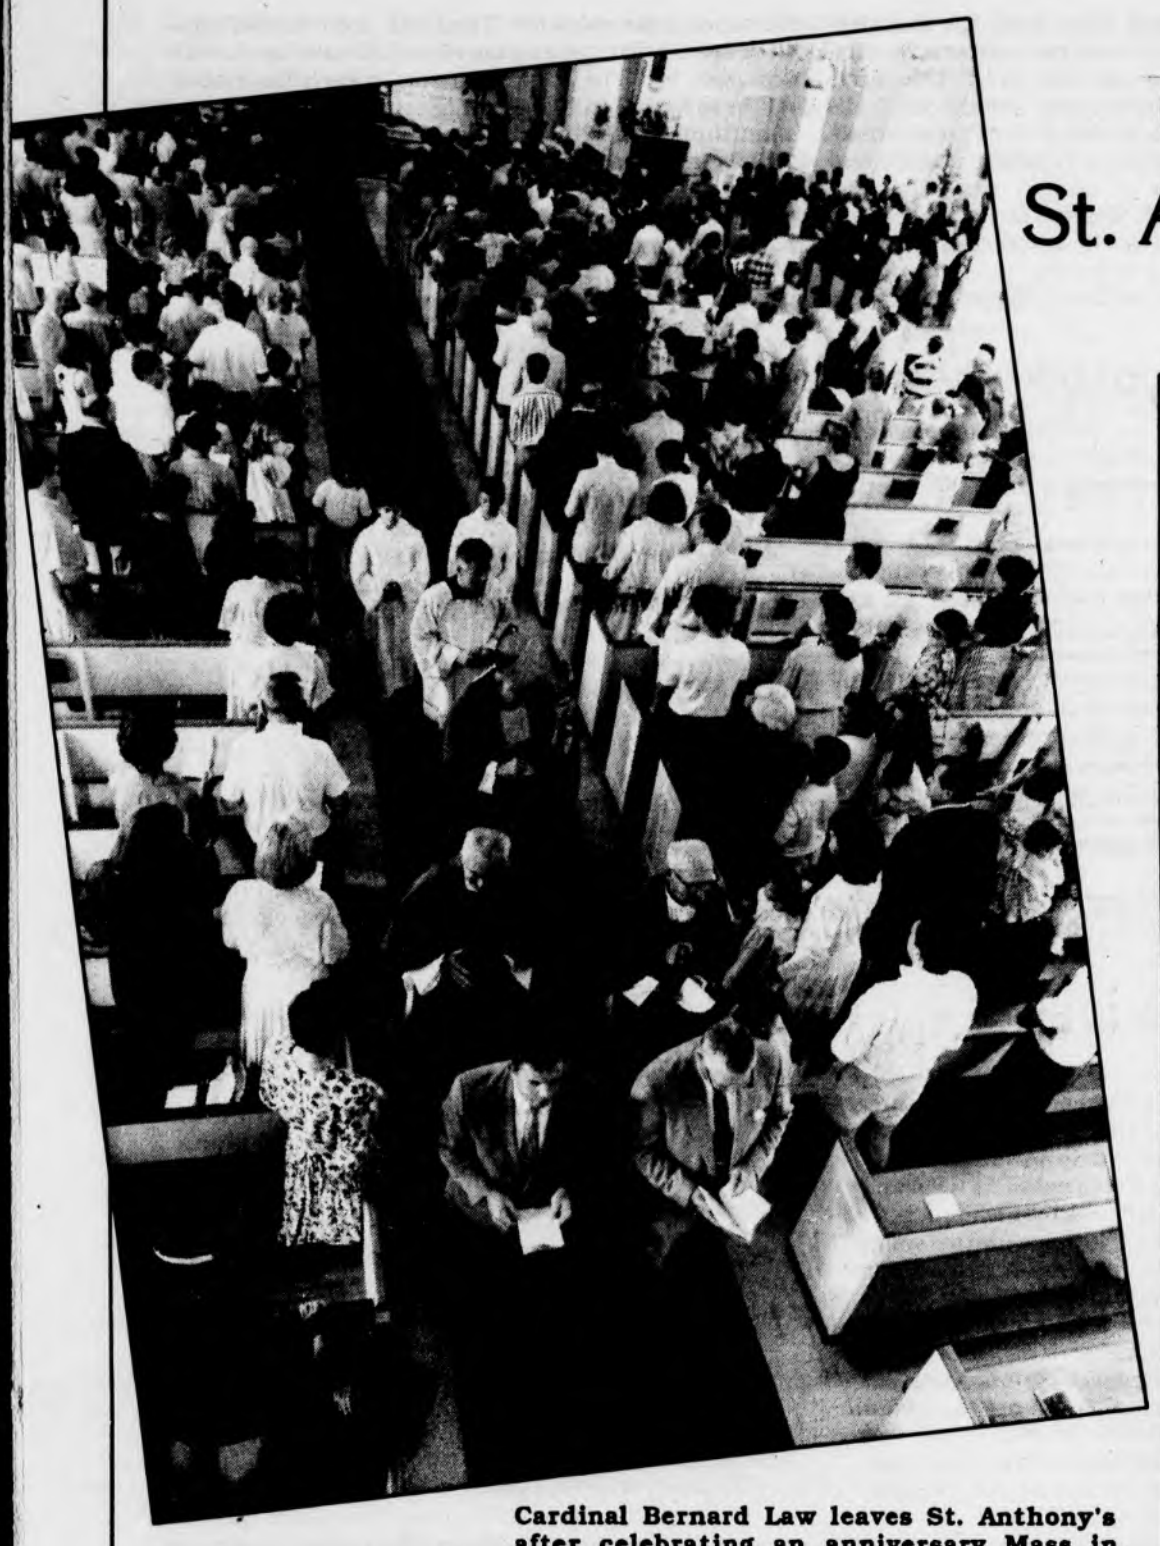
the bench."

If all 500 tickets are sold for the event, it should raise about $6,500 - all of which will be used to offset proposed cuts in the athletic department.



In the meantime, school committee members will decide at their August 31 meeting what the user fee will be for this year. They will base that number on what the Friends of Cohasset Schools Sports expects to accumulate during its yearlong fundraising campaign.

Tickets for the August 31 rock concert are available by calling the high school at 383-6101, Supt. Hart's office at 383-6111, or Clark Chatterton at the music circus at 383-9850.

"This is just the first event we've planned for the year," according to Kahn. "We eventually want to raise enough money to make every sport affordable for every student in Cohasset."

Gallery exhibit at art center

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset has scheduled a gallery exhibition: ROSSMAN/REBEK Aug. 24. The opening reception will be September 10 from 4 to 6 p.m.

Judy Rossman, a clay artist, began on the potter's wheel, but found it too inhibiting for the ideas and forms she wanted to express. Free form slab and coil construction excited her even though she continued to adhere to traditional vessel, bowl and platter forms. More recently, Rossman has altered these traditional shapes to create more movement within the form. Some of the slab surfaces are enhanced with drawn figurative images or pressed surface textures from nature. Combining the opposing elements of sculptural form and the surface fluidity of line, presents an increasing challenge.

Thomas Rebek, a watercolorist, interprets nature. He expresses impressions or general feelings of his landscapes while trying to describe an actual place the viewer can identify with. He tries to instill in his work the feelings of a constantly changing landscape. A particularly favorite subject is waterlilies. "It amazes me that such beautiful flowers should arise from the murkiest waters, even heavily polluted waters near sewage disposal areas. They suggest a majestic spirit that overcomes even the worst environmental conditions." His style of painting is derived from his love of great artists such as Georgia O'Keefe, Monet, Winslow Homer and Prendergast.

The exhibition runs through October 6. Gallery Hours: Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturday, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and Sunday, 1 to 4 p.m.

For more information call the South Shore Art Center at (617) 383-9548.

Project Turnabout bike-a-thon

Project Turnabout, Inc. will be holding their second annual Bike-A-Thon on Sept. 9 and 10, to raise funds to support their drug treatment program on the South Shore.

The 135 mile Bike-A-Thon will begin Sept. 9 when riders will travel 72 miles from Orange to Marlborough. The next day will be 63 miles from Marlborough to Hingham. Last year's ride was a 250 mile trip from Glens Falls, NY to Hingham and raised over $5,000.

Project Turnabout is a not-for-profit, tax deductible corporation located in Hingham. The money raised will be used to support current operations and to help rehabilitate the facility to enable Project Turnabout to expand its capacity and decrease its three-month waiting list.

Project Turnabout has been providing this service on the South Shore over 20 years.

Anyone who wishes to participate in the ride, collect pledges or make a contribution can call Martha Hawkins at (617) 871-1926.

Auditions for musicals

That New Theatre is holding open auditions for three musicals, "Follies," "The Rink," and "Chess," on Monday, August 14, and Tuesday, August 15, from 7 to 10 p.m., at St. Helen's Church, Route 53 (Washington St.), Norwell.

Auditioners interested in trying out for leading roles in these shows should bring sheet music for two songs — one ballad, and one upbeat number. A two-minute monologue is an optional extra, and resumes also will be accepted. Individuals interested in auditioning for minor roles or company roles in the chorus or dance sections should prepare one song and may submit an optional resume. Everyone who auditions will be asked to read from the "Follies" script.

"Follies" will be cast immediately, with rehearsals scheduled to begin August 17 for late September performances. Lead roles for "The Rink" and "Chess" also will be selected at the August 14 and 15 auditions, with rehearsals for "The Rink" starting in early December, and those for "Chess" beginning at the end of February.

Auditions for the two shows that will complete TNT's 1989-90 season — "Children of a Lesser God" and "Cinderella" — will be announced at a later date.

For more information, call director Donald Capen at 826-7983.

MBTA to increase boat fares

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA) Board of Directors recently voted to increase commuter boat fares to $4, and to develop plans to raise fees at subway and streetcar parking lots and, for the first time, T-owned commuter rail parking lots.

The increases are needed to avoid impending service cuts brought about by a $30 million budget shortfall.

MBTA General Manager Thomas P. Glynn said, "The T is working very closely with the representatives of the cities and towns of the MBTA Advisory Board to develop ways to increase revenues, and to tighten our belts. Through a series of aggressive management steps, the T has already reduced the gap from $30 million to $18 million, which will be requested in a supplemental budget. We are working to avoid the need to cut services."

Glynn noted that as part of its effort, the T is requesting a supplemental budget of $18.2 million. Of this amount, $6.4 million would be covered by additional monies from the recent fare increase, proposed higher parking fees, and new advertising revenue — lowering the deficit even further to $11.8 million.

Art center workshops for adults

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, will sponsor several workshops and courses for adults this fall.

These workshops include Painting and Printmaking, Design and Decorating and Fibers and Fabrics.

There are several workshop selections incorporating watercolor. Landscape Painting and Trip to the Fuller Museum, taught by Katherine Smit will meet Friday, September 29 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Join the group for a day of outdoor painting on the beautiful grounds of the museum, lunch in the cafe and view the exhibits.

Watercolor and Pastel also taught by Katherine Smit will meet Fridays October 13 and 20 from 9 a.m. to noon. Learn to work with watercolor and pastel together to create unique effects juxtaposing wet and dry. Watercolor, Monotype and Collage taught by Judy Hochberg will meet Tuesday, November 14 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. By painting on acetate and mixing watercolor paints with waterbased inks, students can bring the spontaneity of "en plein air" work to printmaking.

For those who wish to begin at the beginning of portraiture, try Portrait Basics taught by Harriet Zabusky Zand meeting Wednesday-Friday, November 15 to 17 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Learn basic portrait techniques and composition.

Other workshops include: Interior Decorator's Color Theory taught by Jane Viator, meeting Saturday, October 21 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Cherokee Style Storage Basket– taught by Dianne Stanton, meeting Friday, November 3 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Fabric Painting and Decorating taught by Ann Murphy Thursdays, November 9 and 16 from 7 to 9:30; and Papermaking taught by Brenton Welsh meeting Saturday, November 18 from 9:30 to 3:30 p.m.

Italic Calligraphy taught by Norma McKenzie will meet Thursdays from 1 to 3 p.m. beginning September 21. Students will learn both upper and lower cases. Old Masters Painting taught by Brenton Welsh will meet Mondays from 12:30 to 3 p.m. beginning September 18. Explore the techniques and methods of Rembrandt, Vermeer, Raphael and other old masters and experience this method of painting.

Beginning Watercolor taught by Elaine Wentworth will meet Wednesdays from 7 to 10 p.m. beginning September 20. Wentworth will demonstrate basic skills and lead students through series of exercises. Intermediate and Advanced Watercolor taught by Murray Wentworth will meet Tuesdays from 7 to 10 p.m. beginning September 19. Value relationships, paper surfaces and applied textures, color harmonies, spatial depth and composition are emphasized. Fanciful & Functional Forms in White Clay taught by Syma will meet Mondays from 7 to 10 p.m. beginning October 16. Students will mix traditional techniques with playful variations to create forms in white stoneware. Raku, an ancient clay firing process, taught by Judy Rossman will meet Saturdays from 12 to 3 p.m. beginning October 21. Students will use handbuilding and wheel techniques to create pieces. Rounding out the photography spectrum of the course schedule, Jim Smalley will teach Darkroom and Intermediate Photography Tuesdays from 7:30 - 9:30 beginning September 19. Improve picture taking techniques that allow the photographer more control in the photo process by learning intermediate photographic skills and basic black & white darkroom procedure.

Senior center news . . .

HEALTH CARE NEWS: Most seniors by now are familiar with the major elements of the newMecare Catastrophic Coverage Act.

However, many are not aware that one of its less heralded provisions could help save low-income seniors hundreds of dollars a year in medical costs.

The act directed Medicaid—a federal program administered by states for health care of the indigent—to start paying certain Medicare-related expenses for many low-income beneficiaries.

Although this state relief has been available since Jan. 1, very few seniors have yet been informed of it.

Until now, poorer Medicare beneficiaries have had to carry the full brunt of Medicare Part B premiums.

Part B is optional coverage purchased by most seniors, for out-patient medical care. It supplements Part A hospital insurance, for which all seniors who qualify for Social Security are eligible.

The new law requires that Medicaid pay Part B premiums ($31.90 a month) and co-payments (the 20% of approved medical charges which beneficiaries pay).

In legislative jargon, states will be required to "buyin" this group of enrollees.

The goal is to better cover seniors who are poor—but not poor enough to otherwise qualify for Medicaid–by taking some of the burden off current Part B beneficiaries and encourage many new seniors to participate.

Most importantly, for anyone who qualifies, these benefits are retroactive to Jan. 1.

To be eligible for this state assistance, beneficiaries: (1) must qualify for Medicare A and B. (2) may not have net income exceeding the federal poverty limit of $5,980 and assets exceeding $4,000 for individuals excluding a principal residence.

As many as 20,000 Massachusetts residents may be eligible.

The state Department of Public Welfare is trying to identify those who qualify, while the federal Health Care Financing Administration plans to mail 14 million notices nationwide, including 395,000 to potential beneficiaries in Massachusetts.

The Commonwealth is well ahead of most states in implementing the new law. Nevertheless, it could be as late as August until seniors are notified.

Seniors who believe they could benefit under the new law may apply now for this assistance, even if they have not yet received notice from state or federal authorities. For details, senior citizens may call any local welfare office.

This information was provided in the weekly reported to the people by U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds.

TRAVEL INFORMATION

Join the Cohasset Day-Trippers. Do you enjoy traveling? Do you enjoy eating out? Do you enjoy planning for others? Well, if you do—we are looking for just the right person to join in the new club, "Day Trippers of Cohasset." Our group will meet at the Council office to discuss up-coming trips, how to plan a fun trip and cost effective. If you think this is something you would be interested in, call Kathy at 383-9112. Bring all your good ideas!

KEEP THIS DATE OPEN—SEPTEMBER 30

Again this year the Council on Aging will host a table at the Community Center Flea Market on the Commons. We will be looking for crafts, baked goods, plants, and attic treasures that we can sell at our table. Also, we will need volunteers that day. Please call the Council office at 383-9112 if you can help.

NEW TRANSPORTATION FOR SENIORS-"THE RIDE"

The "RIDE" has officially come to Cohasset starting July 1. The MBTA's paratransit services, The Ride, provides advance notice, door-to-door transportation to those who, due to physical or mental handicaps, and unable to use general public forms of transportation can now qualify for the ride. Wheelchair lift-equipped vans make it possible for both semi-ambulatory persons and those using wheelchairs to take advantage of this transportation service. As a customer of The Ride, you will travel with other passengers on this special equipped van that operates door-to-door within the MBTA service area. All trips must originate and terminate within the service area with the exception of transfers. There is no restriction on the type of trips you can take.

Before requesting a ride, passengers must be accepted and registered for the service and have pre-purchased tickets, available from the Office for Transportation Access ($6.00, $12.00 or $24.00 booklets). Each booklet contains tickets worth $.75 each, one-way fare for the trip and $.75 return. More detail on use of the service will be provided upon completion of the registration form. You must have a physical or mental disability which prevents you from using general public transportation. For example, extreme difficulty or inability to: walk, see, ride an MBTA bus, use stairs, escalators, or stand in moving vehicles. You must be a resident of Cohasset. Your disability must be lasting more than six months.

You may obtain applications and assistance by calling the Council on Aging office and asking for our Out-Reach worker, Ms. Susan Connolly. Susan is willing to help you fill out the form. Anyone who was approved for the MAP Program should fill this form out now so they can continue to receive a "Ride." For all transportation questions, please call the Council on Aging, we are here to help!!

NEW THIS FALL - LUNCHEON AT THE KENNEDY LIBRARY

For all interested seniors: This fall the Kennedy Library will be offering a series of Luncheon Seminars for Senior Citizens. There will be prominent speakers from Washington, D.C. and elsewhere who will discuss many contemporary political issues in forums that will be both lively and informative. There will be ample time for questions and comments from the speakers. Luncheons will be held in September and October 18, 24, and 31. If you would be interested in going to the luncheon seminars, please give us a call at 383-9112. We will add your name to the growing list.

ELDERHOSTEL ENTICES OLDER LEARNERS

Inquisitive of mind, adventuresome in spirit—these are the qualities of Elderhostelers. The one qualification to join this lively group is that a person must have achieved age 60.

Elderhostel celebrates the joy of learning and the excitement of meeting new friends. Elderhostel programs are offered on college and university campuses as well as at camps and conference and retreat centers. These are week-long educational adventures and are very low in cost.

There have been many summer programs in Massachusetts that begin on Sunday afternoons and end on the following Saturday morning. Elderhostelers live in campus residents halls and dine in campus cafeterias.

To receive the full catalogue of Elderhostel programs nationwide, write to; Elderhostel Programs, 80 Boylston St., Suite 400, Boston, MA 02116. Catalogues are immediately available for review at your local public libraries.

Warrant is opened

The Board of Selectmen opened the warrant for a special town meeting to be held Tuesday, October 10, at 7:30 p.m.

The warrant will close at 4:30 p.m. Monday, August 21. No space will be reserved for an article unless it is submitted by that date.

Please submit articles in triplicate, double-spaced, one to a page, with signature of the Board chairman or Department head.

Except for articles submitted by the petition of 100 registered voters, the placement of any article on the Special Town Meeting warrant is at the discretion of selectmen.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 88E0114-P1

To Denise Yess of Cohasset in the County of Norfolk, Norfolk County Trust Co., and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Jeanne Mahon of Chula Vista in the State of California representing that she holds as joint tenant an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Cohasset in said County and briefly described as follows:

SOUTHWESTERLY by Ledgewood Drive, one hundred twenty-five (125) feet;

NORTHWESTERLY by lot numbered 28, shown on the plan hereinafter referred to, one hundred sixty (160) feet;

NORTHEASTERLY by lot numbered 29, shown on said plan, one hundred twenty-five (125) feet; and

SOUTHEASTERLY by lot numbered 26, shown on said plan, one hundred and sixty (160) feet.

Said parcel is shown as lot numbered 27 on a plan drawn by Edwin A. Young, Surveyor, dated March 31, 1962, June 21, 1965, and March 9, 1967 as modified and approved by the Land Court, filed in the Land Registration Office as No. 31599A, a copy of a portion of which is filed in Norfolk Registry District with Certificate No. 84452, Sheet 3, Book 423.

There is appurtenant to the above described land the right to use said Ledgewood Drive and Brewster Road shown on said plan, to and from Chief Justice Cushing Highway, shown on said plan, in common with all those lawfully entitled thereto.

So much of the above described land as lies within the limits of said Ledgewood Drive is subject to the rights of all those lawfully entitled thereto, in and over the same.

The above described land is subject to the restrictions set forth in an Indenture of Restrictions and Protective Covenants made by Ledgewood Estates, Inc., dated March 18, 1960, duly recorded in Book 3803, Page 348.

The above described land is subject also to a Covenant between Ledgewood Estate, Inc., and the Planning Board of the Town of Cohasset, dated June 21, 1961, duly recorded in Book 3938, Page 491.

The above described land is subject also to an Agreement made by Ledgewood Estates, Inc., with the Planning Board of the Town of Cohasset, dated June 21, 1961 duly recorded in Book 3948, Page 139.

The above described land is subject to an Agreement made by Ledgewood Estates, Inc., with the Planning Board of the Town of Cohasset, dated December 20, 1961, duly recorded in Book 3956, Page 423.

The above described land is subject to the easements set forth in a grant made by Ledgewood Estates, Inc., to Brockton Edison Company and New England Telephone setting forth that she desires that all of said land may be sold at private sale for not less than two hundred and fifty thousand dollars and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the sixth day of September 1989, the return day of this citation.

Witness, ROBERT M. FORD, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this twenty-seventh day of July 1989.

PUBLIC HEARING NOTICE

Commuter Boat Fares
Change in Hearing Time

As previously announced on August 7, 1989, Boston Harbor Commuter Service, Massachusetts Bay Lines, Atlantic Cruises, and the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority will hold public hearings on Wednesday, September 6 and Thursday, September 7 to obtain public comments on a proposal to increase the full adult cash fare on the commuter boat to $4.00 for one way travel effective October 23, 1989.

The time for the hearing on Wednesday, September 6 has been changed to 4:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. in order to make it easier for the current boat riders to attend. The hearing will still be held at the Hingham Town Office Building, Meeting Room B, 7 East Street. The hearing scheduled for Thursday, September 7 will be held at South Station, 5th floor, Conference Rooms 1 and 2, from 3:00 p.m. to 6:00 p.m. as previously announced.

Written comments will be accepted through September 7, 1989 and may be mailed to:

Cohasset Savings reports quarterly earnings

Cohasset Savings Bank reported net income of $76,000 or $.08 per share for the quarter ended June 30, 1989. This compares with $168,000 or $.17 per share reported for the second quarter of 1988.

For the six months ended June 30, 1989, net income was $207,000 or $.21 per share, compared with $324,000 or 32 cents per share for the comparable period of 1988.

"Although total interest and dividend income for both the second quarter and year to date have increased, earnings have been affected by the higher interest paid on a large volume of term deposits received in the earlier months of this year," President Donald Bates, said.

"Net Interest Income for the second quarter declined by $80,000 or 13.3 percent from the $603,000 reported for the first quarter of 1989. However, we are confident that currently declining interest rates will work to the Bank's benefit when many of these deposits mature later this year."

Comparison of the 1989 second quarter with the 1988 second quarter was also adversely affected by the presence of $89,000 non-recurring gains on sales of securities in the 1988 quarter.
